

FARM STATE SENATORS ORGANIZE BLOC TO DEFEAT ALL INDUSTRIAL INCREASES IN NEW TARIFF BILL

Ex-Governor Harris Dies at Tennessee Home

FUNERAL SERVICES WILL TAKE PLACE IN MACON MONDAY

Last Rites Will Be Conducted at 4 O'Clock From Mulberry Street Methodist Church.

SERVED AS GEORGIA GOVERNOR 2 YEARS

Former Executive, Founder of Georgia Tech, Chairman of Board Since Establishment.

Hampton, Tenn., September 21.—(P)—Former Governor Nathaniel Edwin Harris, of Georgia, died at his summer home here at 8:42 o'clock tonight after a lingering illness. He was 84 years of age.

The death of the aged founder of Georgia Tech and president of the university's board of trustees was announced by his son, Walter Harris. For several days he had been at the point of death, and late today physicians announced he had lost consciousness.

Walter Harris said the body, accompanied by relatives who were at the bedside at the time of death, would leave Hampton at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow for Macon, Ga., where the party expected to arrive at 11:40 p. m.

Burial will take place at 4 p. m. Monday, with services at the Mulberry Street Methodist church of Macon.

A man who was forced to leave the hills of his native east Tennessee because of prejudice against his service in the army of the Confederacy, Nathaniel Edwin Harris, in his adopted state of Georgia, attained the highest office in the gift of its people—that of governor.

Active from his young manhood in politics, Mr. Harris was elected to the state legislature where he began his fight for education and the Georgia School of Technology, which today stands as a monument to his vision.

It was while a member of the house of representatives from Bibb county in 1882 that Mr. Harris first introduced a resolution for the founding of Georgia Tech. That resolution met defeat, but, undaunted, the young representative continued his fight for the school and in 1885 the measure passed the legislature and was signed by Governor McDaniel.

Mr. Harris was appointed as a member of the commission to construct the school and was then named chairman. He subsequently was appointed chairman of the board of trustees, which post he held until his death. From the first commencement until 1929 Mr. Harris was a prominent figure at commencement exercises of Georgia Tech, but that year, for the first time, he was absent. He was also an ex-officio member of the board of trustees of the University of Georgia and a trustee of Vanderbilt university and Wesleyan college.

He was elected governor in 1914, at which time W. J. Harris, Dr. L. G. Hardman and J. Randolph Anderson

HOWELL ATTACKS HOOVER IN SENATE

Nebraskan Declares President Has the Power But Not the Will To Dry Up Capital.

Washington, September 21.—(P)—Prohibition forced its way into the tariff discussion in the senate today, Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, asserting that the president could enforce the dry laws in Washington if he insisted upon it.

This was the first discussion of prohibition since the senate reconvened after the summer recess. Howell, a dry, diverted only briefly from his tariff bill debate and failed to provoke any remarks on the subject from other senators present.

"If the president insisted upon prohibition enforcement in the District of Columbia," the Nebraskan said, "officials charged with enforcement would do their job." All the president would have to do, Howell asserted, would be to call in the capital officials and threaten them with employing the secret service to gather information of liquor violators.

"The president could tell these officials," Howell shouted, "that if the secret service gets the violators before you do, you are out."

Senator Howell said there is no doubt that embassies in Washington can legally have liquor on their premises but he contended that liquor could not be shipped legally to these establishments. The minute a ship bearing liquor passes the 12-mile limit, the senator asserted, a violation has been committed.

"The reason this thing isn't stopped," Howell said, "is because there isn't the will to see it stopped."

U. S. SEIZES RUM ON BRITISH SHIP

Cargo Valued at $50,000 Taken by Coast Guard Patrol Off Connecticut Coast.

New London, Conn., September 21.—(P)—The British auxiliary schooner Vines was seized with a cargo of liquor of an estimated value of $50,000 off Montauk Point shortly after last midnight. The seizure was made by the coast guard patrol boat CG-290 in command of Boatswain A. C. Cornell, of this city.

Seven men were aboard the seized vessel.

The patrol boat brought the schooner to the coast guard base here and held the crew under heavy guard pending arrival of the customs authorities.

Deputy collector Jeremiah Dillon, of the customs service, decided that the boat was seized within New York jurisdiction and that it would probably have to be taken to New York.

The cargo of alleged contraband was represented by about 1,000 cases of assorted liquors.

BY BEN COOPER.

Dahlonega, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—Lured to Lumpkin county by the ever present chance of striking "pay dirt," prospectors of two California mining companies are scouting the hillsides near Dahlonega with their hammers and acid bottles. One of the companies is about ready to begin mining operations, and both firms have taken options on considerable acreage.

Dr. S. W. McCallie, state geologist, was a visitor here several days ago, and expressed the opinion that gold would be found in sufficient quantities to make its mining profitable. Dr. McCallie inspected the gold mines near Dahlonega, and talked with a number of the prospectors.

Work abandoned last year by the Canadian miners has been taken over by one of the California firms, and it is expected that actual mining of gold will begin within a few weeks. Possibilities of a third company entering the field are seen in wholesale purchases of Lumpkin land by a Milwaukee man, though he has refused to confirm reports that he is after gold.

A great deal of work toward mining pay ore was accomplished in an old shaft by an independent company a year or so ago, but this firm was forced to give up its activities through lack of capital. The company found enough gold to maintain the work for a considerable period of time, however.

Through new and improved processes of extracting gold from the sulphates, ore can be mined profitably for as low a yield as four or five dollars a ton, in large quantities, according to Dr. McCallie. Most of the

GROUP TO CONFER ON MERGER PLANS SOUGHT IN COUNTY

Atlanta Committee Will Ask Fulton Education Board This Week To Appoint Special Body.

The Fulton county board of education will be asked, probably this week, to appoint a conference committee to confer with a special committee representing the Atlanta board of education concerning a metropolitan consolidated school district. It was announced Saturday by W. W. Gaines, chairman of the Atlanta committee, who at the same time issued a formal statement setting out that an investigation of such a merger program already has been begun by his committee.

The report of the committee which bore the joint signatures of John T. Hancock, commissioner from the eighth ward and chairman of the current expenditures committee of the Atlanta board of education, and Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, commissioner from the seventh, and president of the board, pointed out that several leading educators have been communicated with and that a thorough study will be made with a view of establishing a district to include Greater Atlanta, established by an act of the Georgia assembly.

Educators interviewed.

It was understood that Dr. M. I. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; Dr. Plato Durham, of Emory university, and other educators have been interviewed by the committee for the purpose of establishing a foundation which to construct its recommendations.

Mr. Gaines declared Saturday night that the conference would be extended to include that portion of Atlanta proper which lies in DeKalb county and that if it is agreeable to other independent systems in newly-created Greater Atlanta, that the scope of the conference may be broadened to include all that territory which will lie in those areas.

Seven men were interviewed by the Atlanta committee which will not seek to incorporate any system without first consulting with the new limits, Mr. Gaines declared.

Members of the Fulton county board of education have indicated that they would be glad to hear of a conference committee, if the Atlanta board or its officials request such a procedure.

Text of Report.

Text of the report of the Atlanta committee as released by Mr. Gaines follows:

At a meeting of the Atlanta board of education held on September 10, last, the undersigned committee was appointed to endeavor to work out a plan for a unified school district for Greater Atlanta that would be befitting a metropolitan district of Atlanta's standing and importance, and which would prove satisfactory to all of the people concerned. The committee has the honor to submit the following report:

The high cost of living since the World War has halted mining operations at Dahlonega, Dr. McCallie said, "because the World War, companies took out as much as $40,000 to $50,000 a year from Lumpkin county. Then, after the war, wages became higher and the value of the gold dollar dropped. However, with improved methods and economy of operation, mining can still be made to pay at Dahlonega."

More than $20,000,000 in gold has been mined in Georgia since the first discovery of gold here, the bulk of this amount coming out of the Dahlonega section, Dr. McCallie said. The federal government established a mint at Dahlonega to turn the gold into coin, and the remains of the old mint building today form a part of the state agricultural school there.

The Dahlonega mine shafts rarely went more than 100 feet below the surface, as most of the gold was found close to the surface. In other sections the mines were sunk deeper, as in Cherokee county, where there are shafts 1,000 feet deep.

125 PEN INMATES WILL BE SHIPPED TO LEAVENWORTH

Special Train To Carry Party Tuesday—Removal To Relieve Overcrowding.

Partial relief of congestion at the Atlanta Federal prison will be begun Tuesday when 125 inmates will be shipped to the new prison established at Leavenworth as the first contingent of 600 who eventually will be removed, it was learned Saturday.

This is the largest single exodus of prisoners ever to leave Atlanta and they will go by special train under a special guard, according to reports.

Virtually all of those who are to be transferred are violators of the Harrison narcotic laws, this type of prisoner composing the major portion of the pen's population.

A corps of 25 guards will be employed in the transfer, in addition to those now available to aid in the relief measures.

The removal is necessitated by overcrowded conditions existing at the Atlanta pen, where more than 3,800 prisoners are being kept in quarters originally built to house 1,800. The dining room is forced to serve six meals each day and it has been necessary to enlarge the kitchen facilities to care for the overload.

New Quarters Completed.

New quarters for federal prisoners at Leavenworth have just been completed. This will permit alleviation of conditions here, which are of the greatest seriousness and without parallel in federal penal history.

The removal will take place within the next few days, it was said Saturday.

Among the prisoners going to Leavenworth will be many desperate and notorious characters, it was said, as many long-term convicts will be sent to the Kansas penitentiary.

The additional guards needed for the transfer are being put out at the Atlanta penitentiary and other guards are being shifted in preparation for the removal. Some of the guards probably will remain at Leavenworth.

U. S. ARMY BARRACKS IN FEDERAL PEN SYSTEM.

New York, September 21.—(P)—Transfer of the army disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth to the federal prison system was accomplished today when 200 convicts were sent to the barracks from the Leavenworth Federal penitentiary.

The army prison was taken over by the department of justice to relieve crowded conditions in the penitentiary. It was announced that 125 prisoners are to be transferred here from the Atlanta Federal penitentiary.

FEDERAL PENS CROWDED, PRISON STATISTICS SHOW.

New York, September 21.—(P)—A survey of prisons, federal and state, in the United States shows a prison population as of January 1, 1929, of 124,738, the Handbook of American Prisons, shortly to be issued by the National Society of Penal Institution, will say.

These prisoners, The Handbook will say, are crowded into quarters in many cases, notably that of the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., which were intended to handle only half of their present population.

This overcrowding, Paul W. Garrett, editor of The Handbook, says, has had a marked effect on the health of the prisoners, has meant that many of them are idle most of the time through lack of industrial quarters in which to work and is a cause of unrest.

Claiming treble damages under the anti-trust act in the suit which was based on the charge that Duke had been influenced by an alleged aluminum trust to withdraw his assistance in starting the new company, Haskell was awarded a judgment for $8,000, but this was set aside by the circuit court of appeals.

Haskell asked the supreme court to review the case, but last spring it refused. He filed a petition for a rehearing, asserting that the court had not given his case proper consideration.

Local Girls, Hunting Thrills, Land in Miami, Fla., Bastile

TRIO FOUND LIVING ON ABANDONED YACHT

EVELYN LAWLER.

Three Atlanta girls who sought adventure, and ran away from home in search of it, have been located by police in Miami and their venturesome days are over for the present.

One of the three is Evelyn Lawler, the fifteen-year-old Commercial High school girl, whose disappearance was reported to The Constitution Friday by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Lawler, of 430 Orange street. The girl vanished more than a week ago on her way home from school.

The other two girls are Alma Hammond, 14, a resident of Hapeville, who attend the Formwalt elementary school, and Florence Jones, 16, of Brotherton school.

The three girls, according to reports from Miami, were living together on a decommissioned yacht, which was tied up in the harbor, when their search for fortune and a career was halted by the police.

That search for adventure has its drawbacks has been impressed upon the three girls by their detention by the police and the necessity of appearing before a judge.

Florence Jones was brought before a Miami court Saturday and ordered returned to Atlanta. Mrs. Ira Bell Phillips, her mother, will go to Miami to bring her home. The other two girls will be brought before the court Monday and ordered returned to this city.

NEW GIRLS' HIGH SITE IS PROPOSED

Removal of the Girls' High school from its present site at the old city stockade to another more conveniently located plot will be asked by Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, of the seventh ward, at the next regular meeting of city council October 7, it was announced Saturday.

Mr. Dobbs will ask council to approve a resolution requesting the change in location and will ask that it be sent to the Atlanta board of education, shortly to be issued by the federal penitentiary.

Although selection of a new site would lie entirely in the province and will of the board, Mr. Dobbs has suggested that the site of the present city auditorium at Gilmer and Courtland streets, would be more centrally located.

The present plant could be utilized for a junior high school and an elementary institution, Mr. Dobbs pointed out.

"Transportation facilities to the Girls' High school are very poor," Alderman Dobbs said Saturday in discussing his plan, "and the building is far removed from the homes of a large proportion of its students. The school, serving as it does the girls of every part of Atlanta, should be centrally located, with residents of the northern and western parts of the city given equal consideration with those of the southeastern sections."

"Under present conditions, girls attending the school must rise at unreasonably early hours and make uncomfortable trips to an out-of-the-way part of the city to attend their classes. They are put to the discomfort of a long journey and in many cases the expense of a bus trip, where school fares are not granted, or else their parents must take them to school in automobiles."

"Citizens of Atlanta will be enthusiastic, I am sure, in their support of a re-location and will back the board of education and the city government generally in any action taken to raise the necessary funds for a new plant."

BORAH WILL LEAD GROUP IN BATTLE ON SENATE FLOOR

Ten Pledge Selves To Restrict Revision To Products of Farm; Total Strength 14.

BALANCE OF POWER IS VESTED IN BLOC

Group Will Aid Democrats To Kill Flexible Clause Granting Power of Raise to Hoover.

Washington, September 21.—(P)—Coinciding with a decision by the senate today to meet an hour earlier on Monday to speed action on the tariff bill, a group of 12 western republicans perfected an organization aimed to eliminate the proposed industrial rate increases and to confine the revision to agricultural products.

Headed by Senator Borah, of Idaho, the independent group assessed its strength at 14, a number which it feels will give the organization the balance of power as between the democrats and republican regulars in the tariff controversy.

The group also is expected to stand as a unit against the flexible provisions granting the president power to raise or lower customs duties. These provisions are liberalized in the pending bill. While the finance committee republicans have decided to eliminate the proposed amendment and virtually to restore existing law, many senators favor complete repeal of the clause with congress given exclusive power to change rates.

Those attending today's independent gathering were Senators Borah, Norris, Howell, McMaster, LaFollette, Blaine, Nye, Frazier, Brookhart, Culligan, Schall and Pine. It was the first time since the controversy of New Mexico and Pine, of Oklahoma, had entered the group's meetings.

The votes of Senators Shipstead, farmer-laborer, Minnesota, and Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, are counted on by the farm bloc.

Developments in the senate touching the tariff have been the subject of the official assertion today that the executive still adhered to the tariff idealism expressed in his message to the senate, which proposed a limited revision confined primarily to agriculture, but extending also to suffering manufacturing industries.

The request that the senate convene at 11 o'clock Monday instead of noon was presented by Senator Watson, New Orleans, republican leader, who said it applied only to that day. A similar motion would have to be approved, he said, if the longer day were to become permanent.

Democrats and republican independents, while not objecting to the request, served notice that they would not approve of holding the senate in session at that hour.

Former Cabinet Member Cites Assassination of Editors, Secret Imprisonment and Tyranny.

New York, September 21.—(P)—Dr. Rafael Irujo, former governor of the Cuban province of Matanzas and secretary of war and navy in the Machado administration in Cuba, issued a statement today controverting the assertion of Havana editors that there is freedom of the press in Cuba. His communication follows:

"In response to a statement concerning Cuban affairs signed by three editors of Cuban dailies which you circulated I beg to say there has been no freedom of the press during the entire Machado administration. Four chief editors of Cuban papers have been assassinated during that period under mysterious circumstances after campaigns unfavorable to the government. These were: Major Armando Andueza, director of El Dia; Bartholome Sagara, director of La Voz del Maestro; Julio Antonio Melia, director of Cuba Libre, and Captain Aguiar, director of La Campana."

"Only two weeks ago La Semana, a Cuban weekly, was suppressed and three of its reporters deported, while the chief editor, Sergio Carbo, was compelled to flee by aeroplane to the United States. Numerous other newspapers have been violently suppressed, including El Nacional, Union Nacionalista, El Cubano Libre, La Prensa and others."

"As to political conditions in Cuba, no one can deny that Machado re-elected himself without opposition, that no election has been held for congressmen now holding office, and that hundreds of citizens have been murdered, while widespread terrorism prevails. The reports of the American Federation of Labor and Foreign Policy Association are definitely conclusive on these points."

Temporary Compromise Ends British-French Arms Debate But Resumption Seems Likely

English Withdraw Proposal To Limit Arms But Merits of Arguments Remain Unsettled

Geneva, September 21.—(AP)—After three days of hot debate which stirred the assembly of the League of Nations, Great Britain and France today adopted a conciliatory manner in their dispute over the scope of the movement for general disarmament.

The two powers accepted a compromise which will leave the merits of their conflicting positions on the limitation of military forces to be determined later.

The settlement leaves England free to reopen the question of restricting the material and personnel for land warfare. Lord Cecil, spokesman for the empire, had said this restriction was essential to the ultimate success of the disarmament crusade.

France, by the terms of the compromise offered by M. Politis, of Greece, gained her points that the assembly should not at this stage of the naval discussions agitate the question of general disarmament nor give fresh instructions to the preparatory disarmament committee.

Proposal Withdrawn.
Lord Cecil withdrew the British proposal, for which in any case a majority in the disarmament committee was doubtful. He announced, however, that his government at every opportunity would urge the limitation of land forces by general conferences.

Norway's proposal at the opening of the present assembly session for establishing an intimate connection between the proposed international reparations bank and the League of Nations met formidable opposition in the committee on technical organizations.

Allied with Norway in this movement were Denmark, Poland and Austria, who argued that the purpose of the league in the economic field is identical with the purpose of the bank and that other countries have a deep interest in the bank's program, as well as those who receive reparations.

Bank Opposed.
But France, Great Britain and Belgium, the countries chiefly concerned with reparations, and Japan declared themselves against the Norwegian scheme.

Louis Loucheur, French cabinet minister and spokesman for the group on this question, disclosed the fact that he had the United States in mind. He warned delegates that by inopportune intervention they might frighten away those who had decided to support the creation of the bank, "including a great country not represented here which is deeply interested."

Final action by the committee was delayed until Monday.

The Chinese proposal for examining the possibility of revising "inapplicable treaties" after occupying several sittings of a subcommittee, still was before that body tonight.

The assembly held plenary session this afternoon and tonight in order to push forward routine business so as to reach final adjournment by Wednesday night.

The delegates adopted committee reports on Armenian refugees, on intellectual cooperation and on the work of the league's health organization.

REWARD IS OFFERED FOR SLAYER'S CAPTURE

Charlotte, N. C., September 21.—(AP)—A reward of $1,000 for "information leading to arrest and conviction of the person who shot and killed Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, of Bessemer City."

Saturday afternoon a week ago and "additional rewards of $250 each for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any persons participating in the conspiracy to murder Mrs. Wiggins" were announced here tonight by Roger Baldwin, of New York, director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Mrs. Wiggins was killed as she and 22 other union members were en route to a union speaking at South Gastonia.

In a statement Mr. Baldwin said: "We had hoped that the state of North Carolina, whose duty it is to bring Mrs. Wiggins' assailant to justice, would take vigorous steps to indict those guilty of her murder. So far the state has merely held seven persons on a charge of manslaughter. The man who shot her has not been identified and no apparent effort is being made to locate him."

Judicial disposition of the textile labor disorder cases was further delayed today with the postponement of the resumption of the inquest into the mob killing of Mrs. Wiggins.

Solicitor John G. Carpenter at first said that he would not be prepared to proceed with the investigation for a week, but later decided to reopen the inquest on Wednesday. The solicitor was hopeful of presenting "considerable" new evidence to Coroner J. F. Wallace and his jury.

According to Liston M. Oak, publicity director here for the international labor defense, the nationwide meetings planned for today and tomorrow as "mass protests" against the shooting of Mrs. Wiggins were being confined to the larger cities of the country.

Solicitor Carpenter and former Congressman A. L. Bulwinkle and Clyde R. Hoy, all of counsel for the prosecution of 16 strikers and strike leaders for the murder of Gastonia Police Chief O. F. Aderholt, expressed little concern over a purported plot by "New York city radicals" for their assassination. The plot was described in a letter to Edwin R. Bridges, former radon commissioner, from a man who was paroled from prison during his administration.

ESCAPED STRIKER RETURNS TO JAIL

Marion, N. C., September 21.—(AP)—J. Hugh Hall surrendered to officers here today after his escape from jail yesterday had caused a mistrial to be declared in the hearing of charges of inciting a rebellion and insurrection against the state on which he was indicted with Alfred Hoffman, southern representative of the United Textile Workers, and four others.

Hall telephoned to the sheriff's office from a nearby village and asked that a deputy be sent to return him to prison.

Lindbergh Arrives Ahead of Time in Porto Rica On Tour of Tropics To Establish New Line

BY T. R. GILL,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

San Juan, Porto Rico, September 21.—(AP)—By Pan-American Radio to Miami.—Bettering his schedule by more than half an hour for the second time today, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh completed the second day of his 7,000-mile flight to extend the United States mail to Dutch Guiana.

When he landed here at 3:31 o'clock this afternoon.

Leaving Santo Domingo at 1:01 p. m., the flying colonel made the 250 air miles to San Juan in 2 hours 27 minutes, just 33 minutes under schedule. On his morning flight from Santiago de Cuba to Port au Prince, Colonel Lindbergh had bettered the time for the 280-mile jaunt by 34 minutes against varying head winds.

A large welcome party was on hand to greet the plane when it swooped down to a perfect landing on the Pan-American field at San Juan. Colonel Lindbergh and his party will spend the night here and leave in the morning for their sweep around the Caribbean circle, following the Windward and Leeward islands on his route to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana.

He will exchange his speedy trimotor land plane here for an amphibian, which will be used throughout the remainder of the flight.

Colonel Lindbergh and party made a half hour's visit at Santo Domingo. The same enthusiastic reception accorded the colonel at all his stops in the island of the West Indies was given here. A delegation was on hand at the flying field to represent President Horacio Vasquez.

E. Young, the American minister, was among diplomatic officials present.

In contrast with yesterday, when the party had luncheon in flight between Havana and Camaguey, they lunched here in tents at the field before the start of the trip.

Everywhere glad to get a glimpse of Lindbergh's bride, the former Anne Morrow, the people have showered Mrs. Lindbergh with flowers. She has enjoyed the trip immensely, spending her time while in the air with sightseeing and a diary which is rapidly being filled.

Arriving at Santiago de Cuba at 6:58 a. m. today Colonel Lindbergh glided like a bird across the Windward passage to the island of Haiti, where he landed at Port au Prince at 9:30. The take-off for this city was made at 10:45. He landed at the Santo Domingo field at 12:15.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh were welcomed to Porto Rico personally by Governor Horacio M. Towner, Attorney General James Beverly, Executive Secretary Saldana, Commissioner of Legations John H. Urye and Police Chief George Lewis.

The colonel and his wife were taken direct to the governor's palace, where they will be overnight guests. No functions were planned.

Mrs. Lindbergh expressed much enthusiasm over the trip, saying it had been "one of the most wonderful sights" she had ever seen. About 500 spectators were at the field to watch the ship come in.

Democratic Leaders Flayed By Col. James Hill Palmer

Lithonia, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—The pooh-bah of the democratic party, fifth district, Georgia, if reports be true, used gumshoe methods in producing his candidate for congress to succeed Leslie J. Steele, said Colonel James Hill Palmer, independent progressive, addressing a rally at the Davidson quarries here Saturday afternoon.

"And red-blooded men and women all over the district are telling me they propose to repudiate the impudence of this self-appointed creator of candidates-for-office by defeating his personally-chosen flag-bearer at the polls on October 2."

"Political bosses chatter in public about Thomas Jefferson and his democratic ideals; but they have never found a way to adapt those ideals to their under-party ways of conducting campaigns and carrying elections."

Party Loyalty.
"With the suavity of the confidence man they have, in days gone, won and held many followers by pleading the virtues of party loyalty. Greedy for power and for the gains of office, they have flim-flammed good men and drained the treasury of the state."

"But the fellows who are running the Democratic party in Georgia, ignoring the rights of the people and after year, have stirred them now to political revolution. Men have awakened to the fact that only through a second party, aggressive and conservative, can sovereignty be restored to the masses."

"For the sole and providential purpose of ending forever the debauch of one-party rule in Georgia the Independent Progressive party was born. And as an instrument to deal its first effective blow at the paralyzing single-party system it has drafted a candidate for congress who isn't afraid in a righteous cause to fight the devil in his den."

Old-Line "Regular."
"An old-line regular from the Fifth district wouldn't mean anything in Washington. And he wouldn't mean anything for the Fifth district. They're used to that kind of up there, and just now, though the Democratic regulars are having a good deal to say, they are not having much to do."

RUSSIA SEEKS ROAD TO PEACE IN CHINA, OFFICIAL CLAIMS

Moscow, September 21.—(AP)—Alexei I. Rykoff, president of the council of peoples' commissars, in a ringing address tonight to the first Moscow regional congress of soviets declared the soviet government was prepared to maintain its army throughout the winter on the Manchurian border but would not resort to hostilities as long as the possibility of peaceful settlement existed.

"We have a specially organized and powerful army in winter quarters on the Chinese border in full readiness for any eventuality," he said, "but we shall not call it into full action as long as the slightest chance exists for peaceful settlement of the conflict over the Chinese Eastern railway."

"We shall not accept the conditions of Nanking, which would be tantamount to a soviet surrender to Chinese generals."

The speech of the president of the soviet union was received with thunderous cheers.

Desultory fighting continues along the Russo-Chinese borders in Manchuria, and in the meantime the great strategic Chinese Eastern railway, linking the soviet union with the Far East, is all but idle.

10-YEAR-OLD BOY IS BADLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Ellison Wilkins, ten-year-old son of Charles W. Wilkins, is at Grady hospital suffering with a badly crushed right leg as the result of being struck by an automobile while playing in front of his home, 42 Lakewood road, Saturday morning.

The youngster apparently was not seen by the woman who was driving the automobile. She immediately carried the child to the hospital, Mr. Wilkins said.

FILLING STATION EXPLOSION TAKES LIVES OF THREE

St. Ansgar, Iowa, September 21.—(AP)—Three persons were killed and one injured when the air compression plant under a gasoline filling station exploded today.

The dead are:
C. O. Parker, manager of the station.
Henry Simmering, a customer.

A girl tentatively identified as Miss Conklin, of Mitchell.

The air compression tank buried under the filling station exploded while Parker was selling gasoline to Simmering.

The girl who was killed was believed to have been walking past the station.

The building was demolished. Fire started but the two gasoline tanks were not affected.

Investigators had not determined how pressure in the buried air tank could become so great.

AUTO WRECK FATAL TO J. W. CASSEY, JR., PROMINENT LAWYER

Jackson, Miss., September 21.—(AP)—James W. Cassey, Jr., one of the most prominent criminal lawyers in Mississippi, was fatally injured near Flora this afternoon when his car plunged from the highway.

Mr. Cassey, 52 years old, was returning to his home at Brookhaven from Indianola, where he had attended a session of court in which a decision was handed down today awarding one of his clients $25,000 in a personal injury suit.

A young boy driving the Cassey car, whose name was not available, escaped uninjured.

Conflicting reports were received on the accident, the boy whose name was said to be either Turner or Tyner, stating that the car hit a bridge and threw Mr. Cassey out. An eyewitness who was unrecalled tonight, is said to have related a story to persons at Benton that the car was crossing a bridge outside Flora when the hub cap caught on the bridge, plunging the large coupe down an embankment. Mr. Cassey was crushed in the impact, according to a report the wreck and was lying when taken from the car. He died later, en route to Flora.

FOUR ARE INJURED IN AUTO CRASH NORTH OF MACON

Macon, Ga., September 21.—(AP)—Two persons were seriously injured and two others received minor wounds early tonight in an automobile accident near Sumner, 20 miles north of here, in which three cars were damaged.

Miss Mary M. Longwood, 21, of California, suffered a fractured skull and was in a serious condition at a local hospital. Mrs. Mary Bailey, 28, of Forsyth, Ga., was in an unconscious condition with numerous cuts and bruises. A man, said to be M. J. Yeomans, of Macon, and his companion, were treated for minor injuries at a Forsyth hospital.

QUAKE IN TURKEY Many Persons Are Missing After Earth Tremor.

Constantinople, September 21.—(AP)—Many persons are missing and it is feared that there may be some casualties in the destruction by earthquake of the hamlet of Turukeny in the Gümushane region which was shaken yesterday.

All of Anatolia was shaken by the quake, which was severe, and in addition to the destruction of Turukeny 50 dwellings in other villages were blown down.

Judge Considers New Trial Plea Of Manchester

Macon, Ga., September 21.—(AP)—Without argument of counsel, Judge H. A. Mathews of Bibb superior court, today took under advisement a motion for new trial in the case of Earl Manchester, 19, condemned for the murder of James W. Parks, 18, on the night of May 17.

The trial judge accepted all the papers in the case, and the amended motion, and ordered counsel to file briefs here within the next two weeks.

This action means that no decision will be handed down by Judge Mathews until after the trial of Mrs. J. C. Powers, alleged to have perpetrated the murder of young Parks, which has been assigned for October 7.

Manchester was tried early in June and given the death penalty.

Manchester testified on the stand that Mrs. Powers offered him $1,000 to kill Parks, on whose life she carried a $1,000 double indemnity insurance policy.

FORMER SOLDIER GIVEN LONG TERM IN BANK ROBBERY

Dothan, Ala., September 21.—(AP)—J. L. Holland, former corporal in the United States army stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., was sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment following his conviction in Houston county circuit court yesterday of complicity in the robbery of the Bank of Cottonwood, Cottonwood, Ala., August 3.

William C. Taylor and Richard E. Harrison, former enlisted men at Fort Benning, and Henry Newman and Al Gibson, Houston county farmers, also charged with the robbery, will face trial separately.

Circuit Solicitor J. N. Mullins had asked the death penalty for Holland, who was said to have confessed, implicating the other four, that they forced W. A. Helms, cashier of the bank, into the vault and drove away with several hundred dollars of the bank's funds.

PSUEDO KINSMAN OF FORMER ENVOY JAILED ON COAST

Los Angeles, Cal., September 21.—(AP)—Federal officials claimed today to have a confession from Edith Houghton, 23, held here in default of $15,000 bail, that he had "foiled celebrities" by posing as the son of Alanson Houghton, former ambassador to Great Britain.

Houghton, they asserted, said that he had been the guest of many nationally known persons, including Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison and Harvey Firestone. He was arraigned before Federal Commissioner Davis on charges of obtaining money from a local club by representing himself as the third assistant solicitor-general of the United States. His hearing was continued until Tuesday to give federal agents an opportunity to investigate reports that he is wanted in a number of states.

REV. T. J. EATON, VICAR GENERAL, DIES AT MOBILE

Mobile, Ala., September 21.—(AP)—Right Rev. Thomas J. Eaton, vicar general of the diocese of Mobile and pastor of St. Mary's church here, died tonight at a local infirmary after a long illness. His condition had been reported improved until yesterday when it took a sudden turn for the worse.

He was a native of Ireland and was educated in Catholic institutions there. He was ordained in Maryland and had served in churches in Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala. In 1927 he was appointed vicar general of the Mobile diocese and in 1928, during a trip to Europe, was named domestic prelate and given the title of monsignor by Pope Pius XI.

Searches for Rum Cargoes Turned Into Track Meets

The first tinge of fall has seeming-ly lent wings to the feet of various owners of contraband liquor, according to raiding officers. Policemen C. W. Cranshaw, H. B. Davis, J. C. Mosley, Deputy Sheriff S. G. Davies and Prohibition Agent A. C. Brinson, whose week-end cruise turned out to be a track meet in several instances.

While seeking contraband Friday night officers found 171 gallons of corn liquor in a garage in the rear of a North avenue apartment house. A white sentry was near the cargo. Spying the officers he fled, and outdistanced his pursuers.

The squad next encountered John J. Denison in a coupe containing 17 gallons of liquor in the vicinity of Walnut and Tenth streets. A five-mile race ended within three blocks of the starting point, when Denison's machine veered over an embankment on Tenth street. Denison continued afloat, but was overhauled by the officers.

A member of the colored gentry was the next to set a pace for the officers, when Andrew Hicks, negro, was the next victim. Officers encountered him on Davis street conveying a gallon tin of liquor, they said.

The race went in favor of the officers when Hicks fell into an excavation at Davis and Mitchell streets and was unable to get up.

Early Saturday morning two Atlanta rum runners, whom the officers recognized, abandoned a touring car and a large sedan, one with a 130-gallon cargo, the other with 40 gallons, in Rockdale county, after a six-mile chase. The big machine was deserted by the driver when his motor stalled. The driver of the other car abandoned it when he threw a rear wheel. Both escaped.

North Carolina Labor Head Says Present Mill Strife Fomented by Soviet Aids

Outlines Difference Between Recognized Union and "Adventurers" Who Seek Revolution.

Raleigh, N. C., September 21.—Calling attention to the vast differences existing between the United Textile Workers' Union, which is the recognized trade association of the spinning industry, and the National Textile Workers' Union, charged with fomenting the present strife in certain mill centers in North Carolina and elsewhere in the south, T. A. Wilson, president of the North Carolina Federation of Labor, charges that the "National" is being financed by Russia in the present difficulties.

Mr. Wilson outlined the policy of the "United" as one seeking to better the condition of the men and women in the industry, and charged that the "National" does not seek to settle differences between employer and employee, but stirs up difficulty and strife in an attempt to bring about revolution and socialism.

National Fights A. F. of L.
In a statement issued here this week Mr. Wilson declared:

"The United Textile Workers' Union," Mr. Wilson said in his statement, "is recognized as an officially affiliated body of the American Federation of Labor and recognizes, as do all other affiliated bodies, that its purpose is to sell the labor of its membership at the best prices obtainable and at the same time get good conditions and better working hours. The strike is used only as a last resort. Unfortunately, sometimes the ends are not reached without resort to the strike."

"The United Textile Workers' Union favors scientific management of industries and elimination of waste and stands ready to co-operate with friendly employers and is doing so now in New England."

"The aims and aspirations of the National Textile Workers' Union, a part of the communistic organization, are to destroy the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations, destroy religion and establish a workers' government. The communist party seeks destruction of the federation, knowing that if it accomplishes this the employers will drive the workers to such low levels that it can thereby create and bring about a revolution, which is the ultimate aim and desire of the party. The present-day communist party and the National Textile Workers' Union were born as an outgrowth of the revolution against Russian autocracy and were financed by Russia."

Controls Members.
"The United Textile Workers' Union recognizes that our government is a success, but it is not perfect and is attempting through evolution to better working conditions. It also realizes that this must be brought about by labor organizations and is impossible for individual workers."

"Under the American system of government every state has its own labor laws as to hours, etc., and this makes some states unfair competitors to adjoining commonwealths where hours may be limited by statute. The United Textile Workers and affiliated organizations are attempting to equalize the competitive basis for labor in the country. They also are trying to make employers who are not playing fair and square with other employers toe the mark."

Textile Adventures.
"The officers of the United Textile Workers' Union have risen from the ranks of the workers in the trade and even though they may not have as much book learning as some others they look at their work from the standpoint of the practical needs of the workers and the economic welfare of the mass of employees and the industry as a whole. They are just as much interested in seeing the textile industry on a prosperous basis as the employers are. They don't like the uncertainty of working for a man who is not prosperous."

"On the other side of the picture, the leaders of the National Textile Workers' Union are largely adventurers, theorists and paid agitators who have not risen from the ranks and who only theoretically know the needs of the workers."

"The communists never settled a strike. They seek to tear down and not build up. The real cure for communism is to relieve the conditions responsible. The leaders of the party regard themselves as martyrs, are ready to sacrifice themselves, and feel that some will be sacrificed whenever they enter a new field. They were educated under the old Russian autocracy or in the same teachings when sacrifice led to revolution."

EMORY JUNIOR COLLEGE OPENS NEW SESSION

Oxford, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—Formal opening of the Emory University Junior college here took place Wednesday at the "Old Church," with Dean H. A. Woodward presiding. Music for the occasion was furnished by the choir and students of the school.

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, of the district, an alumnus and trustee of the university, led the opening prayer. A large audience of representative citizens of Oxford, Covington and Newton county was present, the center of the house being filled by the student body. President Cox, Vice President Jack, other members of the faculty of the university, the local faculty, some of the old Emory men, and visiting alumni occupied the platform, by request of Dean Woodward.

Bishop Warren A. Candler was then presented as the speaker of the occasion and all heard with keenest interest and pleasure his magnificent address, full of tender reminiscences of his connection with old Emory as student and president. He was indeed at his best, and his appeal to the students for Christian character and high scholarship will not be forgotten by them.

ARMY PLANS TRAINING ATTENDANCE RECORD SESSION IN CAROLINA URGED BY DR. SUTTON

Regular Troops To Hold Five-Period Maneuver at Camp Jackson.

Brigadier General H. B. Fiske, acting commander of the fourth army corps area, Saturday announced a five-period training session to be undergone by regular army troops at Camp Jackson, S. C., where the soldiers will have a three-week maneuver during October.

In making public the military program General Fiske also announced that though rigid training would be undergone, the officers who mapped the schedule had left plenty of time open for amusement and recreation. The recreational activities will be climaxed by a field day which will be staged on October 19, the last Saturday of the encampment.

Holbrook in Command.
The training schedule, which will be under direction of Brigadier General Lucius R. Holbrook, commanding officer of Fort Bragg, N. C., as announced by General Fiske follows:

The use of the first period from October 1 to 5 is being left largely to the discretion of regimental commanders. They will, however, be required to conduct two one-sided maneuvers, one involving the regiment in attack and another with the regiment in defense. In these problems each regiment of infantry, cavalry and a composite regiment of field artillery will be assisted by at least one airplane. The first platoon of the fourth tank company will be attached to one of the infantry regiments. The last two days of this period musketry problems with service ammunition for all rifle and machine gun companies of infantry, troops of cavalry and batteries of field artillery will be required. The eighth infantry from Fort Screven, Georgia, and Fort Moultrie, South Carolina, and the field artillery from Fort Bragg, North Carolina, are to fire on Friday, while Saturday is reserved for the firing by the twenty-second infantry from Forts McPherson and Oglethorpe, Georgia, and the sixth cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe.

Two-Sided Maneuver.
A continuous two-sided maneuver form for reinforced regiments of infantry, with all troops participating, is scheduled for the second period on October 6 and 8.

For the third period, October 10 and 11, the reinforced brigade will be seen in action with all troops participating in problems in attack and defense.

October 14 and 15 will comprise the fourth period and will be devoted to the completion of tactical inspection of the corps area commander. The problem will involve a continuous maneuver for the reinforced brigade with all troops participating.

For the fifth and last period, October 17 and 18, there is scheduled a command post exercise for a corps.

P. R. R. QUARTET WILL ENTERTAIN TRAFFIC CLUB

The Red Arrow quartet of the Pennsylvania railroad will entertain members of the Atlanta Traffic Club at their luncheon meeting October 7 at the Atlanta Athletic Club, it was announced Saturday.

P. E. WEIS.

The quartet will be under the direction of P. E. Weis, of Crafton, Pa. Mr. Weis, who will act as master of ceremonies during the entertainment by the quartet, is also the originator and a member of the Norphonos trio, an instrumental feature of unusual instruments with the Red Arrow quartet. He is also the director of the Red Knight orchestra of the Pennsylvania railroad which has the unusual distinction of having been the first industrial orchestra to broadcast a program to the Byrd expedition at Little America, Antarctica.

Julian Marchman, Bondsman, Freed In Killing of Negro

Julian H. Marchman, 29, of 4 Anthony street, professional bondsman, who earlier in the week was arrested on charge of killing Walter Riley, negro, was acquitted in a coroner's verdict of justifiable homicide, followed by dismissal of charges against him in recorder's court Saturday afternoon. Marchman contended that he fired two shots at the negro in self-defense after the latter had attacked him Thursday night, cutting him with a knife. Marchman said he was walking along Mitchell street near Haynes street and that the negro brushed against him, forcing him into an alley. Marchman remained after the shooting until police arrived.

In an inquest held Saturday by Acting Coroner A. A. Owen, at Ivey brothers, negro undertaking establishment, the verdict of justifiable homicide was returned. Recorder A. W. Callaway upheld this opinion in dismissing charges when Marchman appeared before him later in the day.

HEALTH CENTERS LISTED

They will be opened at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon of the days designated.

Every Day Presence Is Subject of Superintendent's Letter.

Atlanta school children individually and collectively, are asked to strive for an attendance record at this year's session by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, the city superintendent, in his weekly public letter to the pupils.

The letter follows:
"My dear Boys and Girls: A new school year has rolled around. We are back at work and are now on the second week of the 30 which stretch before us. We did not get our school letter started last week, but I am writing you today to say how glad we are to be back in school—to rejoice that our students of former years have returned, to welcome the newcomers and the students who are entering the Atlanta schools for the first time. We hope that it will be a successful year for each and every one."

"I am writing you this week about the subject of attendance. The Atlanta schools have made a fine record during the past few years. In fact, those who have made a close study say that we led not only the United States but the entire world in attendance. I do not know whether this is true or not—I hope it is—I only know that we have improved wonderfully."

"Regularly of attendance is almost a guarantee of a successful school year. The boy or girl who attends regularly is almost sure to pass in all subjects and be promoted at the end of the semester. I call an empty seat a ghost. You know a desk or a chair was made to sit in, and if there is nobody in it all day long it is a rather lonesome looking thing. So I hope you will see that the seat that you should occupy is filled every day. Attendance really means money. The United States government estimates that every school day is worth at least $15 in the life of a child. You cannot make $15 in any other way, but you can make it by coming to school. The pay day will come when your mind is trained and you are doing your share of life's work."

"Attendance means happiness and enthusiasm for your teacher and your class. If they can report 100 per cent in attendance they will be happy and this happiness will mean better work. I wish for you a wonderfully successful year and I trust that thousands and thousands of you will stay in school throughout the entire year without a single absence or tardy. Always your friend,

"WILLIS A. SUTTON,
"Superintendent of Schools."

FARLEY AND ANDERSON MAKE $2,500 BONDS

Pair Indicted for Selling Stock Without License From Securities Commission.

W. D. Farley and H. H. Anderson, Jr., each made $2,500 bond Saturday on indictments returned Friday by the Fulton grand jury. Farley and Anderson are charged with selling stock in a company without first obtaining a license from the Georgia securities commission.

Action by the grand jury coincided with the filing of a petition by E. W. Romberger in Fulton superior court for a receivership for Farley and Anderson. Joseph W. Jones was named temporary receiver by Judge G. H.

Howard. Romberger alleges that Farley and Anderson owe him $2,000. Farley and Anderson are charged in the indictments with selling stock in the Sales and Service Machine Company to Mrs. Letitia A. Drucker, of 746 Highland avenue, and Professor John T. Topham, of Georgia Tech, without first obtaining a license to sell the stock. Together with J. T. Walker they are accused in other indictments of selling stock to C. W. Chears, of the Atlanta Trust building, and J. E. Telford, of 101 Marietta, without first securing a license.

TENNESSEE INCOME TAX EXEMPTS 1929 EARNING

Ruling of Attorney-General Clears Skies for Bondholders.

Nashville, Tenn., September 21.—Charles M. McCabe, commissioner of finance and taxation, announced tonight that securities listed for income tax under the Hall income tax act of 1929 cannot be assessed either by state, county, or municipality for the year 1929 and cannot be back-assessed for any previous year.

Commissioner McCabe's statement was issued after he received an opinion from Attorney-General L. D. Smith holding that provisions of the act prohibit the assessment of ad valorem taxes by the state, counties or municipalities on such properties for 1929 and likewise prohibit the back assessment for years prior to 1929.

"I believe people liable for income tax will now come forward and pay promptly," the commissioner said. "On account of the delay in getting construction of the law no penalties will be attached if parties send in their returns at once. After October 1 the matter will be referred to our state auditors to investigate those who have not made returns and penalty will be added."

McCabe said that returns would be safeguarded and that no information regarding them would be given out.

General Smith ruled that counties and municipalities which have attempted to assess ad valorem taxes against the securities for state, county or municipal purposes "will have to pursue a course by which such properties will be struck from their tax books." His opinion further stated that "the entire income upon such properties for 1929 is imposed for the exclusive use of the state and should be paid to and collected by the commissioner of finance and taxation of the state. Therefore, no part of the same can be repaid to the counties or municipalities who have attempted to levy ad valorem tax thereon."

weight of the clothes when they are started through the laundry, thus assuring uniformity in the work always.

Every machine in the laundry is operated either by electricity or air. The current used is produced in the company's own power plant, which would supply sufficient electrical energy for a town of 25,000 inhabitants, it was pointed out. Automatic stokers are used in the boilers and smoke is seldom seen coming from the stack.

Washers Expensive.
Among new developments in laundry machinery used in the plant are two mammoth cascade washers. An interesting fact in connection with these machines is that they cost $10,000 each. There are numerous other smaller ones.

And the extractors! They are interesting machines. They extract the water from clothes after they are washed. But they would come in handy for persons who are always talking about reducing. This would be a really easy method of vibration means anything in getting off pounds. All one would have to do is sit on them for a little while and its only reasonable to assume that the surplus pounds would disappear. The only trouble is that the machines shake the house down, too.

A hot water tank on top of the building weighs 70,000 pounds and has a capacity of heating 6,000 gallons of water almost to the boiling point in an hour. The water is heated with the steam exhaust from the engine room and steam appliances throughout the plant.

The dry cleaning plant, which is under the management of R. A. Dempsey, a graduate of the National Association Institute of Dryers and Cleaners at Washington, D. C., is also modern in every respect and is equipped with up-to-date machinery throughout.

RECORD SESSION IS SEEN IN 1930 FOR RIVERSIDE

Gainesville, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—With its accommodations taxed to the fullest capacity, Riverside Military academy has opened for the 1929-1930 season under what faculty members announced, was the most auspicious outlook in its history.

when school is opened in September, President Sandy Beaver said, there has not been a vacancy in any of the dormitories, and this was not only true at the present session, but many applicants for admission could not be accommodated.

Students, approximately 500, registered this week from 33 states and three foreign countries. New additions were made to the faculty which is said to be one of the largest of any preparatory military school in the country. The school has been designated an honor school by the United States war department for the seventh consecutive year—a record, President Beaver said, that is unequalled by any other school in the south between Virginia and New Mexico.

OLD SOAK SPEAKS IN IRISH BROGUE, STIMSON FINDS

Washington, September 21.—(United News).—The Old Soak has come back to Washington speaking with an Irish brogue. Secretary of State Stimson's world famous parrot spent the summer with the Irish caretaker of the Stimson place on Long Island.

"I can discern traces of the Irish influence in the Old Soak's speech," said Stimson today. "The bird complains a bit of cold feet these early mornings but he seems quite happy otherwise."

PRESENTING EUROPEAN ARTS AND CRAFTS

Because Atlantans appreciate the unusual, Davison's has assembled a collection of rare and beautiful things from European countries, chosen during the last six months by our own representative who followed trails blazed by Macy's great European buying organization. This collection will be on display in the Model Apartment on the Sixth Floor, beginning Monday, September 23rd.

Here you will see products of Europe's most skilled craftsmen. In the Italian room you will find antique furniture, pottery, alabaster, heavily-embroidered linens and rich Florentine leathers. France has sent jewelry, lingerie, exquisite hand-bags and other artistic things typical of that country. Displays from England, Germany, Austria, the new republic of Czecho-Slovakia and other nations are also included—to the end that Davison's Model Apartment has the appearance of a miniature Old World fair.

You are invited to visit this fascinating display any day during store hours.

PANTAGES PERJURY CHARGES PROMISED

Grand Jury Will Hear New Evidence Against Witnesses.

Los Angeles, September 21.—(AP)—Possibility of perjury charges against two defense witnesses for Mrs. Alexander Pantages held the spotlight in the trial of the theatrical magnate's wife on a second-degree murder charge today as prosecution and defense counsel prepared their final summations to the jury for presentation Monday.

James P. Costello, chief deputy prosecutor, declaring he was in possession of "highly sensational information" which came to him too late for use as evidence in the trial, said perjury charges would be filed against two defense witnesses, one a woman.

He declared the matter would be laid before the county grand jury.

The two witnesses were said to have told on the stand stories conflicting with those they had told investigators shortly after the crash between Mrs. Pantages' car and Juro Rokumoto's machine. It was the death of the Japanese following the accident that resulted in Mrs. Pantages, alleged to have been intoxicated at the time, being held.

Final Arguments Monday.

First arguments were presented yesterday by the state and defense counsel. Deputy District Attorney Harold Jones attacked the defense contention that Rokumoto died from the effects of an unnecessarily administered anesthetic. Referring to the physicians who had testified during the trial, Jones said:

"A half dozen get on the stand and swear one thing; another six get on and swear another. I tell you it takes no experts to tell what killed Juro Rokumoto; if that accident had not happened Rokumoto would be alive today."

W. I. Gilbert, veteran of many Los Angeles court battles, opened arguments for the defense with a vigorous attack on testimony of two state witnesses, declaring their narrations conflicted. Either the testimony of Harold Lederbrink or Mrs. Bertha Jacobs, Gilbert asserted, must be accepted as perjury.

Lederbrink had testified that a few minutes before the automobile crash, "YOU WOULD NOT KNOW ME FOR THE SAME MAN NOW" stinate nature, yield to the powerful, invigorating effects of this new and different medicine. Indeed, it is often when the sufferer has almost despaired of ever finding relief, that Sargon does its best work. These are not idle words—Sargon has proved itself in thousands of cases like that of Cleveland G. Phillips, well-known employee of the Southern Iron and Equipment Co., who lives at 880 Bankhead Highway, S. W., Atlanta, who recently said:

"I've taken all kinds of medicine in the past ten years trying to get rid of my stomach trouble, but the first real, lasting relief I ever got was when I started Sargon. I gained ten pounds in about three weeks and feel like a different man. I had about lost hope and thought I'd have to give up my job. Every time I ate anything it got my stomach to burning and I'd taste hot acids, sour as vinegar, in my throat. Sometimes the gas pressure against my heart would shorten my breath to gasps and my heart would palpitate something awful. I had sharp pains under my right ribs and in the small of my back, often extending up in my shoulders and in the glands of my neck. Constipation bothered me nearly all the time and I was afraid jaundice was setting up because my liver wasn't working right and my skin was a pale, yellow color.

"But you wouldn't know me for the same man since I've been taking Sargon. I never saw anything like the way it overcame my stomach trouble and toned up my whole system. I can eat a hearty meal now without a trace of gas pains, shortness of breath, heart palpitation or bad effects of any kind. Every pain and ache I had disappeared! Sargon Soft Mass Pills completely rid me of constipation and reconditioned my liver so that my skin cleared up to a good healthy color. The ten pounds I gained brought me new strength and energy and I'm enjoying the finest health I've had in ten years!"

"Sargon is sure an medicine that does the work and I can't praise it enough."

A special Sargon representative at Jacobs' main store, 14 Marietta St., is explaining the therapeutic action of this revolutionary new medicine to hundreds daily. Sargon may also be obtained at all Jacobs' drug stores throughout Atlanta.—(adv.)

European Arts and Crafts Represented in Exposition

Miss Martha Hillhouse in French provincial costume as she will appear in the Davison-Paxon Company's international exposition. The setting is arranged in eighteenth century French provincial furniture, Louis XVI design.

Featuring arts and crafts from all over Europe, the Davison-Paxon Company will stage an international exposition in the model department next to the ten rooms on the sixth floor of its store beginning Monday.

The store's own representative spent six months in Europe buying the most interesting and beautiful continental merchandise that the firm's affiliation with the Macy organization and its foreign offices could possibly afford.

The exposition is an exhibit of merchandise representative of these purchases abroad. The display will be arranged in the apartment in accordance with the origin of the merchandise.

Mrs. Pantages had spoken to him profanely.

"At the time Lederbrink says he was talking to Mrs. Pantages, Mrs. Jacobs, according to her testimony, was with her in the car. He has told us nothing of her presence there."

Gilbert scored the prosecution for not calling witnesses later summoned by the defense. He declared one of them testified Mrs. Pantages was not under the influence of liquor at the time of the crash and that others showed that Mrs. Pantages was crowded from the right side of the street into Rokumoto's car. The Japanese's own carelessness also was given as a reason for the crash.

Taking of evidence was completed at yesterday's morning session. Presiding Superior Judge Carlos Hardy then announced that opposing counsel would be allowed to make two addresses each to the jury. Gilbert still was speaking when court was recessed until Monday and will finish then.

"The Prodigal Wife" Will Be Subject Of Dr. Lovein Today

Flouting a revival campaign tradition that called for special "men only" or "women only" services on the first Sunday afternoon after an evangelistic campaign is opened, the Rev. Norman Lovein will preach at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon on "The Prodigal Wife" to a congregation of both men and women at Wesley Memorial church.

Announcing his departure from custom Saturday, Dr. Lovein declared that the modern trend toward frankness on all subjects in ordinary conversation, in print and motion pictures, makes it entirely becoming for the pulpit to be used before mixed audiences on vital subjects.

The evangelist will preach both at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. at Wesley and the afternoon service was arranged especially, he said, for members of other congregations who will attend their own churches during the regular hours of worship. Revival services will be continued at 7:30 o'clock nightly throughout this week by Dr. Lovein.

NEW YORK-MIAMI PLANES REACH END OF FIRST VOYAGE

Tampa, Fla., September 21.—(AP)—Three Bellanca monoplanes, inaugurating New York-Tampa-Miami service of the Eastern Air Express, arrived here this afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. Augustine.

P. G. B. Morris, operations manager of the new air line, was greeted at the municipal airport by Mayor D. B. McKay, who was presented a gift from Mayor Walker.

Approximately 500 Tampanians stood in a drizzling rain to welcome the airmen.

They will leave for Miami tomorrow afternoon. A twice-a-week express service is to be put on schedule Thursday with daily sailings planned for December by a fleet of 11 planes, Mr. Morris said.

New York, September 21.—(AP)—David A. Browne, chairman of the Palestine Emergency Fund, announced today that since the issuance of the appeal on August 27 for the relief of the Jewish victims of the Palestine riots, the fund committee had received $1,422,500.

PLAN TO STERILIZE FRUIT IN TRANSIT

United States Board Agrees To Raise Ban for Six States.

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—Sterilization of Florida citrus fruits in six states and the District of Columbia was authorized today by the department of agriculture which amended its fruit fly regulations to permit refrigeration of the fruits in the north.

The department's announcement said that sterilization, under adequate safeguards, could be carried out at designated cold storage plants in the following states, besides Florida: Kentucky, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts and the District of Columbia. The area into which such movement is permitted may be later extended to other states.

The fruit must be shipped under special permits issued by the plant quarantine and control administration of the department. It also was stipulated that properly refrigerated cars should be used in the fruit movement.

Tests have demonstrated, the department said, that no injury to the fruit results from subjection to the required low temperature, and the method is commercially practicable.

Mississippi Killer Sentenced to Death; Wife Is Acquitted

Brookhaven, Miss., September 21.—(AP)—Henry Smith was found guilty by a jury today of the murder of Tommie Case and October 25 fixed by the judge as the execution date.

Smith's wife, who sprang a surprise by testifying that she killed Case, was found not guilty.

The jury deliberated only 30 minutes.

Attorneys for Smith announced that an appeal would be taken.

FRANCO-GERMAN PACT AGAINST RUSS DENIED

Reichstag Member Admits Conversation, Denies Purpose.

Berlin, September 21.—(AP)—Moritz Kloenne, reichstag member, tonight said the people's party press service story of secret conversations in Paris for a Franco-German military alliance against soviet Russia was "truth and fiction strangely mixed."

He said he had conversations with British and French political leaders in 1927 and 1928 as a private citizen, holding no claim to represent the German government. He expressed "the demands of nationalistic Germany" and urged that a rapprochement between the three countries could only be based upon evacuation of occupied territories, increase in the German army, withdrawal of war guilt charges and also "unconditional return of the Polish corridor, complete restoration of German sovereignty and revision of the Dawes plan to reduce annuities by at least a half."

He said that he immediately informed the German foreign office of all his conversations but flatly denied acquaintance or negotiation with any French general, as had been reported.

The people's party press service, which is regarded as the mouthpiece of Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann, today had said that Kloenne had proposed an alliance against Russia to both English and French leaders.

OFFICERS SEARCH FOR LOST PAPERS IN TEXAS MURDER

Borger, Texas, September 21.—(AP)—Documents said to have been used in prosecution of liquor law violators were the object of a search today by Special Prosecutor Clem Calhoun and Texas rangers investigating the assassination here September 13 of District Attorney John Holmes.

The missing papers were evidence Holmes had gathered in connection with liquor charges brought against 12 men and two women here after a ranger clean-up in July. Alex Mood, assistant United States district attorney, said at Amarillo today that Holmes had not delivered the papers to him.

Holmes, Mood declared, was to have conferred with the federal attorney at Amarillo a week ago today, the morning after Holmes was shot to death as he put his automobile into the garage at his home here.

Holmes also was to have assisted in the presentation of cases to the federal grand jury now in session at Amarillo. Five border residents were indicted yesterday for liquor law violations.

Officials Find Women Fib Less In Tax Returns

Washington, September 21.—(United News)—Women are more honest than men in the matter of making income tax returns.

Special investigators of the internal revenue bureau who check up on thousands of incorrect and falsified tax returns annually, said tonight they had little trouble with returns by women.

Tax returns by women constituted nearly half of the returns by men, exclusive of joint returns by husband and wives which form the largest class. In 1926, the latest year for which such statistics are now available, Single and married women making separate returns filed a total of 663,561 and paid income tax on net incomes aggregating $2,187,321,502, as compared with 1,414,961 returns filed by single men on net incomes aggregating $4,741,136,187 in that year. Joint returns by husbands and wives numbered 2,017,182 on incomes amounting to $13,535,920.

Experience of the income tax unit with women contrasts with that of another branch of the treasury, the customs service, which in the course of a year detects thousands of women smugglers. Most of the smuggling by women is petty, but in the aggregate it reaches sizable sums.

Prosecutions instituted by the internal revenue bureau bore out the statements of the special investigators that women's returns are less likely to be falsified than those made by men taxpayers. While exact statistics were said at the bureau to be unavailable, the general counsel of the free said the great majority of their prosecutions were against men.

One explanation for the honesty of women, and most men, in making their income tax returns, was said to be the smallness of the sums involved. Most income tax payments in the medium class incomes are so small that little would be gained by an effort to cheat the collector. Severe penalties of the income tax law also act as a powerful deterrent.

Investigators for the internal revenue bureau are highly trained in ferreting out false returns and few taxpayers "get away" with any attempt to deny Uncle Sam his due. From time to time, however, taxpayers attempt it with the aid of unscrupulous lawyers and the treasury annually disburses a number of attorneys for aiding taxpayers to make incorrect returns.

GOVERNMENT SUES LOCAL COMPANY FOR PAPER DUTY

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The federal government today brought suit against the American Mills company of Atlanta and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company as surety, for $1,711.94 alleged to be balance due on liquidation of an entry of imported paper from Germany.

The government alleged that the paper was entered at Savannah in January 1925 as pure sulphite wrapping paper, but that it was found upon liquidation of the entry that the shipment was imitation parchment paper, which carries a much higher duty.

LAGRANGE COLLEGE STUDENTS PLAN WASHINGTON TRIP

LaGrange, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—With the idea of establishing an annual custom, the senior class of 1930 is planning a class trip to Washington. Various organizations and alumnae are contributing generously to the cause. The senior class is looking forward, not only to taking the class trip, but also to setting a precedent for future classes.

The junior class is sponsoring entertainments in behalf of their sister class. Other organizations are planning benefits also.

LaGrange college is one of the oldest colleges for women in the world and will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 1931.

Committees Well Organized For Forget-Me-Not Campaign

Every business block in Atlanta and every town and village in the Fifth Congressional District will have its team of women and girls at work Wednesday selling Forget-Me-Not to the Disabled American Veterans.

"It promises to be the most completely-organized drive since the World War days," declared members of the executive committee in charge. "More than 1,000 women and girls, representatives of 110 religious, civic, social and other organizations, have enlisted for the one-day campaign."

One instance of the interest taken in this effort to help the Disabled American Veterans of the World War was indicated yesterday when a message was received from a group of prisoners in the federal penitentiary, saying that they desired to assist in relieving the distress of a committee of women was at once assigned to visit the prison and give the inmates an opportunity to contribute.

Women To Do Work.

The veterans have been relieved of the task of carrying on the campaign for their destitute comrades. Headed by the officers of the Fifth District and Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, nearly 100 religious, civic, social organizations in the district have been called upon to furnish committees of active workers on "Forget-Me-Not Day," and have responded generously.

Flower sellers will be greatly in need of relief, "was the statement made by officers of the local chapter. "Some of them draw a small compensation from the government, some have been unable to substantiate their claims, owing to technicalities. Many families of men who served overseas are in financial distress. Such claims are carefully investigated and relief provided. Such work as these men can do is found for them when possible."

"An important part of the work is carrying on the liaison service, which investigates claims of men who are entitled to compensation and presses those which are worthy. Many men, returning from overseas, signed papers stating that they were in good physical condition after hasty examination, and because they were anxious to get home. In thousands of cases troubles developed afterward. These men are entitled to compensation and we furnish them assistance in forwarding their claims. In the past year more than $100,000 of such claims have been successfully presented."

Mayor Issues Appeal.

Mayor I. N. Ragdale Saturday departed from his usual custom of issuing a proclamation for Forget-Me-Not Day, but issued a personal appeal in behalf of the day and the drive.

"The little blue flowers of remembrance, forget-me-nots, will be sold on the streets of Atlanta next Wednesday, September 25, on behalf of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, in order to help the veterans who cannot help themselves," Mr. Ragdale said.

"These men did not forget their duty when the security of America depended upon them, and we should not forget our duty when they are in turn dependent upon us for help. Forget-Me-Not Day has been endorsed by the president, governors of the states, the director of the regional manager of the United States Veterans Bureau, and almost universally by national and state service organizations and their auxiliaries."

"Funds derived from the D. A. V. forget-me-not sale are to be used exclusively by the organization in carrying on its relief, rehabilitation and legislative work."

"The people of Atlanta have responded generously to this appeal in the past, and I hope that their response will be even more liberal this year."

TWO MOTOMETERS FOUND ON NEGRO; HELD ON SUSPICION

Neal Hart, negro, who gave an Auburn address, was held at police station Saturday night on blanket charges of suspicion after his arrest in a Decatur street pawnshop by Patrolman J. C. Woodruff.

Patrolman Woodruff, who was off duty, noticed the negro in the pawnshop pulling something from under his shirt. Investigating, he found Hart in possession of two expensive motometers, a carton of cigarettes, and a pair of driving glasses, with the name Mrs. Bryson, Andrew Jackson hotel, Nashville, inside the case.

Detective Lieutenant W. H. Andrews and H. W. Armstrong are investigating.

The last two additions to the death list came today. They were Roland Lowe, 39, Detroit, and Mrs. Helen Taylor, Montreal, Que. From hospital where the 46 injured were taken on Friday morning it was reported that eight had been discharged while 12 were considered to have doubtful chances of recovery.

Identification of all the victims also was completed today. An unidentified woman was found to be Miss Mabel Ireland, of Saginaw, and the previously unidentified man was identified as Alan Klein, 31, of Cleveland.

The city's effort to fix the blame for the tragedy proceeded with Martin Cohn, proprietor of the Study Club, a prisoner at police headquarters. His bond had been set at $25,000 following his appearance on a writ of habeas corpus, but Judge De Witt H. Merriam refused to accept the property Cohn offered as bond.

Members of the police department, the coroner's office, the prosecuting attorney's office, the department of buildings and safety engineering and the department of recreation continued their investigation. Photographs were taken of the stairways and doors about which the panic-stricken crowd hurled itself in an effort to escape the flames.

The investigations established that there was another stairway down which persons might have escaped. Duncanson McCreath, assistant prosecutor, said even more lives would have been lost had the crowd chosen this exit.

Atlanta Joins Fight For Better Highway To Eufrata, Alabama

Columbus, Ga., September 21.—(AP)—Atlanta has joined cities and towns of western Georgia and eastern Alabama in petitioning the Alabama highway department to improve the highway between Columbus and Eufrata, Ala. It was announced tonight by J. Ralston Cargill, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce, on his return from the Georgia capital.

Columbus and Eufrata first united in the movement to have the link of the highway from State to Eufrata improved so there would be a direct route to Apalachicola, Panama City, and Port St. Joe, Fla., and other

Judge Pomeroy Urges Caution In Use of Autos

An address by Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton county superior court, featured a drivers' safety rally Saturday night at the auditorium, attended by more than 800 persons. Judge Pomeroy discussed city ordinances designed to force drivers of motor vehicles to use precaution to prevent reckless use of vehicles.

The meeting was sponsored by Atlanta Safety Council.

Sixteen rounds of boxing were carded for the night, the participants all members of Georgia Power Company's athletic club. Music was furnished by the letter-carriers' band of the postoffice.

AUTO YO-YO PARTY ENDS IN DISASTER IN POLICE COURT

Yo-yo enthusiasm paid a dear price Saturday afternoon in the courtroom of Recorder M. H. Holloway when three devotees of the art were given 30 days in the city stocks, where they will be free to practise in what the devotees of the art were given.

When P. R. Kutzschas, 18, of 244 Doan street; his brother, T. P. Kutzschas, 18, of 244 Doan street; and J. G. South, of 247 Doan street, the plaintiff, appeared before the judge Saturday the yo-yoing incident was thoroughly explained by South and his story was accepted by the judge.

The three boys set out Saturday night, September 14, on an automobile to hold night sessions, and to show all Atlanta just what could be done with the new amusement contraption.

Early Sunday morning they encountered South, a milkman, who was peacefully plying his trade over a quiet suburban route on Rose circle. One of the party asked him if he "yo-yoed" and when he replied that he had no time for such a game, one word led to another and they were not all polite.

South drove on and a little later encountered the yo-yoers once more, this time on Allen street. The autoists blocked his path, South claims, and while one of the Kutzschas twins apologized for his part in the first encounter, Mable is said to have urged him to quit his vehicle and fight it out.

The incident ended without bloodshed, however, and Detectives J. M. Austin and W. J. Andrews arrested the boys, and then released them, setting the trial for Saturday afternoon.

WALTER C. TAYLOR DENIES ATLANTA LICENSES BEGGARS

Walter C. Taylor, city clerk, Saturday made vigorous denial that any license ever has been issued by the city which would permit any beggar to operate on Atlanta streets or to sell pencils, chewing gum or other articles.

"The city of Atlanta issues no licenses to beggars and never has done so," Mr. Taylor said in commenting on a letter which Henry C. Heinz, chairman of the executive committee of the Atlanta Community chest, and Roy LeCraw, general chairman of the association's drive for the relief of the blind, addressed to Mayor I. N. Ragdale and city council, asking that the practice be discontinued.

"I am sure the gentlemen who wrote the letter did not make a personal investigation of the situation," Mr. Taylor said. "If they had done so, they would have learned that no such licenses have ever been issued, but they have been granted any sort of license or permit by the city of Atlanta."

WIDESPREAD HUNT BEGUN FOR SLAYER OF SCHOOLGIRL

King Hill, Idaho, September 21.—(AP)—Widespread search was being conducted over southern Idaho today for the assailant of a 11-year-old girl, who was assaulted and slain near here Thursday while on her way to school. The child's body, with the throat cut, was found yesterday in the shallow water of the Deep Snake river canyon.

With only one bare clue to aid searchers for their assassin, officers over southern Idaho have been asked to hold all suspects.

A man in striped overalls and wearing a machete was reported by a motorist as having been seen walking eastward along the Oregon shoreline railroad tracks near the scene of the girl's murder at about the time it is supposed to have been committed Thursday morning.

CABARET FIRE TOLL 20; 12 MORE FEARED DYING

Investigation Continues as Owner Is Held Under $25,000 Bond.

Detroit, September 21.—(AP)—The fire which early Friday morning burst suddenly in on more than 150 pleasure seekers in the Study Club, where the 46 injured were taken on Friday morning it was reported that eight had been discharged while 12 were considered to have doubtful chances of recovery.

ATLANTA PLANNERS TO CONSIDER ZONE CHANGES MONDAY

Several proposed changes in Atlanta's zoning ordinances will be before the city planning commission at a meeting slated for 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in Mayor I. N. Ragdale's suite at the city hall.

The following changes will be up for consideration:

To change from dwelling house district to business district property situated on the east side of Confederate avenue, S. E., approximately 300 feet south of Delmar avenue, extending to Home avenue.

To change from dwelling house district to business district property known as No

W.C.T.U. Pledges Continued Aid in Dry Enforcement In Letter to President

Message of Greeting From Hoover to Convention Is Read; Big Series of Rallies Planned.

Indianapolis, September 21.—(AP)—The Women's Christian Temperance Union in national convention here today replied to President Hoover's letter of greeting by pledging to him the continuance of the organization's efforts to promote law observance.

"We further pledge," the reply stated, "the active support of our organization in making known the truth about the benefits of prohibition by the systematic distribution of literature, by public meetings and by rallying the citizenship to the support of the government."

President's Letter Read.
In a letter of greeting which was read to the convention yesterday, President Hoover said "too many people have come to rely wholly on the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence." The chief executive said he was daily impressed with the great need for extended work of education, in the moral, physical and economic benefits of temperance.

The text of the convention's reply to the letter of greeting from President Hoover follows:
"The National Women's Christian Temperance Union, in annual convention in the city of Indianapolis with delegates in attendance from 44 states of the Union, from Porto Rico and the District of Columbia, with visiting members from Argentina, India and Japan, greatly appreciate the message you have sent us through our president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole. We are in full accord with your recognition of the need for an extended work of education, knowing that the law alone is insufficient.

Grateful Appreciation.
"We record our grateful appreciation of your splendid leadership in behalf of child welfare and for world peace. We pledge to you continuance of our efforts to promote law observance. We further pledge the active support of our organization in making known the truth about the benefits of prohibition by the systematic distribution of literature, by public meetings and by rallying the citizenship to the support of the government."

"Your message cheered our hearts and strengthened our hands. We will carry on, knowing that eternal vigilance is the price of prohibition."

Dr. Len M. Hutchins, director of the department of medical temperance, in giving his report to the convention this forenoon, asserted that prescribing whisky as medicine is one of the greatest frauds foisted upon the American public.

"There is absolutely no need for whisky in the treatment of any disease, at any age, in any climate," Dr. Hutchins said.

Thousands of persons have become addicted to liquor through the use of alcohol in "household remedies," the speaker said.

The delegates were prepared to pay tribute to Miss Frances E. Willard, who was elected national president here 50 years ago. A memorial tablet to Miss Willard will be unveiled in the rotunda of the Indiana state capitol tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., W. C. T. U. national president, will present the bronze plaque of Miss Willard, designed by Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor, to the state of Indiana.

Fine Livestock Exhibits at Southeastern Fair Promised by Judge John Candler, Chairman

Continued Fair Weather Seen For City Today

Chances for continued fair weather and a slight increase in temperature here today are excellent, according to the official forecast of C. F. von Hermann, local meteorologist, but he made it very plain that the increase would be so slight as to be almost imperceptible.

A mercury range from 55 to 75 is his guess for today, while Saturday the mercury started its climb at 54 degrees and was expected to climb slightly over 70 before settling down once more.

FASTER TRAINS, ST. LOUIS-MEXICO, TO BEGIN TODAY

Mexico City, September 21.—(AP)—The Missouri Pacific Railway Company has announced effective tomorrow passenger train service between Mexico City and St. Louis, Mo., will feature faster schedules and the elimination of long border halts for customs inspections which will be conducted aboard running trains.

Through daily trains to St. Louis by way of Laredo, Texas, will leave Mexico City 12 hours later than at present, and arrive in St. Louis at practically the same time as at present schedules. The time between Mexico City and New York thus will be cut to 86 hours.

GIRL COMMUNISTS ARRESTED AT ARMY POST IN ILLINOIS

Chicago, September 21.—(AP)—Two girl members of the young communists league were held to the grand jury today by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on charges of entering a government reservation for unlawful purposes.

The girls, Sandy Willman, 18, and Ann Leggett, 19, were arrested at Fort Sheridan, United States army post, two weeks ago while distributing communist literature among the soldiers.

Judge John S. Candler's profession is the law, his philanthropy is education and his hobby is dairy farming, as witness the pictures above, taken at his place near Decatur. On the top left is Glennwood's Rena, a Guernsey cow that has produced more than 12,000 pounds of milk in a year. At the top right is a five-month-old Guernsey bull calf, which the judge is saving to sell to some Georgia county at a nominal price to use for cross-breeding with common dairy stock. Below is Wiley Bright's Holliston Bessie, a two-year-old Guernsey cow containing more of the famous "May Rose" strain of Guernsey blood than any other animal on the judge's farm. Lots of people try to buy the milk from "Miley Bright," the name of the judge's dairy, but nobody can get it but Wesley Memorial hospital.

Although the entry lists do not close until September 28, the exhibits already entered are so large in number and of such high quality as to make it certain that the livestock department of the forthcoming Southeastern fair will be the best in the history of the enterprise, it was announced Saturday by Judge John S. Candler, chairman of the livestock department of the fair and a vice president of the Southeastern Fair Association. He was especially gratified, he said, over the large number of exhibits that have been entered by 4-H Club boys over Georgia.

Another important exhibit just received was from Colonel Luke Lea, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, who is sending a herd of fine Hereford beef cattle from his famous cattle farm.

The industrial department of the fair is likewise making rapid progress. Troy G. Chastain, who has charge of the exhibits to be made by Kiwanis clubs over the state, of the outstanding products of their respective home towns and cities, announced Saturday that the clubs are responding so rapidly that the Atlanta Kiwanis Club has been obliged to take 50 per cent additional space to accommodate them.

Judge Candler on Saturday gave out the following review of the livestock department:
"The cattle department of the Southeastern fair this year bids fair to be the best we have ever had. The time for making entries of the various cattle exhibits does not expire until the 28th day of September, yet from the many applications made already for space and from entry blanks, it would seem that on the opening day of the fair we will have many entries of both dairy and beef cattle."

"The exhibits of beef cattle will probably be the best that the fair has ever had. Herds of Herefords from Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Tennessee seem to be reasonably certain. For the last few years the beef cattle-raising in Georgia has not been kept up as formerly, but recently the southern part of the state has been taking great interest in stocking the farms with Hereford and Polled Angus cattle, and doubtless it is for this reason that so many of the owners of large beef cattle herds are looking in this direction, and we think will have good exhibits at the fair."

"In the dairy cattle already are assured fine herds from at least a dozen of the best Guernsey and Jersey herds in the country."
"The Emmanine herd of the J. C. Penny Guernsey farm in New York have already entered a large herd of the best cattle. Mileybright farm and the L. C. Fischer herd, both local Guernsey herds, will have entries that will be entirely creditable to this section."

"The Jersey herds from two of our largest college herds will be represented, as will also the Pebble Hill Jersey, of Thomasville, Ga. The Berry School herd is one of the greatest and best herds of Jerseys in the country, and it will be on hand with its usual fine exhibits."

"The hog barns are assured of the usual lot of thoroughbred Durocs, Hampshires, Berkshires and Poland Chinas."
"Professor Hugh Van Pelt, of Iowa, has been secured to judge the dairy cattle. The judging will start on Tuesday."

HUGHES TO SPEAK FOR LAGUARDIA IN NEW YORK RACE

New York, September 20.—(AP)—Charles E. Hughes, justice of the world court at The Hague, returned with his wife and daughter from Europe today on board the liner Rotterdam.

Mr. Hughes declined to discuss the world court but expressed much interest in the coming city election and announced that he would strongly support F. H. LaGuardia, republican nominee for mayor.

He announced he would make a few speeches in LaGuardia's behalf, although he "would not have much time."

HUSBAND, FORCED TO LIVE IN BARN, SEEKS DIVORCE

Knoxville, Tenn., September 21.—(AP)—W. T. Mynatt concluded that after nearly 40 years of marriage he didn't care to sleep in the barn.

A divorce suit filed here said that some years ago his wife created an unpleasant atmosphere about the house and forced him to pass his nights in the barn. He said he left when a waving butcher knife enforced the barn ruling.

SECRETARY GOOD GOES TO HOSPITAL TO SPEND WEEK

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—Secretary Good today was admitted to Walter Reed hospital to undergo treatment for a severe attack of neuritis in his right arm.

The secretary of war returned here yesterday from Albany, N. Y., where he addressed the Intra-Coastal Waterways Association.

On the advice of his personal physician and army physicians he entered Walter Reed early today. He probably will remain there for a week.

$50 FINE PAID BY HELEN HERTZ FOR AUTO CRASH

Chicago, September 21.—(AP)—Miss Helen Hertz, debutante daughter of John D. Hertz, former president of the Yellow Cab Company, was fined $50 today for driving through a stop light in suburban Evanston July 10, when her car struck another car and seriously injured Mrs. Dorothy Wilcox, 29, member of a socially prominent North Shore family.

Miss Hertz was freed of criminal prosecution when the state agreed to drop a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Neither girl attended the trial.

ENTRY LIST MOUNTING FOR CHATTANOOGA TRIP TO OPPOSE DENEEN

Many Autos To Take Part in Motorcade, Celebrating Road Opening.

The entry list of automobiles for the motorcade to Chattanooga, October 22, to celebrate the completion of the paving of the Atlanta-Chattanooga highway, is mounting daily, according to officials of Atlanta Motor Club.

Reports from over the state indicate an increasing interest in the trip to Chattanooga, which will be an all-day affair. After leaving Atlanta the party will stop in Dalton, at midday, to enjoy a barbecue, staged by the Dalton Civic Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce. On reaching Chattanooga an entertainment will be given the party atop Lookout mountain.

BIGGEST SEASON SEEN FOR GEORGIA WOMAN'S COLLEGE

Milledgeville, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—The Georgia State College for Women here has the largest number of students in its history. The students at the college now number about 1,600. In spite of the increased numbers, work was rapidly organized last week, and classes got under way Thursday. Regular work is being carried on at the college.

There are many new teachers on the faculty of the college this year, and 40 of the old teachers have been working on their higher degrees at various universities during the summer. Dr. J. L. Beeson, president of the institution, said students had shown an admirable spirit and that everything indicated that this would be the best year the college had known.

A number of new courses are being offered this semester. There were so many students in the training school of the college that 75 new desks had to be ordered by wire to take care of the increase.

FORMER DALTON WOMAN PASSES

Dalton, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—After a brief illness, Mrs. W. J. Reeder, of Spartanburg, S. C., died in a hospital at Greenville, S. C., this morning.

Mrs. Reeder, as Miss Belle McCarty, member of a pioneer family of this section, was born and reared in Dalton. She is survived by her husband, one brother, W. S. McCarty, of Dalton.

Mark Hanna's Daughter Will Make Race for Senate.

Chicago, September 21.—(United News).—Formal announcement of her candidacy for the republican nomination for United States senate is about to be made by Ruth Hanna McCormick.

Then will begin what promises to be one of the most fascinating political fights since women became eligible for public office.

At the knee of her father, the famous Mark Hanna, of Ohio, and later through association with her husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick, Ruth Hanna learned the fundamentals of practical politics early in life.

She was a young girl in 1896 when her father conducted the "front porch" campaign at Canton, Ohio, which put McKinley in the White House and won for Mark Hanna the name of "president-maker." She accompanied Hanna on his political trips and attended many of his conferences, learning at first hand the rudiments of political strategy by which she now hopes to unseat one of Illinois' most popular senators, Charles S. Deneen.

Action is a keynote of her political strategy the same as placid benevolence is a keynote of Deneen's.

Mrs. McCormick is eagerly cordial to callers at her office. Her face breaks into a cheerful smile and her brown eyes look intently at the prospective constituent. Her chin is firm, her teeth glistening white, and her dark hair streaked with gray.

Behind the Deneen-McCormick fight is more than a political tilt between a famous man and a famous woman politician. There is a hint of reprisal in the fact that Deneen, after a notable political career in Illinois, beat Mrs. McCormick's husband for the United States senate. Mrs. McCormick will be paying off an old score if she can regain that seat now in her own name.

Mrs. McCormick is not a feminist. She cares no more for women's rights than for men's, although she became an active suffragist in 1913. Almost all her life she has done a man's work. She lists her occupations as "farmer, politician and publisher."

She owns a dairy in Rockford and a 2,400-acre dairy farm near Byron.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced, but interment probably will be in West View cemetery, at Dalton.

PAINS

THERE is no need to suffer from headache—nor neuritis or neuralgia—longer than it takes to invoke the aid of Bayer Aspirin. These tablets are an effective antidote for the most acute pain; and the quickest means of breaking up a summer cold. Perfectly harmless to anybody, for doctors will tell you they do not depress the heart. So women need not hesitate to use them on days which would otherwise be fraught with pain. Just be certain to get genuine Aspirin—it has Bayer on the box and on every tablet.

ASPIRIN

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetlicacidester of Salicylicacid

Safely Transferred! Through 17 States, Over 3,000 Miles

Such is the unprecedented feat recently accomplished by one of the vans of the Walker Storage & Van Company of the Allied Van Line organization.

On September 1st, the van left the city of Atlanta and proceeded to Gadsden, Ala., loading the contents of an eight (8) room house and proceeded on to Chicago, Ill., where these goods were delivered. It was immediately reloaded in Chicago with other consignments of household goods and dispatched to Washington, D. C. From Washington, D. C., they traveled empty to Elizabeth, N. J., fourteen (14) miles from New York City, and then again reloaded this time the household effects of Mr. George Sebold, vice president of the Walker Storage & Van Company, and delivered these goods in Atlanta on September 17th. The van covered over 3,000 miles in a period of 16 days, and traveled through 17 states. Two drivers were used on this trip with an average speed of 25 miles an hour throughout its travels.

The goods in transit rode through in splendid shape, due to the low pressure upon which this truck is mounted. The body itself has a capacity of 1,000 cubic feet in which the contents of a 7 or 8-room house can easily be loaded.

The Walker Storage & Van Company is a part of a chain organization servicing household goods in moving, packing and storing throughout the entire South.

Accessories after the fashionable fact!

MANY an otherwise smart frock has lost caste by associating with the wrong accessories! Many a smart ensemble has been ruined by hose a shade too light for the gloves, or a bag that clashed with the hat in question!

At Allen's, in the Accessory Shop on the Street Floor, accessories are assembled with due regard for each other as well as for their intrinsic worth and chic!

GLOVES
In the matter of gloves Allen's excels! It is just as important to have the right shades in Kayser's new washable fabric gloves as in Chanel's marvelous French kid gauntlets! We do, at Allen's!

JEWELRY

J. M. High Co. Will Observe Forty - Seventh Anniversary With Sale Starting Monday

Whitehall Street Department Store Announces Event With 12-Page Section in The Constitution

Specializing in style and concentrating on low prices, the J. M. High Company, widely-known Whitehall street department store, will launch a gigantic sale Monday in observance of its forty-seventh anniversary.

In this issue of The Constitution is a 12-page section setting out the offerings of the more than 60 departments included in the store and showing the advantages that may be realized in it.

The store management feels that it is offering the residents of this section a great opportunity to make purchases at a big saving during this sale, and announces that it takes much pleasure in being in a position to do this.

For many years the store has been regarded as one of Atlanta's most reputable concerns, and as having gained for itself an excellent name for dependable dealing and rendering service to its customers.

Newest Merchandise.

The merchandise that has been included in this sale, according to A. R. Dorsen, general manager of the store, is the very newest and the very smartest that the approaching fall season has to offer.

Months of thought on the part of the management have been devoted to making plans for the sale and studying the fashions, so that the very newest things in all lines of merchandise offered would be available.

Heads of the various departments, under the direction of Mr. Dorsen, have accumulated their stocks from all of the big market centers of the country, and the management of the store is convinced that nothing has been left undone which might increase the advantages of the sale.

High's anniversary sale comes as an event, Mr. Dorsen explains, in which the owners of the store make an effort to show their appreciation for the confidence placed in them by their customers, expressed in the purchases made throughout the rest of the year.

Manufacturers Co-operate.

"Because of this," Mr. Dorsen continued, "special concessions as to prices are made by manufacturers in numerous instances, and we are enabled to offer our customers high quality merchandise at extremely reasonable prices."

"Not only do the manufacturers make price concessions, but they invited our buyers to personally select the merchandise that is going into this sale. Only when this is considered is it possible to understand how we can make the offer."

"Each year since the sales were inaugurated, they have been getting greater and greater. The one last fall was by far the most successful we have ever held, and we are expecting the one this year to be even greater."

As a courtesy to the charge customers, Mr. Dorsen announces that all purchases made during the anniversary sale will be withheld from the statements rendered on the first of October and not sent out until November.

To avoid parking troubles, the store has made arrangements for their customers to leave their cars at either Bell Brothers' or Hunter's garages, on Pryor street between Alabama and Hunter streets, without any charge to them.

GALLSTONES KILL MILLIONS ANNUALLY

According to eminent medical authorities, Gallstones exact even a greater toll of lives than modern warfare. It is estimated that every year millions of people die directly or indirectly from Gallstones or kindred ailments. An old German doctor, Dr. Hildebrand, devoted years in an effort to find a Gallstone cure. His efforts were spured on by the fact that he was a sufferer himself. After numerous experiments he at last found a treatment that cured him of his Gallstones. The old doctor then prescribed this treatment to other sufferers. The amazing results they report is convincing evidence of the merit of his treatment. For a limited time through the Dr. Hildebrand Laboratories, Dept. 19-A, 155 N. Union Ave., Chicago, Ill., sufferers everywhere may obtain a test of this marvelous treatment free. Anyone troubled with Gallstones, Liver or Stomach ailments should send their name at once.—(adv.)

Herbert Saul, manager of the men's and boys' clothing and furnishing department of Saul's, Inc., a new department store which opened last week at 91-93 Whitehall street. Mr. Saul has been in the clothing business for a number of years, giving him the experience necessary to supervise his department. Abe S. Saul, a brother, is general manager of the store, and he will be assisted by W. H. Brittain, who has been in the retail department stores of Atlanta for many years.

BARKER SEES HOPE FOR FARM SURVEY

B. S. Barker, executive vice president and manager of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Saturday reported what he considered considerable progress in the chamber's effort to obtain a complete agricultural survey for Georgia.

R. W. Dunlap, acting secretary of agriculture, wrote from Washington to the Atlanta chamber, saying that he is in full accord with the idea of ascertaining the fundamental facts regarding the agriculture of the south as the basis for formulating an agricultural policy. He stated that the agricultural department recognizes the need for specific information as applicable to specific states and areas, and believes that there is already a considerable body of information available.

Will Select Leaders.

Mr. Dunlap suggested that a first step be the selection of men well acquainted with agricultural problems in Georgia to form a committee on this work, and said that the state agricultural institutions could doubtless be of considerable assistance.

The funds and personnel the federal government have available for this work are somewhat limited, he stated, but if the state institutions will assist, he believes it would be possible to make a study which would form the basis for a sound agricultural policy for Georgia.

Cobb Is Appointed.

C. A. Cobb, editor of the Southern Ruralist, has been appointed by the Chamber of Commerce as chairman of the agricultural committee, and will gather around him a strong group to undertake the study of the situation and get the work under way.

The directors of the Atlanta chamber on August 14, set in motion the plans for such a survey, by resolutions sent Arthur M. Hyde, United States secretary of agriculture. Since then the idea has been endorsed by Senators Harris and George; eight other Georgia chambers of commerce have adopted resolutions urging such a survey, and more than a hundred newspapers in the state have given favorable publicity to the project.

DELTA SIGMA PI FRATERNITY OPENS CONVENTION OCT. 5

Delegates from 11 leading universities in the southeast will gather in Atlanta for the southern provincial convention of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity, opening for a two-day session at the 22-story Grede hotel Saturday, October 5. The Kappa chapter of Georgia Tech and the Atlanta Alumni Club will act as hosts.

In addition to business sessions the convention will be featured by a banquet, dance and football party at the Tech-Mississippi Aggies game. H. G. Wright, grand secretary and treasurer of Chicago, will preside. Officers of the local chapter in charge of arrangements are L. J. Cole, head master; E. E. Gilbert, N. W. Pettys, Alex. Lindholm, W. H. Blodgett and Charles McChagan, assisted by W. B. Pope, president; J. D. Smith and Jack Estes of the Atlanta Alumni Club.

MOVING PERMIT LAW, HELD LEGAL, IS BEING ENFORCED

Walter C. Taylor, city clerk, Saturday was enforcing Atlanta's moving permit law following action of the Fulton county superior court in ruling the charter amendment passed by the Georgia assembly legal and constitutional.

Mr. Taylor's action was based on a ruling of City Attorney James L. Mayson.

Burgess & Dillard, attorneys for a group of moving companies who attacked the measure in the courts, were preparing to file an appeal to the Georgia courts of appeals, but in the meantime all moving companies must secure the permits before moving families in Atlanta. The permits under the law cost 25 cents each and must be obtained three days before the moving takes place.

MASONS OF TALBOT, TAYLOR COUNTIES TO HOLD MEETING

Columbus, Ga., September 21.—(AP) Members of the Columbus Masonic lodge have been advised that a convention of Masons from Talbot and Taylor counties will be held at Butler, Ga., September 27. Representatives of the grand lodge of Georgia also will be in attendance, it was said. The master's degree will be conferred at a night session by a team from the Columbus lodge.

LOCAL ELKS TO HOLD INITIATION THURSDAY

Members Elected During the Last Six Weeks Will Be Taken in at Meeting.

Atlanta Elks of Lodge No. 78 will hold an initiation Thursday night of all members elected during the last six weeks. It was announced Saturday. Initiations will be held on the fourth Tuesday night in each month of the fiscal year.

Fall activities were started here Thursday night with a meeting presided over by Past Exalted Ruler Herbert B. Kennedy and a full program for the forthcoming gathering is scheduled, it is said.

Application has been made by the Atlanta lodge to organize a junior group known as "The Antlers of the Atlanta Lodge No. 78," following the recent action of the Grand Lodge in providing for the formation of such groups of boys between the ages of 15 and 21.

Walter P. Andrews, grand exalted ruler, is in Chicago for a conference with newly appointed deputy grand exalted rulers, and the year's program for the national body is being considered, it is said.

The ladies of the Kle Club are planning to hold a dance at the Elks' home, 736 Peachtree street, N. E., Friday night.

General Business Indicates Bright Prospects in South

Exceptional possibilities are in prospect for the National Bellas Hess store in Atlanta, judging from the first few opening days last week, in the opinion of W. B. Jones, southern district manager, with headquarters in this city.

Mr. Jones speaks enthusiastically as to the general outlook and business prospects for fall throughout the south and particularly in Atlanta. Although the store here has just opened as a National Bellas Hess house, it has been operated for some time under this management as the L. F. M. store, according to Mr. Jones, and has led the southern district in the increase in sales for the past three months and is expected to maintain its leadership.

The success of any store, Mr. Jones says, depends entirely on the service it renders, environment, and most important of all, the merchandise it offers. He feels that the National Bellas Hess organization has demonstrated its qualifications along these lines.

A number of new departments will be added to the store later, Mr. Jones says, and the National Bellas Hess organization will take an active part in civic affairs here.

The National Bellas Hess Company has in operation 52 retail stores throughout the south and middle west in addition to two mail order houses in New York and Kansas City, according to Mr. Jones, in which the volume of sales this year will exceed $75,000,000. The mail order business is one of the oldest and foremost in the United States. It is the only exclusive wearing apparel mail order house and has been in existence for 40 years.

BETTER FILMS BODY AT THURSDAY MEET TO HEAR NEWTON

Dr. Lonie Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, will be the special speaker at the September meeting of the Atlanta Better Films committee at the Ansley hotel at 12-30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, when the luncheon program will be devoted to the subject of "The Use of Motion Pictures by the Churches."

The committee on church co-operation in the better films organization is headed by Dr. W. H. Faust, representing the Ministers' Evangelical Association, with James Morton of the church council as assistant chairman. On the reception committee for the luncheon, with Mrs. Earl Quillian, representative of the Druid Hills Methodist church as chairman, are Mrs. H. J. Barson, representing the Catholics of the Sacred Heart parish; Mrs. John Rowlett, Liberal Christian; Mrs. H. D. Coutts, Pentecost Christian church; Mrs. C. I. Cowlen, Covenant Presbyterian; Mrs. W. L. McDonald, Park Street Methodist; Rev. Wilkes Collins, Wesley Memorial; Mrs. J. M. Hulsey, Georgia Avenue Presbyterian; Mrs. W. R. Jones, St. Paul's Methodist; Mrs. R. L. Reilly, West End Christian, and Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, Central Congregational.

SPECIAL SESSION SEEN FOR CITY HALL BIDS

Mayor Ragsdale Planning Call for September 25 to Consider Furnishings.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale announced Saturday that he probably will call a special meeting of city council for Wednesday, September 25, to open bids for interior equipment for Atlanta's new $1,000,000 city hall now in completion at Washington and Mitchell streets.

Bids for furniture and office equipment needed for occupancy of the new building have been advertised for the past several days, and the time limit expires Tuesday.

Members of the special city hall committee, headed by Councilman Howard C. McCutcheon, of the second ward, Saturday formally requested the Washington, September 21.—(AP)—Although their company contributed to the $25,000 paid William B. Shearer for his services at the ill-fated Geneva naval conference, both Charles M. Schwab and Eugene Grace testified today to the senate committee investigating the situation that they did not know of the propagandist's employment until after the parley collapsed.

The former is chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, parent company to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, which shared the $25,000 Shearer payment with the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Corporation and the New York Shipbuilding Company. Grace is president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

Unwise, Schwab Says. Schwab deplored Shearer's employment as "unwise." Asked by the senate committee what he had done about it when informed of the employment, Schwab said he had left that to Grace.

Grace said he had called S. W. Wakeman, vice president of his company, the man who hired Shearer on behalf of his company, and told him he thought the action "rather unwise and a thing I don't approve."

Wakeman is still in the employ of the Bethlehem company and the committee room ready to testify. "He will be called Monday."

Before getting under way today, Chairman Borah, of the committee, called upon Norman F. Parker, vice president and treasurer of the New York Shipbuilding Company, a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation, to produce the records showing the exact nature of the payments from the $143,000 fund raised by the shipbuilders to be used for work at Washington when the Jones-White merchant marine act was passed a year ago. Parker agreed to obtain the data.

Autos Hurtle Through Fence During Race at Mineola; Five Persons May Die.

Mineola, N. Y., September 21.—(AP)—Eleven persons were injured, three of them critically, in two accidents which occurred within a few minutes of each other during the speedway races at the Mineola fair grounds this afternoon.

Ten were hurt when a speeding car plunged over the fence into a group of spectators. The other victim was James Gleason, 30, race driver of Philadelphia, whose car overturned on "Death Curve" a short time before the second crash.

All of the injured were taken to the Nassau county hospital. Most of the spectators who were in the path of the speeding cars suffered mainly from shock, cuts and bruises.

Driver Critically Injured. Gleason received a fractured skull, a broken jaw and all of his teeth were knocked out. His condition was reported critical.

George Condon, driver of the car which hurtled off the track into the crowd of spectators, was uninjured. His machine had collided with one in front of him during the fourth race, and the steering mechanism broke, allowing the car to run wild.

Gleason's car was forced off the track in the third speed event of the afternoon by a race driver by Billy Arnold, of Indianapolis. The accident occurred on a curve where several drivers had been killed in past races.

POWER COMPANY TO BUILD BIG ELECTRIC PLANT

Development Near Milledgeville Will Be Largest Project of Kind in Central Georgia.

Milledgeville, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—Plans for immediate construction of a new hydro-electric power development, which will be the largest in central Georgia and which will involve construction of a 12,000-acre storage lake, the largest in the state, are announced by Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company. The development will be on the Oconee river at Furman Shoals, four miles north of this city.

Work is expected to be started within less than a month and the plant is expected to be completed and in operation in the summer of 1931. The development will have a capacity of 60,000 horsepower and will be of greater magnitude than any of the Georgia Power Company's system, with the exception of the Tallulah Falls and Tagula developments.

Power from this development will feed into the existing network of 110,000 and 44,000-volt transmission lines in the Macon and Augusta divisions of the Georgia Power Company, furnishing many communities with a new source of power.

The cities of Milledgeville, Eatonton, Sparta, Macon, Augusta, Dublin, Wrightsville, Vidalia, Swainsboro, Metter, Statesboro, Millen, Louisville, Hazlehurst, Barley, Clayton, McRae and other cities in the south and central Georgia section will be particularly benefited by the new source of power.

In addition the communities served by the South Georgia Power Company, recently acquired by Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, which also acquired the Georgia Power Company, will be especially benefited by the development. These include Abbeville, Albany, Americus, Arabi, Ashburn, Baconton, Buena Vista, Butler, Byronville, Cobb, Cochran, Cordele, Crenshaw, Cuthbert, Dawson, Dorso, Dooling, Elberton, Findlay, Flomville, Ft. Gaines, Georgetown, Graves, Leesburg, Lenox, Leslie, Leesville, Lumpkin, Marshallville, Metter, Milledgeville, Ocilla, Oglethorpe, Pelham, Penix, Perry, Pinehurst, Pitts, Potteryville, Poulton, Putney, Reynolds, Richland, Rochelle, Sasser, Seville, Shellman, Smithville, Sumner, Sylamore, Sylvester, Tifton, Ty Ty, Unadilla and Vienna.

Announcement of the Oconee river development comes on the heels of inauguration of construction on a great steam-electric generating plant at Atlanta, the Chattahoochee river. The steam plant to be known as Plant Atkinson, in honor of H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of directors of the company, will have an initial capacity of 100,000 horsepower and an ultimate capacity of 400,000 horsepower.

The new plant will be fed by a vast lake impounded by a solid concrete dam and earth abutments which will be 2,000 feet, nearly three-fifths of a mile, long and 90 feet high. This will be the largest power development in the company. It will have an available capacity of 5,500,000,000 cubic feet of water.

This great new lake will, in fact, have a larger volume of stored water than all of the company's north Georgia storage lakes combined. It will cover an area of 12,000 acres. It will be chiefly in Baldwin, Hancock and Putnam counties, with perhaps small portions in Jones county and Greene county.

Two generators will be installed. Each will give added assurance that the system of power transmission will be uninterrupted service will be offered by the company. The 60,000 horsepower from the Oconee development generators will go into the high tension transmission lines already serving Georgia and will be augmented by the great later-developed system of power transmission in the southeast of which the first unit is a part.

Torch Slayer's Defense Remains Uncertain After Full Week of Trial, Resumes Monday.

White Plains, N. Y., September 21.—(United News.)—A strange defense of killing a person to save her from herself is one of the probabilities when Earl Francis Peacock, impetuous young radio salesman, testifies next week in his attempt to escape the electric chair.

The week in his trial for killing his wife, Dorothy, has presented a series of conflicting emotions for the court crowd. Peacock's attorney admitted the boy had choked his wife to death, then had lingered over the task to make certain she was dead, after which he buried the body. There was no attempt to deny the crime, and mitigation must come from three sources:

1. Self-defense after she had started a quarrel about what she called the "dump" in which they lived.

2. Emotional insanity brought on by the wife's alleged infidelity.

3. That he had provoked her.

In those last two come the chance of Peacock attempting to save himself by a plea that his wife's death resulted from his trying to save her from herself. The victim's life has been opened in court—a love life that allegedly went beyond the border line of propriety.

Letters have been introduced to show Mrs. Peacock had written and confided in a good-looking young Baltimore lad; statements have been made, without proof, that she spent nights out with the men and that she at one time—just before her death—was with two men.

But Peacock has not been spared. Frances Newman, a night club girl who spoke unashamedly of living with men, told how she had spent several nights at Peacock's apartment when he discussed his wife. He even told of his wife's alleged infidelity and mentioned "getting" his wife and her lover. The young husband gave Frances dresses from his wife's wardrobe, one of which the little chorus girl wore on the stand yesterday because it was the only "decent thing she had to wear."

The state has just about concluded its damaging case and Mrs. Peacock, the boy's mother, will resume the stand Monday. Peacock probably will be the first witness for the defense.

GAVE BOOZE AWAY, SHERIFF RESIGNS

Tennessee Officer Quits When Lawyers Advise Illegal To Help Ailing Friends.

Knoxville, Tenn., September 21.—(AP)—Advised by attorneys that the giving away of liquor for medicinal purposes constituted a breach of duty, Sheriff Chester R. Hackney, of Knox county, resigned today in the courtroom prepared for the hearing of a motion to suspend him.

Sheriff Hackney abandoned his announced intention to retain office until a meeting of the county court October 7. When circuit court opened for the hearing, his attorneys and Attorney-General J. F. Bibb, who filed the motion and an immediate resignation and to drop the motion and ouster. The ouster would have been tried next January.

Coroner W. S. McCarty took over the sheriff's duties in the courtroom, replaced the sheriff's brother, Chief Deputy Carl Hackney, and made several other changes in the force. He is to serve until the county court meeting next month, when a successor to fill out Sheriff Hackney's term will be elected by the court.

Insisting he was "a victim of circumstances," Sheriff Hackney said he had done no deliberate wrong in honoring prescriptions for confiscated liquor which he said had been written by reputable physicians. He said on several occasions he also had given liquor to sick friends without prescription.

The attorney-general had charged misappropriation of county funds in addition to allegations that confiscated liquor had been misused. Hackney denied the former charges.

Reported Renewed Negotiations Taking Place Between Association and Venables.

Reports Saturday of renewed negotiations looking to a way out of the impasse in the affairs of the Stone Mountain Memorial brought revived hope that agreements might be reached at an early date which would lead to the resumption of the work on the monument which was discontinued more than 15 months ago.

Indications are that the conferences and various public statements which have followed the statement two weeks ago by President Phillip Alston, in which he cited the probability of a prolonged continuance of the delay in resumption of work, have resulted in a considerable clearing up of the memorial situation.

Both the Stone Mountain Memorial Association and the Venable family, donors of the site of the memorial, have indicated heartfelt desire for the work to be begun again at the earliest possible moment, and negotiations to that end have been frequent.

Admission of the inability of the association to complete the memorial under the present conditions, the declaration of Sam H. Venable of confidence in his ability to complete the memorial if the site is returned to him at this time, and the statement of Gutsmo Borglum that he would under no circumstances destroy the work done already by Augustus Lukeman, have been the high points of the developments of the past two weeks.

Raising of Funds. President Alston, of the Chamber of Commerce, in his statement of two weeks ago, frankly pointed out the impossibility of raising the $150,000 necessary to complete the three central figures of the memorial in the length of time left under the contract by which the site will revert to the Venables unless these figures are completed within two years.

Mr. Alston attributed this inability to raise the necessary money to the injunction suits now in force which prevent the city and county from contributing to the fund, and to the attitude of the public generally.

He suggested the formation of a new board to endeavor to raise the fund, which the Venables have made it indicated its acquiescence, depending upon the agreement of the Venables. Sam H. Venable, speaking for the donors of the site, issued a statement in which he also agreed to co-operate if a new body of representative citizens could be effected to take over the work of completion of the memorial within the time limit of the agreement, but stated at the same time that if the site were returned to him now, instead of waiting for the expiration of the two-year contract, when it would automatically revert, if the central group is not completed by then, he was content that he could arrange for immediate resumption of work on the mountain.

Steady Progress Reported. Following these statements it is understood that a number of conferences have been held by representatives of the Venable family, the Memorial Association and the Chamber of Commerce, with the result that steady progress is reported to have been made toward a basis on which all can unite in the effort to secure the money necessary to complete the monument in the shortest length of time possible.

The reports Saturday that the conferences were continuing, with satisfaction, promised, were received by those directly interested and by the public generally, with expression of delight. It was felt that with the association in the attitude of willingness to turn its work over to another body to complete and with Mr. Venable satisfied that he could arrange for the early resumption of work, that there could be found some ground on which an agreement could be reached.

The news of the encouraging progress being made as a result of the numerous conferences was especially welcome in view of the large number of national conventions which are to be held in Atlanta during the next few months, to which thousands of delegates from all parts of the country, and representing every line of endeavor, will come.

Reaction Upon Visitors. Many of these delegates have received from their respective associations elaborate descriptions of the matter concerning the Stone Mountain Memorial and it is felt that if these representative business men from all sections of the country discover upon their arrival in Atlanta that not only has no work been done on the monument in 15 months, but that there is no prospect of resumption of work for another two years, the final completion of the memorial would be made considerably more difficult.

For this reason Chamber of Commerce leaders and city officials are especially pleased at the prospect presented of some definite agreement in the early future as the result of the developments of the past two weeks and the conferences which are still reported to be satisfactorily progressing.

WIDE NON-PARKING ZONE IS PROPOSED

Area To Extend Throughout Business District Will Be Asked by Cobb; Whitaker Criticizes Plan.

Establishment of a non-parking zone extending throughout the congested business district of the heart of Atlanta will be proposed in city council at its next regular meeting October 7, it was announced Saturday night by Councilman Robert M. Cobb, Jr., of the ninth ward.

The area would extend from Harris to Mitchell street and would include Broad, Forsyth, Peachtree, Whitehall and Pryor streets.

In announcing his intention to present the paper, Mr. Cobb declared the only way to solve the traffic problem in the congested area is to make it absolutely non-parking at all business hours.

The Cobb proposal that a non-parking zone be established came Saturday as a surprise as the traffic committee of council Thursday considered a plan which called for the appointment of a committee composed of representatives of city council, the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, the Georgia Power Company and others interested to study the situation. The committee would be named when council meets in its next regular session. Changes in the present parking ordinance, with exception of the west side of Pryor street from Peachtree to the viaduct, were deferred by the traffic committee last week that the only way would be a complete investigation and full consideration before any changes were made.

If the Cobb measure is passed, parking in the district will be barred from 6:30 o'clock in the morning until 6:30 o'clock at night, with the exception of Marietta street, where the present parking laws will remain effective. It was said that 22 council members will vote for the paper.

Whitaker Criticizes Plan. C. C. Whitaker, chairman of a special commission appointed by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale to study the problem, declared that the area included is too wide in scope, adding that he intends to hold a conference this week with officials of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, those most vitally interested in parking plan, to work out a system of non-parking thoroughfares.

"Although I feel that the non-parking lines should be drawn, I have agreed to hold it within the area as outlined," Mr. Cobb said. "I shall reserve the right, however, if amendments providing for broadening the territory are offered, to support them."

His opinion is that the limits should be extended to include Spring street and Central avenue. Mr. Whitaker told the traffic committee of city council last week that the only way to relieve the congestion is to establish non-parking zones. He declared that one-way streets are not feasible because many of them converge at "bottle necks" on Peachtree and Whitehall streets. The effort is to

GOV. ROOSEVELT AT WARM SPRINGS FOR 3-WEEK STAY

Warm Springs, Ga., September 21.—(AP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, arrived here tonight after a 45-mile automobile trip from Newnan, where they left the train that brought them from New York.

Governor Roosevelt was met at Newnan by Arthur E. Carpenter, business manager of Warm Springs; Dr. Leroy W. Hubbard, surgeon-in-chief at the health resort which the governor founded here, and other officials.

Immediately on his arrival in Warm Springs, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt retired to their cottage among the pines. During their three weeks stay, the governor will devote his time chiefly to taking exercise in the Warm Springs pool.

Accompanying the party were Miss M. A. Lehend, his personal secretary; a New York state trooper and a New York city private detective.

POSTOFFICE SITE SETTLEMENT SEEN

Two Government Officials Coming Here October 15 to Discuss Problem With Interested Parties.

Possibility of a settlement in the near future of the question of a site for Atlanta's new federal building was seen in the announcement Saturday by Postmaster E. K. Larzer that John W. Philp, assistant postmaster-general, and Perry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, would visit the city October 15 for a discussion of the problem.

In a letter received by Mr. Larzer it was stated that they would arrive in the afternoon and would leave that night for Richmond, Va., and hoped for an opportunity to talk with interested parties.

Funds for the construction of federal buildings are in charge of a committee made up of the secretary of the treasury, the postmaster-general and the director of the budget. Mr. Philp and Mr. Heath are making the trip here as representatives of this body. Mr. Heath is chairman of the subcommittee on postoffice buildings.

In a statement given out by Mr. Larzer some weeks ago he said that final action on the question of a site would have to wait to changes in the personnel of committees in Washington and that a definite decision would have to wait on the formation of a new group.

He is hopeful that this visit will result in some definite decision in the near future.

ATLANTA COLLEGES OPEN THIS WEEK

Increases in Attendance Will Be Limited, Due to Restrictions Imposed by Institutions.

Georgia School of Technology, Emory university and Oglethorpe university will begin the 1929-30 term this week. Registration of students is expected to show increases in all three institutions, although the number will be limited by college reductions.

Emory university's ninety-third scholastic year will get under way at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon with the registration of freshmen and the opening of the "freshmen week" program, which will last through Saturday.

Upperclassmen and professional students will not register until Monday, September 30, but already have arrived in advance of the freshmen for fraternity "rush" activities.

Inasmuch as the enrollment in many divisions of the university has been restricted for several years past, the size of the student body is not expected to show any great increase this year. The total enrollment in the entire university system will be limited, however, because of the new junior colleges at Oxford and Valdosta.

Junior College Opens. The new junior college on the old campus at Oxford opened for the first time last Wednesday with a registration of 60 freshmen. Only the first year of college work is being offered this year.

The Emory Junior college at Valdosta will open its second year next Wednesday, the day following freshmen registration on the main campus.

Among the important faculty changes this year is the promotion of Dr. Theodore H. Jack, formerly dean of the college of arts and sciences, will act as dean of the graduate school, in addition to continuing as head of the college faculty.

New faculty members taking their duties this fall are: Clark Warrington, of Columbia, associate professor of economics; Raymond R. Paty, of Emory and Columbia, associate professor of Bible and religious education; Leroy Loser of Boston university, assistant professor of philosophy; Paul M. Spurlin, of Emory, instructor in history, and James A. Hostman, of the University of Chicago, instructor in physics.

In the school of medicine, Dr. D. A. McGinty, of the University of Michigan, has been added to the faculty as assistant professor of physiology, and Dr. J. C. Norris, pathologist at the Emory division of Grady hospital, has been made assistant professor of public health.

Given Doctor's Degrees. On two members of the university faculty, doctor's degrees have been conferred during the summer: the Ph.D. on Mercer G. Evans, assistant professor of public health.

Gave $512,000 to Nice Italian for Dollar and Promise of $50,000 to Father.

WHALEN LECTURES BIG EXECUTIVES

Lad Wins Job by Flattery and Tries To Appease Hard-Boiled Cops by Fairy Tale.

New York, September 21.—(United News)—Milton Alter, 17-year-old broker's messenger, who got his job by flattering the newly elected president as a great big executive who knew how to do things in a great big way, stood revealed tonight as a boy who bartered away half a million dollars worth of negotiable securities for a new dollar bill, a trip to the movies and a vague promise that $50,000 would be given his father. And New York police were looking for a swartthy Fagin who also knows how to do great big things in a great big way.

Milton set the financial district on edge yesterday by disappearing with the $512,000 he had been sent to reclaim after paying off a loan of his firm, R. V. Hiscoc and company, at a bank. Late in the afternoon he called up from Brooklyn.

Tells Fairy Stories. All night long Milton regaled detectives with a fairy story, made the more fascinating with numerous variations. He had been kidnapped. The two nice Italians with a luxurious limousine and liveried chauffeur had done it. They drove all around town, even took him to the movies. Then they had dumped him out in Brooklyn. No, he hadn't talked to any of the innumerable traffic cops they passed, or made any fuss at the movies.

Hour after hour of questioning, however, brought Milton around to another story, a story which seemed more credible. A man named "Jack Rosen," who had long suggested to Milton a quick road to wealth, had induced him to part with the half million, had given him a dollar, and had released him for just what sort of a story to tell.

Whalen Lectures. So tonight the police were searching for Jack Rosen—24 or 25 years old, clean shaven and dark—whom the envious saw as a master mind who may even have got Milton his job for the purpose of making good use of him later. Meanwhile the financial district was pondering suggestions from Police Commissioner Whalen that it is altogether too careless in the way it permits boys to roam at large with fortunes in their pockets.

"The practice of permitting irresponsible boys to carry one half million dollars of negotiable securities should be stopped at once," Whalen said.

"The boy in question, Milton Alter, had no background of responsibility and his compensation of $15 per week did not warrant placing in his hands for transfer one-half million dollars of negotiable securities."

Flattered Executive. Police were interested, too, in Milton's story of how he got his job. He was working for a furrier on the East Side at $20 a week, he said, but there was no future in that. Wall Street was the place. So when he read that Stuart Edwards had been admitted to the firm of R. V. Hiscoc & Company, he wrote Stuart a letter of congratulation, confessing his own financial ambition and suggested that R. V. Hiscoc & Company might be in need of a bright young man.

That was only four weeks ago, and a few days later Milton went to work. Police thought they saw Jack Rosen's fingers in that pie, but Milton insisted his story was the ultimate one and true.

Shortly after he started to work, Milton said in his confession, he met Rosen, and the smooth stranger started working on him. But Milton paid no attention. Yesterday Rosen was working again. He followed Milton from bank to bank.

Rosen Vanishes. Finally, as Milton approached the Guaranty Trust Company, Rosen came up and talked to him.

"He asked me the amount of the loan and I told him that on other occasions I had carried larger amounts," Milton said. "Finally, after much persuasion, I told him the amount was $400,000. He said he needed money and that I should wait off with the loan and he then told me my father would receive $50,000 as my share. Then I finally consented."

So Milton went into the bank, paid the $400,000 loan with a certified check, got the $512,000 in securities and gave them to Rosen, who presented him a dollar for his trouble. Then they went uptown on the subway. Rosen left telling Milton to go to the movies and then call his employers, as he did.

Survey Visions Future City Composed of Giant Buildings Housing Entire Communities

Two-Fifths of a Mile Set as Safe Maximum Height But Half That Called More Economic.

New York, September 21.—(P)—Skyscrapers with about 150 floors, almost two-fifths of a mile high, or nearly four times the height of Washington monument, now can be built with safety.

But their "economic height," for the best rental profits, is around 75 stories. This economic top is limited at present in Chicago, Detroit, New York and possibly a few other American cities where land values are extremely high.

These statements summarize a report issued today by the American Institute of Steel Construction. It is based on two years' research to learn the skyscraper limit, and the "economic considerations" which "will be the determining factor in this as in other fields of human progress."

One Building to Block. The skyscraper forecast are of the present setback or tower architecture. In their probable spread is seen a modified type of big city, in which co-operative endeavor provides increased facilities for health and comfort. These changes are visualized by the director of the research, W. C. Clark, chief economist and vice president of S. W. Strauss & Company.

Each building is likely to occupy a full city block, he says. Costs and profits will dictate this. Each structure may house an almost complete small city. Street congestion should be decreased by substituting more "vertical traffic" for horizontal and by constructing elevated sidewalks and three or four-decked streets.

A way out of the poor light and ventilation of city canyons is seen by constructing air-conditioned control in a few years that will astound us, and which it will pay building owners to install. A few engineers already predict artificial lighting more satisfactory than that which is brought in windows. In 10 or 15 years it may be that offices of great corporations will occupy the lower floors of such buildings, and that there will be residences in the upper floors.

Earning Rate High. The institute report says that "buildings of 75 stories are not only economical but under certain conditions will return more on the investment than a building of 50 or 30 stories." The 75-story estimate is based on land values of more than $200 a square foot. The height of 75 stories is calculated to range from 880 to nearly 1,000 feet.

The report estimates the profits on eight imaginary skyscrapers, ranging from 10 to 75 floors, on land in the Grand Central section of New York costing exactly $200 a square foot. It finds the highest net profit, 10.24 per cent in a 63-story building, the next best 10.06 in 75 stories, 8.5 per cent for a 30-floor and 4.22 for a 10-story building. Mr. Clark said that were the estimates begun now instead of two years ago $400 per foot land probably would be chosen.

"The maximum return," he said, "is 'I think,' Mr. Clark says, 'that there will be a building of 75 stories and tall buildings are willing to admit.'"

Elevators Are Problem. The physical 150-story limit of two-fifths of a mile is not due to lack of structural steel strength above that height. Too much weight would be required in elevator cables, says the report, and the average human ear would not withstand the vibration in an elevator traveling at the speed required for service in a building more than 2,000 feet tall. This speed is estimated in excess of 1,500 feet a minute. Present elevator speeds are 750 to 800 feet.

The world's tallest structure is Eiffel tower, 999 feet. The tallest office building is the Woolworth, 792 feet with 58 stories. The Chicago tower is planned to rise 880 feet in 75 floors. The Chrysler building under construction in New York is estimated at 808 feet in 63 stories. Washington monument is 556 feet.

Blimp at St. Paul. St. Paul, Minn., September 21.—(P)—The army blimp TC-71 arrived at Fort Snelling shortly after 10 a. m. today from Scott field, Ill., to participate in military maneuvers. The dirigible had lost some time in hazy weather.

671 Men, Women Compose Governing Boards for Chest

Vital relations between the Community Chest and the life and interests of Atlanta are indicated in figures assembled Saturday by Frank Miller, executive director of the Chest, showing that 671 men and women compose the governing boards of the 39 agencies of social service supported through the Chest.

Mr. Miller's statement in this connection was made to urge public support of the Chest and its 39 societies in the campaign for subscriptions of which the preliminary phases have been under way some time. The public canvass will be held October 21 to 25.

"It will be seen that in its financial and social welfare work, the Chest has the benefit of direct support and control of a considerable body of interested and responsible persons," said Mr. Miller.

"The boards of the 39 agencies consist of 671 persons, 116 of whom serve on more than one agency board. Board members give considerable time to the management of these societies. Each board is represented on the board of the Community Chest, which has 105 members, one from each society and the remainder selected from citizens at large."

"These 39 societies have come into being through a relatively long period in the growth of Atlanta's population. They have been organized by interest, forward-looking citizens to meet recognized problems of need with helpful service. Most of them perform a specialized work in health, child care, training of youth and family relief. They have been supported through many years by devoted, generous persons on their boards and among the public who have come to regard them as expression of personal and social loyalty to the civic betterment of Atlanta."

"This group of 671 board members contribute to the Chest and receive reports of all its activities. They are concerned and identified with the coming campaign for funds as members of committees, solicitors, and team workers. Their service in this and all other respects is volunteer. They give their money, time and thought for the cause."

"Committed as they are to their own traditions and programs, and specializing in certain types of social work, these societies nevertheless through their staff officers and the executive director of the Chest co-operate in a common program in which each society takes its share of work for the needy. Unquestionably to the formation of the Chest originally to secure financial support must also be credited the accomplishment of another end, namely, a better understanding of the welfare needs of Atlanta and a more effective method of meeting those needs."

MUSCOGEE ESCAPE IN CAMP MUTINY IS RECAPTURED

Columbus, Ga., Sept. 21.—(P)—Niles Berry, who escaped during a "convict mutiny" at a Muscogee county camp near here Thursday, was captured by a posse about three miles north of Columbus today and returned to the camp.

Possemen said he surrendered without resistance, but that he still had a pistol he snatched from a guard when he escaped. James Crews, negro, who escaped at the same time Berry made his bid for liberty, was still at large and sought by posse today.

During the break for liberty J. M. Bray and J. S. Carswell, guards, were wounded, but were recovering today. James Harris, a convict wounded during the gunfire, was also believed recovering from a wound in the back of the head. He was in Muscogee county jail here.

FINAL TOBACCO TABLE SHOWS BIGGEST CROP

Year Was Much Better Than 1928—Sales Averaged 18.37 Cents Pound.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Final official figures on the 1929 Georgia tobacco crop, compiled by the state department of agriculture, revealed that the total crop of 90,743,520 pounds sold in this state, averaging 18.37 cents per pound, brought aggregate proceeds of $1,672,780.27. It was announced by the department Saturday.

These figures gave 1929 a healthy edge over 1928, gaining more than 5,000,000 pounds in the yield and nearly $1,000,000 in money. The 1928 total crop was about 85,000,000 pounds, for which total proceeds amounted to about $1,000,000.

The 1929 market also contributed toward adding to the Georgia farmers' wealth, the season's price averaging nearly six cents per pound higher than in 1928, when it was 12.78 cents per pound.

While the more than 90,000,000 pounds shown was marketed in Georgia, 2,570,000 pounds of this amount was grown in Florida, Alabama and South Carolina, leaving 88,160,554 actually raised and marketed in Georgia.

Douglas led the state's markets in tonnage for the season, with 10,840,937 pounds sold there at an average price of 18.05 cents per pound, bringing $2,021,339.17. Nashville ran high in the matter of average price with 21.10 cents per pound, at which rate $2,622,080 pounds brought an aggregate of $1,608,848.20.

The official final tabulation of tonnage, average price and proceeds, by markets, was:

| Market              | Pounds            | Avg. Price   | Proceeds              |

STANDARDIZED FOREST TAX IN GEORGIA URGED

That the state of Georgia should relieve private forest owners from the uncertainty of property taxes by standardizing the tax on the land itself and only placing a yield tax on timber and forest products when the tree crops are harvested, is advocated in a communication from Bonnell Stone, secretary of the forestry commission.

"In spite of present handicaps, rendered by an unfair forest taxation system in Georgia, results in forestry are satisfactory, in the opinion of representatives of the U. S. Forest Service," Mr. Stone said.

New developments on private forest lands in south Georgia will be under way soon, he added, citing the recent legislative enactment granting permission to the national government to conduct forestry experiments in the Okefenokee Swamp.

"If prompt action cannot be taken on this project, the state should acquire at least 10,000 acres of south Georgia land for forest research work to benefit the cellulose, wood pulp and naval stores industries," Mr. Stone contends.

Referring to an editorial in The Constitution of September 17 which cited a revenue of $3,315,000 this year to Georgia from its national forests, Mr. Stone said:

"Of course, there is a profit to the public in protection rendered to watershed on the headwaters of navigable streams, but from the standpoint of financial returns we cannot overlook the fact that the $3,315,000 paid back to Georgia counties amounts to less than one and one-half cents per acre on the 250,000 or more acres of national forests in the state."

TREE PLANTING INTEREST SHOWN BY SEED ORDERS

As an evidence of increasing interest in forest tree planting in Georgia, the state forest nursery operated by the school of forestry at Athens, in co-operation with the Georgia forest service, is overwhelmed with orders, it was announced Saturday. The capacity of the nursery is being doubled.

The demand comes chiefly from south Georgia and is for longleaf and slash pines. One order alone is for 1,000,000 seedlings, while three other orders total 1,000,000; besides these are many smaller orders.

The state forest nursery is operated in part with funds secured under the Clark-McNary act of congress to provide tree seedlings at cost.

Chattooga Jury Recommends Bonds In Sum of $40,000

Summerville, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—The grand jury at the present term of Chattooga superior court, in the general presentments, recommended a bond issue of $40,000, the funds to be used in remodeling the county jail, making repairs on the courthouse, and building a new county home on the property recently purchased just above town.

The grand jury also recommended that the Australian ballot system be put into effect in this county. It will require the recommendation of two successive grand juries to put the law into effect.

A recommendation that all kinds of business houses be closed in observance of the Sabbath day was also made.

Judge James Maddox did not discharge the grand jury, but excused it, subject to call at any time between now and the March term of superior court.

LAST RITES MONDAY FOR MRS. CASSIDY

Macon, Ga., September 21.—(P)—Mrs. James Cassidy, 64, pioneer resident of Macon, died at her home here last night. Funeral services will be conducted Monday by her son, Rev. Edward T. Cassidy, S. J.

Mrs. Cassidy, who came here from Boston in girlhood, is survived by a daughter, Miss Letitia Cassidy; two sons, Rev. T. E. and William Cassidy, of Macon, and four sisters, Mrs. James Farrell, Woburn, Mass.; Mrs. Mamie Travers, Chelsea, Mass.; Mrs. James Goss, Boston, and Mrs. Peter Mallon, Elizabeth, N. J.

Advertising Club Chairman Calls Meet Thursday

E. V. Dunbar, sales promotion manager of the Alexander-Seewald company, who has been appointed chairman of the Advertising Club of Atlanta, announces that the first fall meeting of the organization will be held Thursday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock, in the main dining room of the Wincoff hotel.

E. V. Hunzert will be the principal speaker, and his address will be followed by an open forum. All persons interested in advertising work are invited to attend the session. It is the plan of the club to hold weekly luncheon meetings in the future, and leaders in the organization promise that those who attend will be given the benefit of advertising experience.

that should prove highly advantageous. The first fall meeting of the Atlanta Advertising Club will be held on Thursday, September 26, at the Wincoff hotel, at 12:30 o'clock sharp. It will be an informal luncheon meeting the first of a regular series to be held every Thursday, at this hour.

E. V. Dunbar, sales promotion manager of the Alexander-Seewald company, is acting chairman of the Ad Club and is in charge of the program for Thursday's meeting.

"Hound Dog" Fraud Laid to Carolinian, Held Under Bond

J. Y. Jackson, alias P. A. Sawyer, has been bound over under $5,000 bond by the United States commissioner at Spartanburg, S. C., on charges of using the mails to defraud, according to an announcement here Saturday by Joe P. Johnston, post-office inspector in charge.

Jackson was arrested last week by Postoffice Inspector Clyde Fleming after the discovery of what was said to be an elaborate plan to sell Atlanta two fine hound dogs that didn't exist.

It was stated that more than 20 letters, written by people more than anxious to become the proud owners of the pooches, were intercepted and that they contained a total of nearly $1,000.

SCHOOL IS BURNED AT SUMMERVILLE

Summerville, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—The Wayside schoolhouse, three miles east of here, was destroyed by fire this week. The origin of the fire is unknown, but the supposition is that some hobo had stopped to stay all night in the schoolhouse and in some manner accidentally set the building on fire.

MUNICIPAL RATE BODY MEETS HERE THURSDAY

Association To Adopt Constitution and By-Laws; To Study Utilities Regulation.

Augusta, Ga., September 21.—(AP) The tentatively organized Municipalities Rate Association of Georgia will meet in Atlanta on September 26 to adopt a constitution and by-laws.

Announcement that the association would make a formal entity of itself on next Thursday came from William M. Lester, chairman, tonight. The tentative organization was formed recently through the efforts of Mayor W. B. Bell, of Augusta.

The constitution has been framed by a committee consisting of O. W. Franklin, city attorney of Valdosta; James A. Forl, mayor of Americus; and William H. L. Worley, city attorney of Columbus. Chairman Lester said seven cities which formed the nucleus of the tentative organization and several others which have signified their intention of joining the association will be represented in Atlanta. Every municipality in the state will be invited to join, he said.

The association was formed to study regulation of public utilities and thus aid its members to contest rate and service cases before the public service commission of Georgia, and to study Georgia law on regulation of public utilities with a view to its improvement.

Co-operation. "The movement has met with splendid co-operation from all over the state and helpful advice has been given," Mr. Lester said. "Several matters have come to our attention since its formation, and we believe we can be of assistance to the municipalities involved while busy with the actual organization. The secretary has found time to do considerable research in the field of public utility regulation. He has collected statistics and compared laws on the subject in various states.

"Municipalities need to combine to offer a united front in public utilities matters. The companies present a solid front in matters affecting their interests, whether before the public service commission, state legislature or governing bodies of cities and towns."

F. M. Grady, of Augusta, executive secretary of the association, has returned from a meeting of the by-laws committee at which the tentative draft was adopted for submission to the members of the association.

Wide Variety of American Airplanes Will Be Seen by Atlantans When 50 Members of Ford Reliability Tour Visit Here Oct. 12-14

Highlights of the coming Ford Reliability tour, which will be in Atlanta October 12, 13 and 14, are shown above. In the upper center is the Travel Air "Mystery Ship," which Doug Davis flew to new world's records in the National Air Races at Cleveland less than a month ago. To the left is Mrs. Louise Thaden, who won the "powder puff" derby from California to Cleveland. She and Mrs. Keith Miller, on the right, will be among the women pilots on the tour. Mrs. Miller was among the winners in the speed races at Cleveland. In the lower center is Frank Hawks' Lockheed Air Express, with which he won the transcontinental speed record. Captain Hawks is referee for the tour. The "Mystery Ship" photograph is an Associated Press photo, as is that of Mrs. Miller.

Travel Air "Mystery Ship," Flown by Doug Davis at Cleveland, May Be Entered.

With 50 airplanes entered as contestants or reserved for the use of officials, the Ford reliability air tour committee Saturday reported from Detroit that there was a strong possibility that the "Mystery Ship" flown by Doug Davis, of Candler field, at Cleveland's national air races, would be entered in the 5,000-mile flight which will visit Atlanta for a two-day stop October 12, 13 and 14.

Captain Rex Collins, manager of the tour, stated that a wire had been received from Walter Beech, president of the Travel Air Company at Wichita, Kan., that plans were in progress to have the Wright-powered "Mystery Ship," which startled the aviation world with its performance, in the tour.

Prominent women pilots may seek supremacy over men in the air on the 1930 tour, it was learned from an announcement made by Captain Collins.

Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden, of Pittsburgh, who was winner of the women's air derby from Santa Monica, Cal., to Cleveland, during the national air races last month, has wired a query as to her eligibility as a pilot in the tour.

Mrs. Keith Miller, of Australian flight fame, has been entered by the Fairchild Airplane Manufacturing Corporation, of Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y., as pilot of a Fairchild KR-34 biplane. D. Morgan Hackman, winner of the recent Cleveland to Toronto air derby, has been entered as pilot in a sister ship. These two planes will be painted white, advices said.

Frances Harrell, a recent addition to the ranks of women fliers, has been entered as a pilot of a Gipsy Moth airplane by the Moth Aircraft Corporation, of Lowell, Mass. Miss Harrell came to New York from Houston, Texas, to join the tour.

New Southern Trans-Continental Air Mail Route Through Atlanta Contemplated by Government

New air mail lines for Atlanta, one with Los Angeles as its western terminal, are shown above. The new southern transcontinental route will be from Atlanta via Birmingham, Jackson, Miss., Shreveport, La., Dallas and El Paso, Texas, to Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz., to San Diego and thence to Los Angeles. Plans are to change the present New Orleans line to Montgomery from Atlanta, then to Mobile and New Orleans as at present. Another Georgia air mail route proposed would start at Richmond, run south to Raleigh and Savannah and join the present route at Jacksonville. Present plans would eliminate the hop between Birmingham and Mobile.

Early expansion of Atlanta's ever-growing air transportation facilities to include a transcontinental mail route terminating at Los Angeles is being contemplated by the postoffice department, according to Associated Press dispatches from Washington.

Still another new route which will probably be established some time after July 1, 1930, will extend from Richmond, Va., through Raleigh, N. C., and Savannah and Jacksonville. These two new routes are part of a general expansion of air mail facilities throughout the country, the dispatches stated, and the interdepartmental committee appointed by President Hoover to advise postoffice authorities on airways is expected to make final decisions on a number of new routes as soon as Major Clarence Young succeeds Secretary MacCracken as the commerce department's representative. Major Young is expected to take office about October 1.

Straightening of Route. It is proposed that when the Atlanta-New Orleans route is straightened and the mail sent from Atlanta to New Orleans by way of Montgomery, another route from Atlanta to Dallas by way of Birmingham, Jackson, Miss., and Shreveport, La., will be started.

The plan calls for a route from Dallas through El Paso, Tucson, Phoenix and San Diego to complete the transcontinental line-up. Assistant Postmaster General Glover believes that the Richmond-Jacksonville route by way of Savannah will have to wait the new fiscal year, according to the dispatches.

Atlanta already is served by four different air mail routes connecting with Chicago, New York, New Orleans and Miami and with the establishment of the proposed route through to the west coast, will have air mail facilities unsurpassed by any city in the south. At the present time, west coast mail is sent by way of Chicago and it is expected that the new route will greatly speed this service.

Pittsburgh-Norfolk Route. Assistant Postmaster-General Glover, in charge of the airmail division, said Saturday that the first new route contemplated would run from Pittsburgh to Norfolk, Va., by way of Washington. He expects to call for bids on this route within two months.

The international department committee, he said, will reach a decision on the proposed New York-to-St. Louis route as soon as it resumes meetings. Hearings have been held on the subject and a vast amount of data has been assembled. The commerce department already is pushing work on lighting the route for night flying.

The route from Louisville to Dallas by way of Memphis, Little Rock and Texarkana, also will be decided upon by the committee, but probably will have to await the end of the present fiscal year before being placed in operation.

Coastwise Line. Another route which will have to await the new fiscal year is the one from Richmond through El Paso, N. C., and Savannah to Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Glover believes that there will be no funds available for the beginning of this service until after next July.

At the present rate of expenditure, he said, and with expected increases, the air mail division would expend approximately $3,000,000 more than its $13,000,000 appropriation this fiscal year. He expects, however, to save more than $3,000,000 during the year after the rates paid to contractors have been reduced. This adjustment is expected to take place at a conference of operators called to meet September 30.

Indianapolis, Ind., September 21.—(AP)—The Indianapolis Flamingo, piloted by Lieutenants Walter R. Peck and Lawrence Genaro in an effort to establish a new world's refueling endurance airplane flight, left Indianapolis today at 10:45 o'clock for Cincinnati.

The ship, which has been in the air 34 hours, when it left here, was accompanied by an official observation plane. The ship began its present flight after failing in its initial attempt earlier in the week when the gasoline supply was exhausted.

VARIETY OF PLANES TO VISIT ATLANTA

tions for which were made on September 5, have been definitely entered in the tour.

A wire received by Captain Collins from Mr. Beech, indicating that the Travel Air entry might have a woman pilot, and that he also was trying to secure the services of Mrs. Thaden.

Miss Earhart to Join Later.

Miss Amelia Earhart, who had been entered as a pilot in a Lockheed Vega monoplane, withdrew. Miss Earhart expressed deep regret for her inability to compete in the tour, and said that her duties with the Transcontinental Air Transport would not permit her to be present in Detroit in time to start with the tour. She said definitely, however, that she would join the tour along the route and accompany it.

Lieutenant Alfred Hegenberger, who, with Lieutenant Lester Maitland, achieved the first non-stop flight from San Francisco to Honolulu, has signified his willingness to fly with the trimotored entry of the Corman Aircraft, Inc., Dayton, Ohio, according to announcement made by this concern. The negotiations now are in progress with the United States air service to ascertain whether it will be possible to release Lieutenant Hegenberger from his duties for the period of the tour from October 5 to October 21. The Corman trimotored plane is a newcomer in the transport field and will be seen by the public for the first time during the national air tour. It is an eight-passenger monoplane of efficient design, powered with three Wright Whirlwind motors. New developments in construction have been incorporated in this craft and the manufacturer claims that it is capable of sustained flight on a single motor.

The first amphibian ever entered in a national air tour may be placed in competition by the Great Lakes Aircraft Corporation, of Cleveland. Work is being rushed on this plane by the company. The Great Lakes amphibian is powered with two American Cirrus III motors.

New Engineering Features.
The industry has turned its eyes on many departments of the tour because of new and radical engineering features which will make this year's competition one of the greatest practical laboratories for aeronautics that has yet been devised. Particular interest has been evidenced with regard to the heavy transport class.

A new Ford all-metal monoplane, which will be used as a rapid mail-sorting "office" of the air, will be placed with a single Pratt & Whitney Hornet motor, has been entered. The plane is similar in appearance to the Ford trimotor transport such as is used by the Transcontinental Air Transport on the "Lindbergh line." The plane has shown remarkable performance in test flights, and its quick take-off, rapid climb and efficient landing, coupled with a high cruising speed, has excited comment in aviation circles.

The giant 18-passenger Curtiss Condor, powered with two geared Conqueror 600 h. p. motors, will demonstrate the feasibility of the twin-motored biplane transport in competition with the trimotored monoplane transport.

The new Corman trimotored plane is a "dark horse" and it undoubtedly will add to the interest in the transport class.

Curtis-Boeing Competition.
Keen competition between the Boeing 95 biplane and the new Curtiss Carrier Pigeon 2 will lend additional color to the tour. The Curtiss plane is powered with a geared Conqueror motor of 600 h. p. and has a three-bladed propeller. The Boeing is a fast express type of plane, powered with a Pratt & Whitney Hornet motor of 525 h. p.

In the intermediate passenger-carrying class, the speedy Lockheed Vega, the efficient and comfortable Fairchild, Bellanca, Ryan, Travel Air, Cessna, Thrush, Robin and Alexander Bullet monoplanes will furnish the public with a thorough demonstration of the practical value of planes within the range of private ownership. This class of ship also will present the very last word in comfortable and luxurious seating and upholstery. The trend toward making the airplane a creation of definite beauty value will be strikingly presented in the artistic paint jobs on the various planes. The designers have gone to the multi-colored plumage of tropical birds as a source of inspiration.

Fast and efficient sport and training planes on the tour will demonstrate the value and desirability of open cockpit planes in lighter weights.

| Miami            | 9:45 a. m. |

With "hippy" fall weather in prospect, a big crowd is looked for this afternoon at Candler field, though nothing unusual in the way of entertainment has been arranged. That a lot of flying will be done, however, is indicated by the fact that more and more Atlanta each week are enjoying the peculiar pleasure which flying affords. During Sabbath afternoon, when good weather conditions prevail, ships of the three local operators remain on the ground only long enough to pick up a load.

Atlanta aviation fans are awaiting with interest the arrival here Friday of the "Sky Fleet" of the General Tire and Rubber Company, comprising eight General monoplanes. The fleet, which is covering 50,000 miles a tour of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba in the interests of development of commercial aviation, is scheduled to arrive Friday afternoon from Jacksonville, Fla., and to remain until Sunday morning, when it will take off for Birmingham. Civic leaders, as well as representatives of local aeronautic groups, are to participate in the welcome planned for the visiting fliers, who now are in the fourth month of their long journey. Local arrangements for the visit are in the hands of E. C. Ripley, Jr., General Tire Service Company, 197 Spring street. N. W. Lieutenant Henry J. Brown, pilot of the flagship of the "Sky Fleet," recently won the Los Angeles-to-Cleveland non-stop race, thereby setting a new record for that distance.

Warm welcomes at several points along the Atlantic seaboard were extended Saturday to three Bellanca monoplanes, first flight ships of the Eastern Air Express, which soon is to inaugurate an express and passenger route between New York and Miami. Stopping overnight in Savannah, where a large delegation greeted them, the fliers left early Saturday morning for Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Tampa and Miami. Bi-weekly service is planned by the company, according to the tentative schedule already drawn up.

A Fokker Super-Universal, owned and operated by the Radiomarine Corporation, a subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America, in the demonstration of airport radio beacons, will take off this morning after a visit

Passport Denied, Former Convict Freed on Bond

Anyone having an extra Italian passport which is not being used, probably would receive a cordial welcome if it were communicated with the local immigration authorities.

This at least would seem to be the case since it is alleged for two years that the department has been endeavoring to acquire this very necessary document for the purpose of sending one Joseph Costello back to the land of Mussolini.

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus instituted in his behalf by Attorney Frank Doughman sets out that he has been held in Fulton tower since his release from the Atlanta penitentiary August 24, and that all efforts to secure the necessary papers have been of no avail.

The deportation warrant sets out that he "has been sentenced subsequently more than once for a term of one year or more for the commission subsequent to his entry of a crime involving moral turpitude."

The first hearing on the petition was held before Judge S. H. Sibley September 14 when Costello made many uncomplimentary remarks about the quarters assigned to him in the tower and requested that he be allowed liberty on bond.

Judge Sibley postponed the case for two weeks pending an outcome of the passport hunt, but Saturday he signed an order releasing Costello under bond of $1,000 for his appearance in court here December 21.

In the meantime, it is said, efforts will be continued to persuade the Italian government to permit the return of its erring son.

of several days at Candler field. The plane, which is an eight-place cabin monoplane, powered with a Pratt & Whitney "Wasp" engine of 425 horsepower, is piloted by E. N. Pickrell, of the aeronautical department of the Radiomarine corporation and a veteran pilot and radio operator. The airport beacons enable the operation of passenger and mail planes in the densest fogs in comparative safety, inasmuch as the slightest deviation from the course will set up a warning signal on the plane's receiving set.

Use of the airplane as a newspaper adjunct took another step forward recently when the Cleveland News took delivery of its new Fairchild "T" cabin monoplane, powered by a 425-horsepower "Wasp" engine. This constitutes at least six planes now in newspaper service east of the Rocky mountains. The Des Moines, Iowa, Register-Tribune has owned and operated a Fairchild "T" for more than a year and the Detroit News recently placed a new cabin monoplane in operation. The Chicago Daily News has two Bellancas and the Newark News was one of the first newspapers to adopt the airplane.

START OF DERBY OPENS KANSAS CITY AIR MEET

9-Day Air Circus Will Include Race From Mexico City.

Kansas City, September 21.—(AP)—Kansas City today became the mecca for aeronautical fans of the country with the beginning of a 9-day international air circus, which was ushered in by the take-off of seven entrants in a two-day 500-mile derby.

A more pretentious derby, from Mexico City to Kansas City, beginning Monday, is planned as the feature of the circus.

Seven pilots, including N. A. Spear, Marshall, Mo.; Pat Love, Richmond, Ind.; A. M. Johnson, Tex. Lagrone, Paul Woodall and S. M. Tushnet, all of Kansas City. They left at 1:30 p. m. for Topeka, Kan., and expected to spend the night at Kirksville, Mo., after a stop at St. Joseph, Mo.

The flight will end tomorrow at Kansas City after halts at Columbia and Marshall, Mo.

Parachute jumping, balloon bursting, various short races and a fire-fighting display featured today's afternoon program.

Due to several last-minute changes exact knowledge of the number and names of entrants in the Mexico City-Kansas City derby were not known.

Announced entrants included Colonel Goebel, of Kansas City; Dale Jackson, St. Louis, joint holders of the world's refueling endurance record; Mrs. Florence Love Barnes, San Marino, Cal.; Sylvan Hall, St. Louis; Rex Purcell, Kansas City, and Capt. Luis R. Ybarra, a Mexican army pilot. Other Mexican and Cuban aviators are expected to participate.

SIX AMERICANS IN RACE FROM MEXICO.

Mexico City, September 21.—(AP)—Four Mexican army pilots and six American pilots, including one woman, have entered the Mexico City to Kansas City air race, feature of the international air circus at Kansas City.

The pilots will start from Mexico City at 9 o'clock Monday morning, leaving at one-minute intervals. Landings will be made at Tampico, Brownsville, San Antonio, Dallas, Wewoka, Muskogee, Tulsa, Joplin, Springfield and Kansas City. Overnight stops will be made at Brownsville, Wewoka and Springfield.

W. Lewis of Kansas City, who is in charge of the preliminary arrangements, today announced the following entrants: Roberto Fierro, Luis Verdeja, Fernando Proul and Velasco Flores Diaz, all Mexican army pilots; William Ont, Earl Rowland, George Haldeman, Art Goebel, D. K. Hawdon and Mrs. Florence Barnes. Goebel arrived at 4:40 p. m. today from Brownsville, Texas.

U. S. TO PROVIDE ADDED WEATHER DATA FOR FLIERS

San Francisco, September 21.—(AP)—Announcement that additional weather bureaus and reporting stations along all official airways in the country would be under construction shortly was made today by Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States weather bureau.

Marvin, here on a tour of the country to survey the 200 weather stations now in operation, said he hoped to have the augmented service in operation within a year.

The weather bureau chief pointed out that $1,600,000 had been made available within the last year for the development of the weather reporting system—$800,000 from the Guggenheim Foundation for the promotion of aeronautics and a like sum from the government.

STIMSON SAYS LONDON TO BE A NAVAL MEET SITE

Secretary Has Heard No
Suggestions on Other Places.

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—London very likely will be the place of the projected five-power naval limitation conference in January, Secretary Stimson said today, explaining that no suggestion of any official character had reached him concerning the selection of some other place.

The secretary of state's statement was in reply to inquiries based upon publications both here and abroad that some of the participants in the party would prefer that the gathering be in some "neutral" city, one in some European country not a party to the conference.

Mr. Stimson said he had conferred with the ambassadors of the interested powers from time to time during the Anglo-American negotiations for the limitation of cruisers, compelling them to form of what was taking place in the conversations between the American and British governments. Beyond that the secretary declined to go, but there was a suggestion that the ambassadors of Japan, France and Italy had been advised particularly concerning the American proposals.

While without any official information that the Japanese government desired three months' notice before the convening of the conference, Mr. Stimson said he had no doubt that any government that issued invitations to the party would make these conform to the convenience of the countries to be invited.

Tokyo dispatches today indicated the Japanese desired this notice because of the long time that would be required for the Japanese delegates to reach London by way of the Suez Canal, as well as the length of time that would be necessary to make the necessary preparations.

Although there has been no official indication as to the time the British government will send out the invitations, it was believed they probably would be withheld until after the conclusion of the conferences which Premier Ramsay MacDonald is to hold here early next month with President Hoover.

With the conference now tentatively set for the latter part of January this would permit the invitations to go forward fully three months before the delegates would gather in the British capital.

Premier MacDonald probably will spend a shorter time away from England than was first suggested. He will remain here six days, then go to Philadelphia and New York and then proceed to Canada for conferences with Premier Mackenzie King. He would remain in that country only a few days under present plans.

The program for the British statesman's stay in the United States is now nearing completion and probably will be made public early next week.

WIDE NON-PARKING
ZONE IS PROTESTED

stabilize parking laws and arrange them so the public can know what they are.

"At the present time, city council changes parking revisions at every meeting, and the police officers who enforce the laws do not become acquainted with a ruling until it has been changed. I do not see how the public could obey the laws even if they wished to do so."

Mr. Whitaker declared Saturday night that the area included in the non-parking provisions to be offered are too broad.

"While it is true that the only solution of the traffic congestion lies in restriction of parking and establishment of non-parking areas, I feel that the district included in the proposed ordinance is too broad and will not offer the proper solution of the problem," he said.

"Studies made by our commission show that certain main arteries should be non-parking, but no certain area should be included. We hope to hold a meeting with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association executives next week in an effort to get them to agree to certain non-parking thoroughfares and to agree not to ask for a change in the law for two years if it is approved. This would react to stabilize the parking laws and would provide ample opportunity for citizens to observe the benefits of the recommendations which we planned to make."

"One-way streets are out of the question in Atlanta for many reasons. One of the prime reasons is the convergence of several of the north and south arteries into Peachtree and Whitehall streets. Another objection would be the difference in the width of certain of the streets which would make an uneven flow of traffic."

ant professor of economics, by the University of Chicago, and the M. D. degree on Dr. A. P. Rhany, assistant professor of anatomy.

The freshman orientation program, which begins with registration Tuesday afternoon, is designed to acquaint the new men with college life and with the best methods of study. Lectures will be given by the president of the university, the deans, and prominent members of the faculty and student body. A reception Tuesday night at the home of President Harvey W. Cox will be a feature.

Tech Opens Monday.

Adding more than forty teachers to the school's highest enrollment, Georgia Tech Monday morning begins classes for more than 2,000 campus students. Added to this number will be more than 1,000 men in the two Atlanta evening schools, the School of Applied Science and the downtown Evening School of Commerce.

Although the campus registration continues through the coming week, officials of the school do not believe that more than 200 will be added to the campus enrollment. The total campus enrollment for the entire last year was only 2,222.

In the downtown Evening School of Commerce the enrollment is already 125 more than last year at this time, with classes beginning as late as October 1. This department has added seven new teachers to care for the anticipated increase in enrollment.

During the past week only freshmen of the campus have been attending classes, the upper classes beginning their school work at 8 o'clock Monday morning. Their orientation period closed Saturday morning with the more than 500 first-year men assembling in the stadium for instruction in systematic team support. This work was under the supervision of the senior college cheer leaders.

Applications have been accepted from 1,150 first-year men, but those in charge of the registration office believe that many of these will not report. Many of the coop first-year

Proposed Non-Parking Area

Heavy black lines in the above drawing show the proposed area which will be included in a non-parking zone if city council, at its meeting October 7, approves the measure which Councilman Robert M. Cobb, Jr., of the ninth ward, announced Saturday he would offer. Mitchell street, between Forsyth street and Pryor, also would be non-parking, as would all east and west thoroughfares within the black lines, except Marietta street, where the present parking restrictions would remain in force.

The Cobb paper provided that no parking shall be permitted between 6:30 in the mornings and 6:30 o'clock at night. C. C. Whitaker, chairman of a special traffic commission named several months ago by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale to study conditions in Atlanta and to make recommendations declared Saturday night that the proposed area is too broad and unnecessary at this time. He added, however, that certain non-parking traffic arteries should be established to speed up traffic, and stated that he intends to hold a conference this week with executives of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, those most vitally affected, in an effort to get them to agree to such a proposal.

Freshman Week
Ends at Mercer;
Register Monday

Macon, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—With freshman week coming to a close Sunday, registration for upperclassmen and freshmen at Macon university will take place Monday and Tuesday. Classes will begin Wednesday.

The freshmen began arriving Wednesday and have had the run of the campus for the remainder of this week. Dr. Spright Dowell, president of the university, and John D. Moll, president of the Georgia Baptist convention, addressed the new students in chapel Thursday afternoon as the principal feature of the first day program.

The program Friday was devoted to most entirely to advice and aid in the selection of courses and introduction to the faculty. The feature of Saturday's program consisted of a football game between the freshmen team and Norman Park Junior College. Special religious services will be held Sunday and the first year men will register along with upperclassmen Monday and Tuesday.

FORMER GEORGIAN HELD FOR MURDER

Auto Jack Handle Believed Lethal Instrument in Florida Crime.

Jacksonville, Fla., September 21.—(AP)—R. H. Wynn, 30, was arrested today in connection with the fatal slaying of Curtis S. Smith, Wynn's brother-in-law, early today. Smith's body, found in a clump of bushes, with the head and face battered, and near a blood-stained automobile jack handle, was identified by officials prior to the arrest of Wynn.

Wynn was arrested at Smith's home shortly after the body of the latter had been identified. Smith, according to his widow, formerly lived in Washington, Ga., and operated a window cleaning establishment here.

Police who went to Wynn's room found one of his shirts, wet from recent washing, and several clean shirts, which led them to believe that he had washed the piece of apparel himself in an endeavor to remove stains.

Wynn was questioned at police headquarters today. He said he was a collector for a local insurance company.

Detectives said Wynn had refused to talk about the death of his brother-in-law when he was taken to the scene of the crime.

Smith's widow was questioned as to her husband's habits and his whereabouts last night. She said that Smith left their home between 8:30 and 9 o'clock last night and did not say where he was going. She said he never carried large sums of money, rarely having more than $25.

Police had at first previously reported that Smith's purse was empty when they searched his body for identification.

New York, September 21.—(AP)—Formation of a Fox-Hearst corporation, brought about by the purchase by William Randolph Hearst of a "substantial" interest in the Fox Movie Tone Corporation, was announced today by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation. The new company will produce sound news reels which will be supplied to Hearst Movie Tone News and to the Fox Movie Tone News.

SCHWAB PLEADS

indicated later when Chairman Shortridge said the members of the American delegation to the Geneva parley, naval officers and newspapermen who reported the session, would be called to tell of Shearer's activities there.

Rear Admiral Hilary Jones, now in Washington, was on the American delegation. It likely he will be summoned next week.

Suave and gracious, the silver-haired Mr. Schwab took up most of the committee's three-hour session today. He pleaded a "sincere hope" for world disarmament and recalled his efforts in this behalf of conferences with President Wilson.

The steel industry, he said, would be glad to see armaments "at the bottom of the sea" if it meant peace.

Schwab denied knowledge of the $143,000 fund for use in Washington by the shipbuilders, and Grace said he understood the $10,000 contributed by his company was to be used as part of a "development" fund for promotion of the four-day transatlantic service proposed by the Trans-Oceanic Company, subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation.

Senator Allen, republican, Kansas, urged the committee to differentiate between the investigation into the Washington fund and the "more grave" inquiry into the activities of the shipbuilders at the Geneva conference.

Once more Shearer was in front row of the committee room with his attorney, Daniel Cohalan. Once more Cohalan broke into the inquiry to ask that the committee inquire of Schwab whether he had ever met Shearer.

Schwab said he had no recollection of meeting Shearer. Cohalan asked if he had not met Shearer at the Ritz-Carlton hotel in New York in November, 1928, and refer him to officers of his company about the possibility of sending him to Geneva.

"I meet hundreds of people of whom I have no subsequent recollection," said Schwab. "I will say that I had no conversation with this person which made sufficient impression on me to remember him. I usually say on most matters 'you see Mr. Grace,' but I don't recall seeing or talking to Shearer or making any such statement to him."

After examining Wakeman on Monday the committee will hear Homer L. Ferguson, general manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation, and Frederick P. Ealen, vice president of that company.

Wakeman, Ealen and Clinton L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, hired Shearer at a secret conference, 1927 just prior to the Geneva meeting.

ATTACHE AT LONDON
VISITS HERE SEPT. 27

Homer S. Fox To Address
Trade Club on Conditions in England.

Homer S. Fox, assistant commercial attaché for the United States at London, will visit Atlanta Friday, for the purpose of conferring with local business men concerning trade conditions in Great Britain and the opportunities for extending the sale of Atlanta products in that country, according to word received Friday by the Atlanta district office of the federal department of commerce.

Mr. Fox now is on a nation-wide itinerary, according to Harry O. Mitchell, district manager. He is particularly interested in the south, however, in view of the desire on the part of the British traders to establish wider connections with producers of naval stores, chemicals and other products characteristic of this region.

The assistant commercial attaché cites the keen interest of Britishers in the remarkable development of our southern ports and shipping and industrial growth of many southern cities. He has been in the service of the department of commerce since 1922 and resident in London since June of 1928, where he has devoted his entire time, the interests of American firms trading in Great Britain.

While in Atlanta he will be the guest of honor of the Atlanta Foreign Trade Club at its weekly luncheon which will be held on Friday of this week instead of Wednesday as usual. He will speak on present-day trade and economic conditions in Great Britain. Reservations may be made by communicating with the secretary at Walnut 5049.

ROME LAUNDRY FIRM
HELD UP AND ROBBED

Rome, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—An unmasked white man entered the office of Rome Laundry company early Saturday night and, at the point of a pistol, robbed the establishment of $252.14, of which $188 was currency.

Alighting from an automobile, left with the motor running, while another white man at the steering wheel, the bandit stuck up Wallace Grant and Hollis Hendricks, employees of the laundry, and after robbing them went to the car, which apparently headed for Chattanooga. Police have no clues as to the identity of the bandits, although they are trying to link the bandits with the robbery of a filling station here Monday morning. This is the fourth holdup here this week.

Another employee, W. A. Doench, who was in the rear of the building, knew nothing of the robbery until it was over.

RIVER RECORD ATTEMPT ENDS AS BOAT SINKS

Marooned all night on the river levee 26 miles north of Greenville, Miss., after their tiny speedboat Bernadette struck a snag and sank, N. C. Mickle and George Neff, New Orleans sportsmen, were taken to Greenville tonight by a fisherman. Both were uninjured.

While an airplane and a motor boat searched the river between Greenville and Arkansas City, Ark., for the missing speed boat, the last of four tiny crafts attempting to lower the speed record from New Orleans to St. Louis to be conquered by Old Man River, Neff and Mickleby rode into Greenville aboard a truck.

"We were about 26 miles out of Greenville last night when we struck a snag and sprung a leak. We heeled for shore and reached the Mississippi bank before the boat sank. We waded ashore and tied the boat to a tree. We slept on the river bank all night and managed to raise the boat this morning. Walter Brooks, a fisherman, found us and brought us to Greenville," Neff told the Associated Press over a long-distance telephone from Greenville.

Two searching parties, one headed by Mayor Fred Schelden, of Greenville, in an airplane, and the other by Guy Drew, expert river man in a motorboat, had spent the entire afternoon searching for the missing boat. Grave concern over its safety was expressed by river men shortly after noon today when the Bernadette failed to reach Arkansas City, only 45 miles north of Greenville, which she passed at 8:40 last night.

Neff and Mickleby will return to New Orleans at once, they said. Neither commented on another attempt to lower the record of the "Bernadette," owned by Dr. Louis LeRoy, of Memphis.

The Bernadette was more than 25 hours behind the Bogie's time when the accident occurred.

Low stages of the river made the trip more hazardous than at the time Dr. LeRoy set the recent record. The route was also 10 miles longer during low water stages.

Tuesday one of America's Finest New Laundry Plants Joins this Splendid Group

TROY · Peerless

A wonderful new laundry—Open to visitors this week
Tuesday through Friday, 10 A. M. to 4 P. M., Glen Iris and Ponce de Leon Ave. (near Sears, Roebuck & Co.)

No matter which of these laundries is your laundry—each one of us joins in inviting you. The things you'll see here are but a sample of the way we work in all of our plants. Haven't you often wondered what form of magic we use to make your clothes so clean and fresh? Now—you can see for yourself. The hospital sanitation we've talked about so much—the careful, frictionless washing methods we use in all our plants—come and see them this week at the Troy-Peerless. Tuesday through Friday, 10 A. M. till 4 P. M.

See Ironing by the "Tissue paper method"

A washing machine gentle as human hands and more thorough

We want you to see the tumbling billows of sparkling suds as they wash clothes white without a bit of rubbing . . . floods of fresh rainsoft water renewed time after time, till hundreds of gallons have been used for only one trip through the washer. . . That is the kind of washing your clothes receive when they're sent to any one of these laundries.

It's fascinating to watch a sheet or towel taking a trip through the large flat work ironer. It moves slowly between softly padded rolls. . . So gently, so easily it glides along, becoming smoother as it rides, till it comes out fresh and immaculate on the other end. Even tissue paper can pass through this gentle machine without tearing.

You can have this kind of work, not only at Troy-Peerless, but at any of the laundries whose names are shown below.

See how our dry cleaning artists renew your garments

We look forward especially to showing you the dry cleaning department . . . how garments are first made exquisitely clean in a flowing stream of fresh clear fluid . . . how expert craftsmen examine each article separately for any special spots or stains . . . how they choose the cleaning method best for that particular garment . . . how these skilled fabric-scientists finish each detail of the cleaning daintily, carefully. You'll enjoy seeing how plaits are pressed in—and oh, so many other details of this marvelous work. All of our plants share the same knowledge of dry cleaning—the same skill—that you will see at Troy-Peerless.

With "Pallbearer" at Side.

Alma, Neb., September 21.—(AP)—John F. Bartels, weary and footsore from his travels, has returned to this community to see the grave in which he was supposedly buried 19 years ago, and to gain admission to a Masonic lodge.

One of his "pallbearers," J. G. Thompson, went with him to the cemetery to inspect the graves and the headstone on which is this inscription: "John F. Bartels, 1896-1906."

Bartels, once a member of the Masonic lodge here, arrived Thursday and met Thompson. The latter said: "What are you doing here? This must be resurrection morning, for I helped bury you 20 years ago."

"I came to see my grave and get a picture of the marker," the wanderer replied, solemnly. Then he told his story.

The family came here in 1877, later moving to Neosho, Mo., he left after a quarrel with his wife. In 1908 she had him declared legally dead, as he had not been heard from since his departure in 1901. His estate was probated. Then, in 1909, Mrs. Bartels identified, as her husband, a man found dead in Illinois. The man was buried here. Bartels returned to the Neosho in 1912 after living many years in Chicago and Baltimore. His astonished wife refused to take him back. She got a divorce and kept the farm, for Bartels was still "dead" they moved away, telling Bartels not to follow them.

RULING ON TONICS CONTAINING WINE
MORE RIGOROUS

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—Orders intended to prevent the use of wine tonic for beverage purposes through adding solids to their contents were issued today by Prohibition Commissioner Dornan.

In a circular letter sent to all prohibition administrators the commissioner told them to notify manufacturers of wine tonics that after October 15 their products must contain not less than 30 per cent solids irrespective of the medication already contained in the tonics. The addition, the commissioner expects, will make the tonics unpalatable as a beverage and will be accomplished by adding sugar or glycerine.

The action by Commissioner Dornan was taken after his attention had been called to the greatly increased manufacture of wine tonics and their wide distribution. One brand of such a tonic, it was said, was manufactured in Virginia and sold in large quantities throughout the entire country. This tonic, while containing beet and iron extracts, could be used as a beverage, the commissioner said.

DRY OFFICER FREED IN AUTO FATALITY; VICTIM AT FAULT

Memphis, Tenn., September 21.—(AP)—A charge of manslaughter against Arthur Rogers, United States marshal, in connection with the death of Frank Chew, 52, of Little Rock, Ark., in an automobile accident September 13, was dismissed this afternoon in municipal court by Judge L. T. Fitzhugh.

C. L. Parchman, eye witness to the fatal accident, testified Chew stepped from behind a parked automobile into the path of Rogers' car. Captain Frank Glisson, who investigated the accident for the police department, recommended the dismissal, stating that the accident was unavoidable.

Chew, formerly a wealthy oil man of Eldorado, Ark., was visiting his brother in Memphis when he was crushed to death by Rogers' automobile.

19 IMPRISONED FOR CONSPIRACY AT BUCHAREST

Bucharest, Rumania, September 21.—(AP)—Nineteen men were sentenced today to brief periods of imprisonment for participation in a conspiracy to overthrow the government of Premier Iuliu Maniu. The plot was discovered last June before any overt act had occurred. The special court, which delivered sentence today acquitted 42 other defendants.

Lieutenant Colonel Brezu was sentenced to six months, Lieutenant Varzalescu to five months, Colonel Stoika to one month and 15 others to sentences ranging from one to five months.

Lieutenant George Sucu, who was alleged to have instigated the plot, was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

HOOVER REFUSES SINCLAIR'S PLEA FOR JAIL RELEASE

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—President Hoover will not commute the sentences of Harry F. Sinclair or Henry Mason Day, who are serving terms in the District of Columbia jail for contempt of court arising from the shadowing of the Fall-Sinclair jury.

This was announced today at the White House, where it was said Mr. Hoover would follow the recommendation of Attorney-General Mitchell that the chief executive not interfere. The applications of Sinclair and Day were received from the department of justice last night with this recommendation attached.

CAR AGENCY BOMBED Second Attack Made on Company Near Chicago.

Chicago, September 21.—(AP)—The second bomb attack against an Oak Park automobile sales agency was made early today, a dynamite "plus apple" exploding at the rear door of the Marquardt-Smucker Automobile Sales Company. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

Three salesmen were thrown to the floor by the force of the explosion. Five 50-gallon drums of oil were shattered.

A month ago a similar bombing occurred a block away at the Oak Park Sales Agency.

SLAYING OF AUTHOR STILL DEEP MYSTERY

Police Following Several Theories in Death.

Philadelphia, September 21.—(AP)—The mystery surrounding the slaying of Frank Reed Whiteside, widely known landscape artist and author, continued to puzzle police today.

Whiteside was shot to death Thursday night when he answered the doorbell in his home shortly after 10 o'clock. His pockets had been turned inside out, but his gold watch and a gold cigar lighter had not been taken.

Neighbors heard the shot and two men were seen running from the vicinity of the Whiteside home. Police recovered a leather case containing keys and a small nail file which they believe the slayers took from the aged artist's pocket after he had been shot. The keys had been thrown through a near-by cellar window. One of them unlocked the front door of the Whiteside house.

Police hold several theories as to the motive for the shooting. What few developments there have been in the investigation tend to strengthen the theory of robbery.

Other suggestions are that the slayer may have been a youthful painter whose work Mr. Whiteside had rejected for exhibition on some artist's job of which he had been a member, that he was shot by gunmen by mistake.

Police admitted, however, that they had but little information on which to base these theories.

Vanderbilt-Mississippi Game Features Saturday's Program

BULLDOGS OPEN WITH PETRELS THIS WEEK-END

Other Conference Elevens Start Season Against 'Outsiders.'

By Ralph McGill.

Josh Cody's deep basso has been added to the caterwauling going on about Your Uncle Dan McGugin's Commodores and their game with Homer Hazel's crew from Ole Miss next Saturday.

It so happens that the game on Dudley field at Nashville will be the first conference game of the year. Not since Alabama went up to play the Commodores in an early game in 1926 has there been such an important contest on the opening schedule of the southern football organization.

All this caterwauling is going on because quite a lot of our best minds think that Your Uncle Dan McGugin is going to take one right on the sideburns and become one of the all-time greats before October has been reached.

NOT A SOLO.

Colonel Cody's deep, rich basso is not singing a solo. He is joined by H. J. Stogeman, of Georgia, and numerous others over the land of cotton. They are picking Your Uncle Dan as second best in the scrimmage of next Saturday.

"Mississippi will be ready and Vanderbilt won't," said Colonel Cody, of Clemson, when interviewed on the subject. Mississippi had a great team last year and will be better this fall. They will have a great offense, and it will be ready. Vanderbilt always starts slowly.

Mr. W. A. Alexander, of Tech, is the only one about the conference who believes in Your Uncle Dan. "I hear Dan has a kick and a passer," he said. "He'll fiddle around and win the football game."

Mr. Alexander, however, is standing alone. The other gentlemen are joining the line that forms on the right waiting to see their prediction come true.

TOUGH ELEVEN.

There is no denying that Homer Hazel has a tough football outfit at Ole Miss. He has a great line and a good set of backs. They do not say that a young man named Sam Kyzar has turned up to make people forget the loss of Gerald Walker the backfield ace, who wandered off into a professional contract.

Bill Schwartz, Your Uncle Dan's 1928 fullback, who was playing an end, collapsed on Friday, supposedly from an injury received in the Tennessee game last fall. He will be out. The Commodores are in a tight spot.

They won't be hard to watch. There are 17 other conference teams in action next Saturday, but they all meet non-conference foes.

BULLDOGS-PETRELS.

Over at Athens Georgia gets started against Oglethorpe. The Petrels, with an augmented backfield and line, are grimly determined to upset Harry Mehre's Georgians.

It will be an enlightening game for both Mehre and Harry Robertson, the latter again directing the Petrels. Both coaches have material that is tried in varsity competition. Each team will be changed considerably before really getting into stride.

Mehre does not expect to complete his line-up until after the Yale game. Robertson has five sophomore backs who will get trials in the Georgia game.

Alabama's eleven, one of the favored few in the pre-season dogging, will get a work-out from Mississippi college.

Auburn, with few victories in the past three years, hopes to start the season with one over Birmingham Southern. This game will be a night affair, the nocturnal game having been played successfully there last fall.

VOLS-CENTRE.

Tennessee, another of the favorites, should have little trouble from Centre. The Praying Colonels had a good freshman team last fall, but they hardly be able to stop the Vols. Sawane's improved eleven will take

'RED' HERRING TO FIGHT HERE

Memphis Boy Will Meet Hull in Place of De Capi.

Believing that "Red" Herring, Memphis scrapper, would prove a better match for Clyde Hull, Matchmaker Eddie Hanlon switched his program Saturday and the Memphis boy will replace Jimmy De Capi against Hull on the all-star card to be offered at the city auditorium Thursday night.

The card will consist of three all-star bouts and a snappy preliminary bout with a substitute scrap.

Herring is known all over the country and at one time was one of the leading writers of the world. Of course he is not at the peak of his career but still is a good scrapper and should give Hull a stiff battle. Herring is a veteran of the ring. He is clever and still retains some sting in his punches. This bout will go ten rounds.

Hanlon made this change yesterday in order to match Hull with a good clever man. Hull is well known here and nothing need be said of his ability in the ring. He clearly demonstrated that in his recent fights with Ted Goodrich. In these fights Hull was suffering with a bad knee and could not fight his usual fight. Now, however, his leg is in working order and he is ready for a real battle. Hull likes the fans here and is making Atlanta his headquarters at present.

In the other main events of the card Brady O'Hara will meet Paul Rojas, Cuban fighter, and Glenn Huckaby will match punches with Jack Cowan. Both are Atlanta boys, who have been fighting in other parts of the country. Huckaby has fought several times in the Orient and made quite a name for himself.

Casey Jones, another rising Atlanta fighter, will meet Battling McMillen, local boy, in a six-round bout. Jones will be a substitute bout ready if anything should happen to one of the other bouts.

ALEXANDER GONE.

Most of the hurrying in 1925 had been handled by Alexander, Cooper and Kaufmann, but their records didn't mean anything when McCarthy decided to make a change in 1926.

He "gave" Alex to the Cardinals and Alex went to a world's series for them. McCarthy knew Alex still was a great pitcher, but the veteran would observe training rules, so out he went. Cooper had complained about Manager Killefer's tactics. When he complained about the same about the Cardinals, he was tossed overboard. Kaufmann remained until '27, when he and Cooney went to the Phillies for Hal Carlson.

In the spring of 1927, when the machine began to take form, Wilson was a fixture in center and Heathcote in right. Munson also had a chance. After the season started McCarthy instructed the club to bid for Stephenson, then at Indianapolis. The Pirates expected to grab him, but the Cubs bid was accepted because McCarthy promised to deliver Maurice Shannon, an infielder, who had been purchased from Louisville.

The first round matches will start today and end Wednesday afternoon. Second round matches are to be completed by Saturday night. Quarter final matches will be completed by Wednesday, October 2, and semi-finals will be completed Friday, October 4. Finals will be played Saturday, October 5.

Pairings for the tournament follow:

McCarthy Has Wrought Many Changes in Cubs

Only Four Members of Eighth Place Team of 1925 Are on Roster Now.

In view of the present lofty position of Joe McCarthy's Chicago team, one might well ask what has become of the Cubs of a few years ago. Or, to put it in such a way as to make a real brain duster for those who love their memory tests, you might say, "Who were the Cubs of three and four seasons back?"

Let down the lineup, if you can, of the Cub squads of '25 and '26, and you'll have the story of the evolution of an eighth place team into a pennant winner, or almost a pennant winner.

But to recall the changes that have taken place since the end of 1925, when it was a last place outfit and McCarthy was placed in charge, proved a job that some of the present Cubs themselves couldn't solve. Even the four survivors of the pre-McCarthy team—Blake, Bush, Hartnett (and Heathcote—couldn't think of everybody that had come up and gone back in four years.

1926 TEAM FIGHTS.
Looking back now on what became of the regular 1926 lineup after McCarthy had juggled around with the remnants of the 1925 eighth placeers, you can easily determine why no pennant became Wrigley property.

And yet that team was in the race for a spell and might have remained a bit longer had it not been for the bumping Hack Wilson on the head in a game at Philadelphia. Hack had to stay out for quite a stretch, and he was about the only real hitter the Cubs possessed, so his loss hurt. Even as it was, the outfit wound up in fourth place, which was considerable improvement over last place the year previous.

The '26 infield most of the time was Grimm, Adams, Cooney and Freigan, reading from left to right. Freigan had been obtained along with Gonzales from the Cards in exchange for O'Farrell. Cooney also had come from the Cards, but he was a poor hitter. Wilson was John in left, Brooks in center, and Heathcote in right. Brooks broke in as a sensation by hitting a home run, which was the only big thing were expected. They didn't last long.

MERCER RATS GRAB OPENER

Last Half Drive Brings 20-0 Victory Over Norman Park.

Macon, September 21.—The Mercer freshmen won an easy victory over Norman Park Junior college today. The score was 20-0.

Although unable to score in the first half, the Mercer Cubs clearly showed that they had a fast backfield supported by a heavy, aggressive line, and it would be only a course of time before the scoring began.

It was at the beginning of the third quarter, after Harvey, freshman sub, had advanced the ball from midfield to the 25-yard line on a long run, that a pass, Peto to Lobette, gave the rats their first score. Sperry kicked goal. A few plays later another pass, Walden to Lobetti, was good for 49 yards and a touchdown.

In the try for extra point, Sperry, who intended picking the ball, was unable to do so because of a bad pass from center but he picked up the ball and ran it over the line.

Mercer then kicked off to Norman Park and held them for downs. Thomas, Norman Park, punter and Walden returned it 40 yards and was stopped on Norman's 24-yard line. "Swede" Olsen gained five yards over left tackle and on the next play Harvey went around left end for 19 yards and a touchdown. Walden missed the try for extra point. The game ended a few minutes later.

Walden was the flashiest player and best ground gainer for either team, his gains aggregating over 150 yards. Smith, Mercer center, and Joe, half, also turned in good work for the Cubs. Lea and Thomas were best for Norman Park.

LINE-UPS.
MERCER: Lobetti, Sperry, Peto, Walden, Olsen, Smith, Joe, Lea, Thomas, Harvey, Norman Park: Thomas, Scott, West, Skilton, Redfern, Newton, Simmons and Wilkes.

Colgate To Open With St. Lawrence

Hamilton, N. Y., September 21.—The first opportunity central New York fans have had in recent years to see the famed Varsity brand of football will be afforded next Saturday when Colgate opens its gridiron campaign here against St. Lawrence.

This game will mark the debut of Andy Kerr as head coach of the Maroon. Kerr for years was associated with Pop Warner at Pittsburgh and at Stanford his system of offensive play is a duplicate of that which created such a sensation in the east last season when Stanford defeated the Army at New York.

Multiple pass plays of great speed and deception are prominent in Kerr's attacking formations with the line men wheeling out of their position in the forward wall to act as blockers for the ball-carriers. At times a half dozen men are concentrated at the point of attack and while the play is developing there is swift, short passing behind the line, most of it so well concealed that it is just as hard for the defensive players as it is for the spectators to follow the ball until the play has reached its full development.

While Kerr, like Warner, has placed great stress on the running game, he has not overlooked the forward pass. The aerial attack has a prominent place in his system, being used at strategic points to break the defense.

In Saturday's inaugural there will be plenty of passing regardless of the weapon Kerr chooses for his offense. For St. Lawrence, coached by Tom Sullivan, a former Colgate star, makes a specialty of the overhead attack and is reported to have a particularly skillful band of aerialists this season. The Lancers have been training in their camp near the Canadian border for three weeks and are probably better conditioned than ever before for the game.

William A. Reid, graduate manager of athletics, reports the interest in this opening game greater than any of late years and is making preparations to handle the largest crowd ever at this early date. Kerr's colorful personality and the stories that have drifted out of the Maroon camp concerning the plays he is using, combined with the fact that many football followers want to get a line on Colgate before its game with Wisconsin next week, have all served to heighten interest.

Line Coach.

Joe Bendek, All-American in 1922, and a former captain at Penn State, is coaching the line men there.

LANDIS WARNS FANS AGAINST SPECULATORS

Demand for World Series Increases as Annual Battle Nears.

Philadelphia, September 21. (AP)—Any person who buys a world's series ticket from a speculator takes a chance of having it lifted at the gate and refused admission to the ball park, either in Philadelphia or Chicago, said Baseball Commissioner Landis here today.

The commissioner came to Philadelphia to look into the method of selling tickets and to see that they were properly distributed. He was in conference with Thomas S. Shibe, president of the Philadelphia Athletics, and left for Washington late in the day.

The commissioner said he found Continued on Fifth Sport Page.

Here's One Who'll Boss His Family

Tampa, Fla., September 21.—(AP) Thelma Anderson's fiancé thinks she is a boss, she revealed today, so he told her she must win the state women's golf championship this year before they could be wed. Although a novice, she showed her intention by winning two local titles in succession—the flag tournament at one club and best par at another.

"The way I feel right now," she added, "I'd like to meet Glenn Collette."

Crimson Grigger Manages Links

University, Ala., September 21.—Cecil Hurt, candidate for a tackle position on the 1929 Crimson Tide, has one of the most novel ways of working his way through the university of any student in the country, it is believed.

Hurt is managing a miniature golf course on the campus, and spends his spare time supervising twosomes and foursomes which daily play the "Tiny Links."

So far as is known, the University of Alabama is the only school in the world to have such a golf course on its campus. Although it has been opened only recently, it is already very popular with the "Bama student body."

MEL OTT TOPS SENIOR LEAGUE IN HOME RUNS

Giant Slugger Clouts Number 40 to Gain More Honors.

Melvin Ott, of the Giants, had the field almost to himself yesterday in hitting his fortieth home run.

This blow not only lifted him into a lead of one over Hack Wilson and Chuck Klein with whom he had been tied for the league lead, but also enabled him to become the third National league player in 54 years to enter the circle reserved for hitters of 40 major league home runs in a season.

Rogers Hornsby topped both circuits with 42 in 1922, the year of Ruth's suspension, and Cy Williams matched the Babe with 41 the next season.

Reynolds of the White Sox, was the only home run hitter yesterday besides Ott.

Jackets Make Profitable Progress in Week of Hard Work at Flats

MAREE SHOWING MUCH PROMISE AT NEW POST

Schwartz Likely To Fill Space in Line Left by Removal.

By Herb Clark.

Slowly, but none the less surely, another week has passed into the discard. For Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets, the proteges of Coach Bill Alexander, it has been a week of unending work.

From the standpoint of the Jackets, however, it has been fun—a welcome change from the monotony of the routine sessions of the preceding two weeks. From Alex's standpoint, it has been profitable.

Where at this time just seven days ago Alex had one line-up which looked best—and yet was of itself nothing to cause great joy—today he has two or three different combinations, each more effective than the one of last week. And Alex has found himself a new and promising bullback in the elegant and powerful person of Vance Maree.

Vance was unearthed about the middle of the week. His transfer to the stable of backs left an all-too-evident hole in the line. Friday afternoon, the name of Rudy Schwartz was shoved into that hole. He did nothing exceptional. Saturday Alex—with no loss of faith and noting, together with Bill Fincher, builder of lines—sent Schwartz back to the grid. And Schwartz clicked with little uncertainty.

Schwartz is husky, fast, powerful, and has absorbed enough knowledge of the grid game to enable him to get by easily. He should plug the tackle hole, and, so doing, he will free Maree for backfield work.

MAREE SHOWS WELL. Vance has shown plenty of stuff as a back. He is fast shaping up as a real defensive power, and, while he has had little work at totting the ball, the Jacket staff seems to think that he can be taught the fine points of that art with little difficulty. Even if he were to be used mainly as a defensive back, confining his activities on the offensive to leading the interference, he would be a big help in the advancing power of the Engineers.

A few more scrimmages should be enough to completely "feel out" the possibilities both of Maree in the backfield and Schwartz in the line. And the odds at present seem to favor success for each man in his new hole. Saturday's work, a stiff session which sent the members of the "varsity" squad picked a week ago against each other, saw more progress in the Jacket camp, but still left one or two deficiencies in the Jackets' play.

The line has not yet found itself as a unit. The play of the individual members has been good, and was good Saturday, but they do not work together. And a forward wall united in much better than one composed of seven men, no matter how good these seven may be. Alex and Fincher have spent much time in driving home this point and are slowly attaining their goal.

SHAKY BACKS. The backs, sometimes finding their hole ready for them, sometimes not, have to some extent seemed shaky as they approach the scrimmage line. This will, of course, disappear as the line starts to functioning properly. And the pass attack, while it flashes like a beautifully played rapier when it works, most often resembles the action of a rapier in the hands of one accustomed to swinging a club.

The engineers have never been famed as a passing team. The usual Golden Tornado is a power squad. Alabama, Vanderbilt and Georgia are the passers of the conference. Tech has not really used the air route since Jack McDonough went the way of all good football players.

And the Jackets, faced with a pressing need of supplementing the power this fall and rather out of practice in the art of tossing 'em and making 'em good, will have to have drill.

Coach Alex and Bill Fincher are hard at work at turning out the necessary line to screen the backs and to open holes when needed.

Coach Alex and Mike Miles are working with the backs, teaching them the various maneuvers which are to be used this year.

Coach Alex and "Robbie" Robinson are drilling the ends in their several jobs.

Coach Alex has a hand in all of the work.

Spirit at the Flats is high. Mem-

Two Blue Linemen Who'll Gage Georgia

Here are two of Yale's big linemen who will play against Georgia at Athens on October 12 when the New Haven eleven comes south for the first time in history.

TIGERS DRIVE IN LONG DRILL

Offensive, Defensive Power Shown by Plainsmen in Scrimmage.

Auburn, La., September 21.—Two long scrimmages, one against the sororities and the other against Coach McFadden's Rats, featured the work-out for the Auburn Tigers this afternoon. The varsity lads were all dolled up in new uniforms as Coach Bohler wants them broken in before the opening game against Birmingham Southern Friday night in Cramton bowl at Montgomery.

The Panthers and Tigers will meet in an after-dinner affair under the lights. The varsity lads were very successful against the sororities. They scored seven touchdowns in a regular game. The Blue Shirt offense failed to function very well against the varsity. Their defense was some better, but they were fighting a fierce Tiger who is going to give its opponents some real battles this season.

Coach McFadden brought his fresh team over the hill for the second successive afternoon. They met more opposition than they did Friday. Several passes were completed by the guards; Harkins at center, and sends Jones to quarterback; Young and Crawford to the halves, and Callahan to the fullback post.

Members of the squad realize that they are faced by a hard schedule and that they have lost many good men, but they are working hard to fill those vacancies and to be ready for that hard schedule.

Bulldogs Swamp Rats In Long Scrimmage

Georgia Varsity Scores Six Times—Holds Yearlings to Three First Downs.

Athens, Ga., September 21.—Thoughts of breezy October 12, the day on which Georgia will dedicate her beautiful new stadium, must have been in the minds of the Bulldog football players this afternoon as they displayed the best brand of football seen here this fall. In a game between the varsity and the freshmen in the new Sanford stadium, the Georgia Bulldogs allowed the first year men only three first downs, while they ran up 36 points in their own column.

No extra points were attempted as the goal posts have not been put up in the new stadium, but aside from that the players went through a regular game in a secret practice.

Three different varsity teams were sent into action today by Coach Harry Mehre as many freshman teams and each Bulldog eleven appeared to realize the task which they will face exactly three weeks hence when Yale journeys here to dedicate the new stadium.

There are no stars on the Georgia squad this year, and none are likely to appear, but there is a hard-working and determined bunch of candidates from which Coaches Mehre and Thomas hope to build a strong defensive team, with a fair offense.

The three first downs which the varsity allowed the freshman team with its heavy line and fast backs give some idea of the kind of defense which the Georgia coaches have developed.

Captain Joe Boland's team, composed of Bennett and Leathers, guards; Lynn and Bryant, tackles; Vernon Smith and Herbert Maffett, ends; Downs, quarterback; Patterson and Chandler, halfbacks, and Rothstein, fullback, started the game against Gene Smith's freshmen. The varsity backs started a drive down the field which ended in midfield when Rothstein fumbled, and the freshmen recovered. In three attempts at the three-yard line, the freshmen were forced to punt. Two more fumbles hurt the varsity backfield, but they finally got under the punter's foot and drove the ball over the goal line. Patterson, Rothstein and Chandler took about equal parts in the march, Chandler scoring.

Coach Mehre's second backfield combination was composed of Moran, Davidson and Waugh, and Tommy Woodard went to the line for Flynn. The third team called out by the Georgia mentor to face the freshmen had a backfield composed of Hamilton, quarterback; Dickens and Stoenoff, halfbacks; and Jackson and Dickens, fullbacks. Jackson and Dickens replaced Leathers and Bennett at guards. The varsity backs, running through large holes and behind beautiful interference, scored another marker, without losing possession of the ball. Gerding, who crossed the line, was successful, again a moment later.

The time for the route was 1:46.35, while the winner paid $8.50 to win, $4.40 to place and $3.30 to show.

West Virginia Wins Opener, 16-0

Morgantown, W. Va., September 21.—(AP)—A varied attack that overpowered the defense of West Virginia Wesleyan gave West Virginia university's football team a 16-0 victory in the season's opener today.

Bartrug, mountaineer halfback, scored both of West Virginia's touchdowns and M. Glenn, captain and quarterback, added the other four points with a successful try for point after touchdowns and a placement kick.

Backfield Material.

Coach Charley Berry, of Grove City college, had 20 candidates for backfield duty in his first squad. Graduation broke up the backfield of last year.

AERIAL ATTACK PUZZLES PETRELS

Rats Show Varsity Up in Scrimmage With Snap-py Air Raid.

By Claude Herrin

Oglethorpe's Petrels rounded out their third week of preparation for the Georgia Bulldogs. Scrimmaging the rats at Hernando stadium yesterday afternoon, they looked good enough to give any team they might encounter plenty of opposition. On the offense they were master of the situation all afternoon but on the defense they found difficulty in trying to cope with the aerial attack which they expect to encounter in Athens next Saturday afternoon.

The team that Coach Robertson started the franks with the yearlings was composed of: Ends—Goldsmith and McKissick; tackles—Wall and Coffee; guards—Curley Fulton and Hoke Bell. The backfield was composed of Fox, Woodward, Cy Bell and Frank Anderson, young sophomore quarterback.

The team that started for the freshmen were: Ends, Jones and Higgins; tackles, Patrick and Kenzie; guards, Locket and Rainwater; centers, Martin and Morrow. The backfield was composed of Billie James, Raines, Ray Walker and Sam Baker.

Ray Walker seems to be the star of the fresh lads, this boy is a great passer. He is also doing the kicking for the yearlings.

As the Petrels go into the last week of practice before meeting the Georgia Bulldogs, not one man is on the sick or injured list. Amos Martin, the triple threat back, who hurt his ankle in Thursday's scrimmage, was back at work yesterday, and reports his ankle as good as ever.

In the scrimmage, Cy Bell was again the big star. Time and again he would break away for runs of 50 and 60 yards. Lyman Fox, who like Bell, is ending his football career this year, also had a great day. This boy is the greatest blocking back that has been out at Oglethorpe in quite a while. He is also a good pass receiver.

Frank Anderson, Jr., sophomore quarterback, is going good. His passing and kicking are both well above par.

In the line the work of Fulton and Hoke Bell were outstanding. These two guards are both great offensive players, and with Burford at center will make the center of the line very strong.

Washington Team Books Ten Games

Washington, Ga., September 21.—(Special)—Washington High school will open its 1929 football schedule next Saturday afternoon on the local gridiron with Centerville High as opponent.

Following the opening game Coach Tarpley's eleven will meet Warren High in the second game. Eight other hard games, four away from the home grounds are on the local schedule.

The schedule follows: September 27, Centerville in Washington. October 4, Warrenton in Washington. October 11, Elberton in Elberton. October 18, Royston in Washington. October 25, Madison in Madison. November 1, Hartwell in Washington. November 8, Greensboro in Greensboro. November 15, Toccoa in Toccoa. November 22, Thompson in Washington. November 28, Lavonia in Washington.

Early Games.

Two of West Virginia's Wesleyan's hardest games come early in the year with West Virginia September 21 and New York October 5.

CRIMSON RUNS OVER FRESHMEN IN SCRIMMAGE

Countless Substitutions Used as Alabama Varsity Scores 5 Times.

University, Ala., September 21.—The annual Alabama varsity rat-killing held Saturday afternoon on Denny field was a rather bloodless affair, with an unbroken stream of substitutions marring the play. Although the first-string varsity backfield was at no time working behind its own line, the old men humbled the frosh by a score of 35 to 0.

The punting of Rat John Cain, former Sydney Lanier High ace, featured the day.

The varsity opened with Holan, Hicks, McKight and Campbell in the backfield, opposing Cain, Holley, Walker and Williams, alternating with Cain, Barton and others for the frosh. Most of the varsity linemen and backs saw service at some time or other during the game.

The Rats held the varsity on their two-yard line to ruin the first scoring chance in the first quarter, after which the various varsity backfield combinations made successive drives for five touchdowns.

The first touchdown was made by Jeff Bush, and Hugh Miller dropped the extra point. The other four touchdowns were made by Holm, Billy Brown, Louie Clements and Hugh Miller. The varsity made all of the extra points. Hugh Miller dropping three of them.

Three signal callers were used by the varsity, Billy Hicks, Monk Campbell and Hugh Miller. The frosh relied upon Hilman Holley and John Cain.

It was pretty much of a holiday for Coach Wade's toilers, and the boys who have labored all week enjoyed every moment that they reclined on the grassy sidelines watching the play.

Although the 1929 Alabama Rat aggregation is perhaps the best in recent years the varsity showing was not impressive. For the main part the fellows had a big time. Their first real battle is with Mississippi college next Saturday.

Football Plays And Correct Rulings

PLAY NO. 17. Black, of Mississippi, is called upon to punt on the fourth down with the ball on his own ten-yard line. Sharman, of Louisiana Tech, charges through and blocks the ball before it crosses the line of scrimmage. The ball rolls back of the goal line into the end zone and Black falls on the ball.

What is the correct ruling? ANSWER. The referee rules that a safety has been made on the play and Louisiana shall be awarded two points.

TARHEELS SCORE SIX TOUCHDOWNS

Chapel Hill, N. C., September 21.—The Tarheels celebrated their first practice in beautiful Kenan stadium today with a two-hour scrimmage that for thrills fell little short of a regular mid-season game.

It was easier to tell who was starting than who won. Line-ups were being shifted at every turn to let just about every candidate in, and a total of 16 backs accounted for six touchdowns with runs and passes as the offensive mixture.

The passing combination of Ward to Nash pushed over a matter of inches, the Magner-House combination, with House running 50 yards through broken fields for two touchdowns in a single fullback drive often show. The diminutive quarterback, Johnny Branch, did some stellar running and passing as well. Slusser knocked 30 yards off tackle for a touchdown and was looking good on end runs and pass receiving.

Either or both of these fights may have a direct bearing on the highly-muddled heavyweight situation. Loughran is making his debut as a full-fledged heavyweight after a long reign as chief of the light-heavyweight division.

Sharkey, by his own admission, is the likeliest prospect among the current heavyweights and he intends to further his claims on Gene Tunney's vacated title by punching Tommy into oblivion.

Campolo is the newest and the largest of the foreign invading contingent. Towering 6 feet 6 1/2 inches and weighing 225 pounds, his victories over Arthur DeKuh and Tom Heene have made him at least a promising title prospect.

Scott's case is rather a queer one. He was brought here from England. Continued on Fourth Sport Page.

BUSY FISTIC WEEK AHEAD IN NEW YORK

Campolo and Scott, and Sharkey and Loughran To See Action.

By William J. Dunn. New York, September 21.—Fight fans with a weakness for the over-size maulers of the heavyweight class will find plenty to command their attention soon.

Monday night Phil Scott, of England, and Victorio Campolo, of Argentina, battle each other at Ebbets' field, Brooklyn.

The others whose taste lean to home-grown products will find Jack Sharkey, of Boston, and Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, opposing in a 15-round melee at Yankee stadium on Thursday evening.

LOCAL BANKERS LEAVE M. J. COSTA, PRESIDENT, FOR CONVENTION TODAY OF COSTA'S, PASSES

Strickland, Kennedy and Head of Famous Student Stephens To Attend A.B.A. Meeting in San Francisco.

Robert Strickland, Jr., vice president of the Fourth National Bank; J. S. Kennedy, vice president of the Atlanta & Lowry National Bank; and R. G. Stephens, trust officer of the Trust Company of Georgia, will leave today for San Francisco to attend the annual convention of the American Bankers Association.

As a member of the executive council of the national bank division of the association, and chairman of this division's committee on relations with the federal reserve system, Mr. Strickland will have an active part in its proceedings. On account of the widespread interest in proposed changes in the present national banking laws with reference to branch banking, and the attention that is expected to be devoted to the tendency toward chain banking on a large scale which has developed in the recent past in various sections of the country, it is generally believed that the association's 1929 meeting will be one of the most important that has occurred in many years.

Discussions of these phases of banking policy will have a peculiar interest for Mr. Strickland in view of the fact that the Fourth National Bank, with which he is identified, has entered within the past year upon a broad program of extension that has resulted in acquisition by it of substantial stockholding interests in several Georgia cities.

KENTUCKY GOVERNOR FACES NEW CHARGES CLAY CRAWFORD DIES; FUNERAL RITES TODAY

Frankfort, Ky., September 21.—(AP) Governor Flem D. Sampson, seven members he appointed to the state textbook commission and 25 textbook publishers today were under indictment for receiving and giving specimen copies of school books in connection with the award of contracts.

The publishers were indicted last yesterday by the Franklin county grand jury, which the day before had returned true bills against the governor and the commissioners at the close of a three-week investigation into affairs of the commission and various state departments.

The governor is scheduled to go on trial on October 2, the charges having been set by Circuit Judge Ben G. Williams after the chief executive appeared in court with his attorneys and entered a formal plea of not guilty.

All parties indicted are charged with misdemeanors, but the publishers under the law may be fined from $1,000 to $20,000. The state conviction of the charges against the governor and the commissioners is a fine of not more than $1,000 or a jail sentence of not more than six months, or both.

Attorneys for the commissioners said today the charges rest entirely on interpretation of the statutes concerning and regulating the textbook commission. One statute stipulates that specimen copies be provided for personal use of the members of the commission, but no mention is made whether specimen copies should be provided individual members.

GROcery HELD UP BY THREE NEGROES; $185 IS STOLEN

Three negroes entered the grocery of Mac Krieger, at 365 Highland avenue, Saturday night and at the point of pistols took $185 from the cash register, it was reported by Call Officers L. P. Higgins and J. W. Mosley, who, with Detectives D. E. Blair and W. J. Anderson, are investigating the case.

The negroes ordered Mr. and Mrs. Krieger to turn their backs to them, and with a command to two negro customers who were in the store to be quiet, proceeded to loot the register.

NOTED SCULPTOR IS AMONG ACCUSED IN BLACKMAIL PLOT

Washington, September 21.—(AP)—W. Clark Noble, noted sculptor, and four others are under indictment here on charges of conspiracy to blackmail Mr. and Mrs. Clarence C. Calhoun, socially prominent sponsors of the Women's Universal Alliance and a project to establish a memorial to motherhood.

The indictment, just returned by the District of Columbia grand jury, specifies that the five conspired "to accuse and threaten to accuse" the Calhouns "of certain crimes and of certain conduct which if true would tend to discredit" them and "subject them and each of them to ridicule and contempt of society."

The indictment, which alleges, with publication of "one of the great" scandals of the country has "even" unless they pay $100,000. Deeds of the threatened scandal were not set forth.

Those indicted with the sculptor include his wife, Emilie B. Noble, Anna M. Hillenbrand, James F. Bird and Stephen A. Armstrong, Jr. All except Mrs. Hillenbrand are at liberty under bond.

BYRD WILL HEAR SPECIAL PROGRAM BY 75 ARTISTS

New York, September 21.—(AP)—A special "Broadway" radio program for Commander Richard E. Byrd and members of his south pole expedition will be broadcast on the night of September 28, the National Broadcasting Company announced today.

Seventy-five of the country's best known radio artists and several leading engineers will appear on the program. The program will center about the "Roaring Forties" and numbers will be broadcast from the leading reviews now playing on Broadway.

Short wave transmitters will play the program to the Antarctic and radio engineers will direct the reception at the south pole. Seventy-five stations throughout the country will be hooked up in the broadcast.

Telephone Officials To Lay Corner Stone

Architect's conception of the completed first unit of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company's building being erected at Ivy street and Auburn avenue, where corner-stone laying exercises will be observed Wednesday. Ultimately the building is to rise to a height of 25 stories and will be one of the largest in this section.

With frame and substructure of the new telephone building, being erected at the corner of Ivy street and Auburn avenue, practically completed and workmen ready to start on the modern exterior, the long distance and trunk line departments have been formulated for laying the cornerstone with ceremonies participated in by leading Atlantians. At 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mayor I. N. Baker, president of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, the Rev. N. H. High Moor will open and close the exercises with appropriate invocation and benediction. The Rev. N. H. High Moor will open and close the exercises with appropriate invocation and benediction.

The foundations and columns of the building are designed to carry a building which will rise 400 feet above the street level. This height is equivalent to the usual office building of at least 28 stories, but in view of the high ceilings required for modern telephone equipment it is only possible to provide 25 stories in the ultimate structure. In addition to 19 additional stories, plans have been made for lateral extensions to the east which will equal the floor area now under construction.

When finally completed the building will represent an investment of $5,500,000, exclusive of land or central office equipment. The architectural development of the building utilizes the set-back treatment of the modernist school and accentuates vertical lines with a minimum of emphasis to the horizontal lines. It is said to be the first typical modern set-back type of building undertaken in this section and to represent the best technique known to the building arts.

The exterior is to be of cut limestone blocks and this, together with the exceptional height, accentuated by the architectural design, will provide a monumental structure which is expected to give an exceptionally pleasing appearance.

In preparing for the foundations, basement and sub-basement it was necessary to remove 20,000 cubic yards of earth and 7,000 cubic yards of rock, much of which was solid. The skeleton framework consists of 3,000 tons of structural steel and the outside walls will require 50 carloads of limestone.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Minter-Melton Announce New Aid to Home Builder

A trend toward greater leniency for the prospective home owner in financing the erection of a new residence is seen as a recent development in home construction circles. One of the newest moves in this direction was announced Saturday by the Minter-Melton Corporation, with a protective feature against loss through sickness, accident or death.

"Many people who want to build homes and who could easily pay for them under the Minter-Melton method of financing, provided they were not overtaken by sickness, accident, or death, hesitate for fear that in the event of sickness or accident they would lose their home through their inability to keep up their payments, and in case of death their families would be unable to pay off the balance," said W. E. Minter, president of the corporation, in making the announcement.

"While we feel that this protective feature will strongly appeal to anyone who is planning to build, it is particularly for such people as those mentioned above that our plan was devised," continued Mr. Minter. "It eliminates the risks that they visualize. It permits them to build at once, with the definite assurance that in case they should suffer accident or illness their payments will be cancelled by the Minter-Melton Corporation as long as they are sick or disabled; and that in the event of loss of life all notes and mortgages will be cancelled, and a clear deed to their home turned over to their family."

This new plan is regarded as working a distinct step forward on the part of the Minter-Melton Corporation, one of Atlanta's foremost home building organizations. Mr. Minter, its president, has been an outstanding figure in national home building and home financing circles for the past 25 years, having been the originator in Atlanta of the monthly payment method of financing the building of homes for those who own lots. More than 27,000 homes having been built and financed under his direction in the eastern portion of the United States.

Keller Melton, vice president, is also a pioneer in the home building field, having introduced the Minter plan in Atlanta many years ago, since which time he has been prominently identified with home building activities here.

$270,000 Church Properties Deal Is Ratified

Church properties involved in $270,000 in real estate transactions which were finally consummated this past week with ratification from the Congregational Home Missionary Board of New York. To the left is shown the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, corner of Ponce de Leon and Piedmont avenues, which was purchased as its new home by the Central Congregational church for $120,000. To the right, the present Central Congregational church property sold for $150,000. It is at the corner of Carnegie way and Ellis street, near Spring street, and with one other parcel constitutes the only portion of "Atlanta's $10,000,000 block" that remains unimproved with commercial structures. It was purchased by J. H. Ewing & Sons for a client. Unsubstantiated rumor has it that the Carnegie way parcel was acquired for the Candler interests, which obtained a 15-year lease calling for erection of a minor commercial structure on the site.

Weekly Doings Of the Atlanta Realtors Board

Officers and directors of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold their monthly dinner meeting at 6 o'clock Tuesday night at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

President John J. Thompson urges that every director of the board be present at this meeting as several matters of importance will be brought up at this meeting.

The semi-monthly luncheon of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, which should have been held Thursday, September 19, has been postponed until Thursday, September 27. This luncheon will be held at the Round Table tearoom at 12:30 o'clock.

OFFICE SPACE LEASES ANNOUNCED BY PALMER

Office space in the Palmer properties, which consists of the Palmer building, 101 Marietta street, and the Glenn building, has shown a marked increase during the past 60 days, John S. Knox, lease department head, announced. Leases consummated by Palmer, Incorporated, during this period are estimated to involve an aggregate rental in excess of $75,000.

"The most gratifying phase of the many leases recently closed for space in our office buildings is that practically all bring new businesses and new citizens to Atlanta. The capital stock of the corporations recently establishing headquarters for the first time in Atlanta would total more than $100,000. We feel confident that this marked activity in our properties is merely the forerunner of exceptionally good business this fall throughout the southeast," Mr. Knox stated.

Enlarge Civic Buildings Center

Jackson and Martin estate corner at Capitol square and Capitol place, which recently became the property of the state of Georgia and marked another step toward realization of a public buildings center in the area now occupied by the state capitol and the new city hall. As an instance of the importance of keeping the records of the Georgia Title & Guaranty Co., stated that when the deeds to the properties of the estates of Henry Jackson and Mrs. Lula W. Martin on Capitol square, purchased last week by the state of Georgia, were delivered to his company for the purpose of having the titles examined and insured, it was discovered that they included a warranty deed from James R. Crew to George Gibbon, dated April 8, 1862, and that it had been recorded in book "F," which is supposed to have been lost or destroyed. When the Georgia Title Company sent his old deed to T. C. Miller, superior court clerk, he readily agreed to its recording in order that the record chain of title might be complete.

TEN COMMUNITY STORES INVOLVED IN $115,000 SALES

Property involving groups of 10 community stores were featured in three sales totaling $115,000, reported Saturday by the Georgia Title & Guaranty Co., which handled investigation and insurance of titles.

The northeast corner of Peachtree road and East Peach Ferry road, in Buckhead, was sold by Dr. Julian H. Buff and Dr. LeRoy W. Childs to the Tenure Securities Company for a consideration of $60,000. The parcel, known as 3081-83-85 Peachtree road, measures 80 feet on Peachtree and 125 feet along East Peach Ferry. It is improved with three community store buildings leased to Lane Drug Company, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and Minikinet's market, and was purchased for an investment. John C. Baldwin, Jr., of Adams-Cates Co., negotiated the deal, which was a cash transaction. The property consisting of seven community stores on the ground floor and office above, located at 1900-96 Boulevard drive, N. E., was sold by W. T. and Annie Whisenant to Edgar Morris. The consideration was $30,000. The parcel has a frontage of 91 feet and extends back 115 feet, a portion of the site being unimproved. It was bought as an investment.

A third transaction featuring the deals recorded by the Georgia Title & Guaranty Co. involved sale of the Druid Hills residence at 971 Oakdale road for a consideration of $25,000 from C. H. Johnson to W. H. Atkinson. The property measures 250 feet on Oakdale and extends back an average depth of 400 feet.

EXPANSION PLANS OF BUILDING LOAN FIRM ANNOUNCED

Definite plans have been formulated and set in operation for expansion of activities of the Columbia Building and Loan Association. It was announced Saturday by L. H. Beall, chairman of the board, and John H. Tait, managing director. This development will be of wide influence as it embraces an additional issue of $4,000,000 in capital.

"The building and loan associations of Georgia are at last keeping pace with their sister states in development of these splendid bodies," it was pointed out by Mr. Tait.

New York, September 21.—(AP)—

The stock market went through a series

losing ground, while the public ## utilities moved upward. Trading was ## in fairly heavy volume.

Credit conditions were again an im-

pate in the government overdraft

instead of placing additional credit

into the market itself, thereby tempo## rarily restricting the volume of credit

The further rise of $35,000,000 in ## federal reserve brokers' loans, the fifth ## successive weekly increase to a new ## high record, had a somewhat distur-

bating effect upon speculative sentiment.

Two interpretations were placed upon

ment trust funds caused the increase in

Friday's selling was attributed, in ## some quarters, to the financial diffi## culty of the London market, while ## others held that the increase was ## not made clear why there had been

Government Cotton Estimate

Called Too High by Analyst

BY I. V. SHANNON.

New Orleans, September 21.—In a ## previous article I expressed the opin## ion that the government's last esti## mate of the cotton crop was too high,

notwithstanding the reduction of 700,

000 bales which it made from its Au## gust preliminary.

I have been requested by some of ## my correspondents to outline more ## fully the basis of my belief and to ## explain how I arrived at the estimate ## of 14,825,000 bales. This would be the ## lightest crop in 10 years, except ## for that of 1925. The August ## estimate was rather good, but the ## September estimate was made in ## the north central states. The crop

in Maine was increased by a large ## amount, and in the western states

of about one-fourth from last year's ## estimate. Sharp decreases were made

Paris Predicts - New York Affirms - Rich's Presents

The Correct Length in Winter COATS

—Every day and many times a day we hear the query, "To what lengths will coats go in this hem-dropping situation? Will they blindly follow the lead of longer dresses? Will they cover the knees and sweep toward the ankles?" Paris answers this question in the most practical and becoming manner . . . New York affirms and Rich's corroborates it . . . with Coats that Firmly Stand Their Ground and Stubbornly Refuse to Go Past the Knee—Coats that Purposely Pause at 3-4 or 7-8 Lengths to Reveal the Flaring Princess Line of Autumn's Longer Frocks.

WATSON-POWELL.

Mr. and Mrs. Rom P. Watson, of Wilson, N. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to Dr. Vernon Edwin Powell, of Atlanta, the date of the wedding to be announced later.

Watson-Powell

Engagement Is Of Wide Interest

Interest centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Rom P. Watson, of Wilson, N. C., of the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to Dr. Vernon Edwin Powell, of Atlanta. The engagement was announced September 9 in the Wilson Daily Times.

Miss Watson, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rom P. Watson, is a graduate of the Randolph-Macon college at Lynchburg, Va. She was prominent in college activities, and a member of the Kappa Delta sorority. While in her senior year she was voted the prettiest girl of the school. During recent years Miss Watson has traveled extensively in this country and abroad.

Numbered among the lineal ancestry of the bride-elect are many well known figures of colonial and subsequent history. On her paternal side she is related to the Beckams, of Virginia, who gave to the state of Kentucky one of its illustrious governors. From her mother she is a descendant of Governor John Branch, who was the first secretary of the navy, from the state of North Carolina. Her parents are identified with the social, religious and business life of Wilson. Mr. Watson is president of the R. P. Watson Tobacco Company, which he organized in 1907.

The bridegroom-elect is a native Atlantan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Everett Powell, a prominently established family in Georgia. Dr. Powell's preparatory education was received at Marist college. Attending Emory college during his latter years at Oxford, Ga., he completed his medical studies at Emory university, in Atlanta, with the class of 1923. Four years were spent in post-graduate hospital services, including an assistant resident physicianship in the Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. Dr. Powell is a member of the Capitol City Club, the Kappa Alpha academic and the Phi Chi medical fraternities. Since 1922 he has been associated in the practice of medicine with Dr. Stewart R. Roberts, widely known physician, and is an associate member of the American College of Physicians. In addition to this he is an active member of four other national and local medical societies.

Miss Beasley Weds C. A. Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Beasley announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Edna, to Charles Albert Johnston Wednesday, September 11, at the First Christian church. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will be at home at 2010 Ridgewood drive.

Mary Barili Is Honored.

Mrs. Alfred Barili entertained at a children's party yesterday, complimenting her little granddaughter, Mary Barili.

Miss McGee Weds Mr. Chandler At Home Ceremony in Kirkwood

The marriage of Miss Irma McGee and H. S. Chandler, Jr., was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. McGee, on Warren street, in Kirkwood, before an assemblage of relatives and friends, with the Rev. W. T. Hamby officiating. An appropriate musical program was given prior to the ceremony by Mrs. Cecil Young, soloist, and Mrs. LeRoy Phillips pianist. The marriage rites were read in the living room, where an artistic color motif of orchid, pink and green prevailed. Pinks and white flowers were arranged in the hall and in the living room, and a lovely background for the bride party.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Henry T. McGee, and the groom was attended by the bride's brother, Haden McGee, of Birmingham, Ala., who acted as best man. The bride wore an exquisite costume of white chiffon made with a graceful skirt that reached to ankle length in the back. A veil of misty white tulle was held to her hair by a band of orange blossoms, the folds of the veil forming a train that fell far beyond the skirt length. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

Miss Elizabeth Haden, the maid of honor, was an attractive figure wearing a gown of pink chiffon veiling pink silk. She carried a bouquet of pink dahlias tied with pink satin ribbon. Miss Mary Helen Chandler, the groom's sister, was the junior bridesmaid and wore a costume of delicate green chiffon and carried a bouquet of orchid dahlias tied with green tulle. Little Miss Mary Ellen Shumate, the flower girl, wore a dainty frock of pale blue chiffon and carried a small basket of garden flowers.

Reception Follows.

Immediately after the marriage service Mr. and Mrs. McGee entertained at a reception, at which they were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Chandler, of Decatur, the groom's parents, and members of the bride party. Mrs. McGee wore a costume of navy blue crepe with a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses. Mrs. Chandler was gowned in black and white chiffon and her shoulder bouquet was of valley lilies. Mrs. J. L. Jones kept the bride's book, and wore a gown of turquoise blue chiffon and a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses. Miss Annie Haden presided at the punch bowl and wore a gown of French blue crepe with a shoulder bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Chandler and his bride left in the late afternoon for a motor trip to Florida. The bride's traveling costume was fashioned of navy blue crepe with a small felt hat of dark blue. On their return they will take possession of their new home in Decatur. Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Haden, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Ernest Scott, of Savannah, and Haden McGee, of Birmingham, Ala.

Miss Aline Peacock Is Honor Guest.

Miss Julia Peacock entertained with a linen shower Saturday afternoon at her home, 650 Pearce street, in honor of her sister, Miss Aline Peacock, a popular bride-elect of October. She was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. A. T. Peacock. The home was decorated with pink and white vines and pink roses. After two appropriate contests the bride went on a treasure hunt, following a pink thread through three of the beautifully decorated rooms, at the end of which she found the lovely shower. The guests included Misses Elsie Cantrell, Ethel Cantrell, Gladys Rhodes, Louise Shackelford, Kathryn Peacock, Elizabeth O'Kelley, Mesdames W. C. Cantrell, Emma Shackelford, M. E. Maddox, Ross Adair, Dora V. Gale, T. D. Denson, Clifford Vittur, Little Denson, Harold Denson, E. M. Cantrell, Fred C. James, T. A. Peacock, J. F. Peacock, F. H. O'Kelley, T. C. Harper, R. E. McDaniel, R. H. Peacock and W. L. Peacock.

Miss Shearer Weds William Midkiff At Home Ceremony

A marriage of interest was that of Miss Hazelle Margaret Shearer and William Edward Midkiff, Jr., which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shearer, in Druid Hills, at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Dr. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends. The home was beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Stately palms interspersed with baskets of cut flowers and candelabra formed the background for the ceremony. A musical program was rendered by Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs on the harp, accompanied by Miss Emily Harrel on the violin. Among the numbers were "I Love You Truly," "O, Promise Me" and "Out of the Dust to You." During the informal ceremony appropriate selections were rendered.

The bride's costume was of blue transparent velvet with tuck-in blouse of eggshell chiffon, blue slippers and accessories to match. Her bouquet was of sweetheart roses, showered with valley lilies. The bride's mother wore blue transparent velvet with shoulder corsage of pink roses. An informal reception was held. The bride and groom left for a trip to Lexington, Ky., to visit the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Midkiff. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Peacock, of Corns, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cook, of Biloxi, Miss.; and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Midkiff, of Hickory, N. C. Upon their return to the city they will be at home at 733 Frederick street, N. E.

Major Homer Watkins Speaks At Woman's Club Tea Sept. 27

Major Homer Watkins will be principal speaker at the international tea Friday afternoon, September 27, at the Atlanta Woman's Club at 4 o'clock. Major Watkins, who is a distinguished lawyer, served overseas during the World War, making for himself a brilliant record as an officer, being noted for his rare military genius and skill. He will discuss international relations from the standpoint of a soldier, giving some of his own experiences on the battlefield.

Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, chairman of international relations, will preside, assisted by the president, Mrs. John R. Hornady and the officers of the club, including Mesdames Irving S. Thomas, M. L. Throver, Odie Poundstone, J. P. Billups, W. P. Dunn, Arthur H. Hazard, Harry G. Poole and Miss Mary Cayce.

Special guests invited will include representatives of many of the foreign nations, including Dr. G. H. McKee, instructor in French for the Georgia School of Technology who spent many years in France, and Professor James A. Compomier, instructor in Spanish for the Georgia School of Technology, a native of Spain.

Mrs. D. C. Adams, well-known in musical circles, will be heard in a group of songs. She was a former pupil of Miss Margaret Hecht. The club will be decorated by committee of which Mrs. Fred C. Rice is chairman. Reservations should be made with Mrs. T. E. Simmons, club hostess, by noon Thursday if possible, by calling Hemlock 4836.

Tuesday Bridge Party.

Mesdames Frederic C. Rice, chairman, and W. Clyde Drummond, co-chairman of the decorations committee of the club, will sponsor a bridge party Tuesday afternoon, September 24, at 2:30 o'clock in the banquet hall. Mrs. W. P. Dunn, chairman of parties, will assist Mrs. Rice and have as her committee on the sale of tables Mesdames Thomas H. Pitts, Jesse M. Manry and James T. Williams. Many prizes have been donated, including rare Iris roots and bulbs for fall planting, hand-made handkerchiefs, decorated cakes, cut flowers from choice shoppes and other things too numerous to mention.

Mrs. Foster, Noted Bridge Expert, States New "Challenge" Rules

BY ANNIE ADAIR FOSTER.

Editor Constitution: Sidney Lenz is the Bobby Jones of the bridge world. I might call Bobby the Lenz in the golf world and both champions should be complimented.

Mr. Lenz wrote a book on contract published in 1927, in which he devoted a chapter entitled "The Challenge," which you will find out through this article is the same as an informative double. He wrote facetiously about the variation of informative doubles. These doubles never worried me personally, as I have always followed Milton C. Work's system. The fault in the informative double is with the doubler, who so often holds less than the value the partner expects.

I have received from George Reith, chairman of the card committee of the Knickerbocker Whist Club of New York, of which I am a non-resident member, the following, which speaks for itself:

The Challenge To Be Used Instead of the Negative Double.

"Amendments to the laws of auction, 1926 and the laws of contract, 1927, to be in effect at the Knickerbocker Whist Club from August 15 to October 15, 1928: (the card committee will later meet to approve or disapprove their permanent adoption).

"1. Any player whose partner has not made a bid, double or challenge may in his proper turn, after either opponent has bid (or doubled), utter the words, 'I challenge.' It shall then be mandatory upon the partner of the challenger either (a) to make a bid, or (b) to double the opponent's declaration, unless the challenge is in the meantime overruled with a bid by the other opponent. (c) If the partner of the challenger pass in error the pass shall be regarded as a double of the bid challenged.

"2. If the partner of the challenger doubles, the latter must pass, unless either opponent bids, redoubles or challenges.

"3. The adversary at the left of the challenger may either (a) pass, (b) bid a higher number of tricks in his partner's declaration, or make another bid which will hold the contract, or (c) utter the words, 'Challenge accepted.' The use of this gesture is for the purpose of informing his partner that his holdings may be other than those of a pass. The 'challenge accepted' does not relieve nor prevent the partner of the challenger from either bidding or doubling later.

Executive Committee Meets at Mrs. Rivers'.

The executive committee of the woman's board of Oglethorpe university and of the woman's board itself meets at "Roxborough," the country home of Mrs. E. Rivers, president of the board, Wednesday, October 2, at 3 o'clock, and the general board meeting will follow immediately thereafter. The first fall meeting of the board is always one of especial interest because it occurs at the time of the opening of the university and the activities of the university present a fresh focus of interest each year. More girls are enrolled at Oglethorpe for 1929-1930 than ever before and this will increase the efforts of the woman's board to participate as fully as possible in the events at the university this year. Mrs. Rivers urges members to attend the meeting.

Miss Oakes To Wed Mr. Greenoe At Ceremony in October

Miss Anne Sue Oakes, whose engagement is announced today to George Patterson Greenoe, the marriage to be solemnized in October. Photograph by Bascom Biggers.

Cordial interest centers in the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Anne Sue Oakes to George Patterson Greenoe, the marriage to be solemnized in October. The bride-elect is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Oakes. Her sister is Mrs. A. G. Maynard, of Decatur; Mrs. C. T. Martin, of Montreal, Canada, and Mrs. W. H. Simmons, of St. Louis, Mo. She is a graduate of Decatur High school.

Mr. Greenoe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Philip Greenoe. He received his education at the Technological High school and Emory university and is now associated in business with his father, who is president of the Dixie Packing Company.

Camp Fire Girls Meet This Week.

Group meetings and craft activities will hold the interest of the Camp Fire Girls throughout the coming week. Groups are reorganizing all over the city and the following groups will hold meetings this week: Kinkadee group meets Monday afternoon, 1395 Euclid avenue, in the home of Mrs. H. M. Traywick. The Ansley Park group meets Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Arthur Price, 164 Barksdale drive. The Swannanoa group of Decatur meets Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. Howell Green, 645 Sycamore street, Decatur.

Ga. The Ithaca and Owaka groups of Girls' High school meet Friday afternoon.

The girls of the various groups winning the first, second and third prizes in the Do-Nut drive meet at the office Saturday morning, September 28, to decorate the canoe paddles and put the symbols on the leather skin. So far, very few symbols have been submitted pertaining to the offer made by Mrs. Grace in regard to a name and symbol for headquarters.

Girls are urged to get their names and symbols in before Saturday morning, October 5, at which time the contest will close.

Camp Fire headquarters has been made the recipient of a very artistic totem pole, presented by Miss Alice J. Lane, the pole being made for Miss Lane by an Indian chief in Alaska and has a very interesting history.

fashion's version of 'street
scene'

daytime dresses

Scene 1, corner of Peachtree at Cain, with smart fashions emanating from Allen's, "the store all women know." Enter Madame, modishly attired in black transparent velvet that follows the seductive lines of the new silhouette. These lines are charming in their subtlety. A higher waist than has been in fashion for some time accentuates the length of the skirt that is, in addition, an inch or two longer. The soft draped effect, particularly important this season, is beautifully achieved in transparent velvet. Madame will be seen again in satins, crepes and chiffons . . . all following in their fashion the current mode so beautifully typified in the black velvet shown here.

costume suits

Scene 2, same site, the second lady of the cast appears in the smartly casual costume suit destined for a role of great importance this season. The jacket ensemble is in greater demand than ever, and the lady in this little sketch wears an exquisitely tailored suit from Mangone. It is rust colored imported Leda, with an eggshell crepe blouse, embroidered in gold. The coat has a collar of elmwood dyed wolf. And this is only one! Lanvin has a beautiful creation (shown at Allen's) of rosewood lapin, with fingertip coat, that will undoubtedly create a sensation upon its appearance.

The New Mode in Millinery Considers the Individual

There is, of course, a definite general trend . . . off the forehead, close to the neck in the back, long on the sides. But this trend is varied to suit the individual face, and every little twist and turn has a meaning all its own!

Above, the off-face style is severe, abrupt, and comes down very long on both sides. The hat below, however, has a slight ripple softening the off-forehead line, and comes down long on only one side. Infinite variations are possible with these general, smart lines.

As Four Women Hear It

Oglethorpe University Co-ed Possessed With Desire To Make Pathology And Analytical Chemistry Her Life Work

THAT INDISPUTABLE BOOK, Burke's "Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage," proclaims Sir Edward Robert Murray, of Scotland, thirteenth baronet from Duner, who traces his lineage back to the ancient house of Murray of Blackbarony and springs from William Murray, who acquired the lands of Duner in the fifteenth century. For more than twenty years the heir presumptive to this august title, Rowland William Murray, although born a subject of the British empire, has been a distinguished resident of Atlanta, going about his daily life without any apparent evidence that perhaps in the future he may be named his brother's successor. With Mrs. Murray, formerly Miss Gertrude McCabe, of Belfast, Ireland, a son and daughter, Miss Gertrude Murray and Rowland W. Murray, Jr., the latter being in direct line as the fifteenth baronet of Duner. Mr. Murray resides on Flagler avenue, maintaining a dignified establishment in keeping with the home-like residences in this particular section of Ansley park, a subdivision wherein representative Atlantans have chosen to build their abodes. It was here in the Capital City in the Empire State of the south that Mr. and Mrs. Murray's children were born and in Atlanta they are being reared in a home tempered with refinement, culture and religious influence. Here they are being educated, Miss Murray having been fired with the desire to make pathology and analytical chemistry her life work. With this as her objective goal, she enters tomorrow upon her junior year at Oglethorpe University, where she enjoys the distinction of being the only feminine member of the Alchemist Club, its suitable motto being "To make the best of the worst." Research work in Europe upon the above subject, will follow her college graduation, and will fit this ambitious girl to impart her knowledge to those seeking such. But, in the meantime, Miss Murray is gaining experience as student instructor in biology and chemistry at Oglethorpe, her superior knowledge of these studies qualifying her elevation by the faculty to that of student instructor. She is a scholarly young girl possessing brilliant mental attainments, whose poise and dignity, coupled with graciousness of manner, are her principal assets.

That she is a popular student at Oglethorpe and is blessed with an engaging personality matching her blonde loveliness, is demonstrated through her college activities, as Miss Murray's name appears in the membership of the Zeta Tau sorority, Duchess, Boosters, Girls' Glee and Players Clubs, debate council, co-ed council, Petrel Follies, is elected "co-ed mother," and is manager of the basketball team.

It seems nothing more than natural that Rowland W. Murray, Jr., a cadet at Marist College, upon whom will devolve at some future time the title borne at present by his paternal uncle, leans towards soldiering, for his aristocratic illustrious ancestors have been since 1630, soldiers in the English army. The present baronet, Sir Edward Robert Murray, served as lieutenant colonel in the South African war from 1899 to 1902, and was decorated with the Distinguished Service Order in the Boer War. One of his forerunners, the seventh baronet, Sir James Murray Pulteney, served with the British forces in America in 1793 as adjutant-general, and was subsequently secretary of war. But the life of a soldier is not the only career to which the liking of Mr. Murray, for he is quite an ardent football player and very active in athletics at Marist College. He also has a legal bent, and perhaps later on will take up the study of law, with a view to making it his profession. Thus it happens that descendants of a long and time-honored line of English baronets have taken their places in the annals of the community, and are carving splendid records. Never by word or deed have they evinced their relationship to Great Britain's house of Murray, preferring always to live unostentatiously and quietly in a city where only a chosen few know of the prominence of the family in England. One Four Women confronted the Murray family last week with a copy of Burke's "Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage," stressing the right of a journalist to use the perfectly true story written in The Constitution to-day.

ANY VISITOR arriving in Atlanta at Brookwood station in the pouring rain last Monday afternoon would surely have thought by the size of the crowd that no lesser personages than Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh were being given a send-off. The actual incentive for the assembly was a group of Atlanta's loveliest sub-debs departing for school, and in the group were several young ladies who had decided at the last fleeting moment to catch the train, sans tickets, sans Pullman reservations, sans everything save an abundance of the faith which goes with youth. The description of the group after being settled on the train is portrayed in a letter received by Miss Rose Moran from her niece, Miss Elizabeth Everett, who was journeying to Washington where she is enrolled at the Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Miss Everett wrote: "There was a perfect mob of us on the train, and the ones who hadn't decided until the last minute to come, didn't have any tickets or reservations. They didn't know what to do about it, so after dinner a girl who had a portable victrola, ventured the bright idea of having a dance in the dining car. The waiters cleared away the tables and we really had the time of our lives. We danced and played bridge and sang, and one college girl who could read palms told everybody's fortune. Don't you think we did the proper thing in sitting up all night to keep the girls company who had no place to sleep? I do. And we had a wonderful time doing it, too."

NOT LONG AGO across the rolling plains of Rumania a group of women were treading wearily from the forest to their homes, heavy tree boles, and beams of wood strapped to their backs and shoulders. Seeing them an American missionary at the seminary at Bucharest, Rumania, inquired of the natives at his side: "Are any of these women who are carrying this terrible burden for a distance of four miles the wives of Christians here?" "Oh no," was the prompt reply. "If they were married to Christians their husbands would carry the load for them."

The missionary who made the Inquiry was Daniel T. Hurley, who with Mrs. Hurley held services in native costume at the Druid Hills Baptist church last week. During their short stay in the city, Mr. and Mrs. Hurley, who have been the only Baptist missionaries in Rumania for the past six years, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Marion T. Benson at their home, 1040 Springdale road.

"If the American missionaries to Rumania do nothing more than teach the men to treat their wives and children with more courtesy and consideration they shall not have labored in vain," said Mr. Hurley in speaking of the work which after a year's stay in America will be resumed in the old world country.

"One of the greatest needs in Rumania today," Mr. Hurley told friends while here, "is the demand for chapel in which to worship. Although there are a few made with thick mud walls and no floors the majority of the poorer classes use the front room of the home as a chapel, assembling their friends and relatives for the special service. A comparatively small sum will build and equip a chapel for these people in many ways unfortunate."

At the services at the Druid Hills church Mr. and Mrs. Hurley presented perfect pictures of Rumanians in their native dress. Mr. Hurley in long white cotton trousers partially covered by a long surplus heavily embroidered in vari-colored designs, black and red predominating, with full flowing sleeves, similarly embellished was almost effeminate in appearance. Mrs. Hurley's dress featured a skirt falling in graceful full folds from an inset yoke at the waist over which extended long red and black tassels reaching almost to the floor. The waist heavily embroidered in red and black featured a yolk of embroidery more than 100 years of age, a token of esteem given the lovely young missionary by a native of the country which for so many years she has untiringly served. Mr. and Mrs. Hurley left Atlanta for Texas where Mr. Hurley will pursue a course of study relative to his work in Rumania. They returned to America in the spring and will return to their work abroad a year from that time.

THERE IS A seeming trend toward efficiency to the nth degree in everything nowadays. There are miniature dictionaries, portable victrolas, radios in match boxes and dozens of other modern conveniences. So why not diminish the size of the family? That is exactly what Mr. Wimberly Peters brought back from his Caribbean cruise several months ago—a "vest-pocket edition" of a monkey—the tiniest mammoth ever seen in Atlanta.

"Chico," as he is called, rides in the car everywhere Mrs. Peters goes. He adores motoring and shrieks and squeals as if his heart would break when the car leaves without him. When asked as to his approximate weight, Mrs. Peters replied: "Oh I don't know, I'd say he would weigh about as much as a walnut."

BUILT OF ENDURING Texas granite, terra cotta, and buff-colored brick, the twenty-story Rhodes-Haverty office building rising majestically above Peachtree street becomes an ornament to Atlanta's ever-changing skyline, and is a lasting monument to two of the foremost residents, that patron of art, J. J. Haverty, and the late A. G. Rhodes. Partners in the furniture business for something like close to half a century, these pioneers, having bought the land in 1900, agreed upon the erection of the structure several years ago, so that the death of Mr. Rhodes not many months ago altered not at all the plans being carried out to a letter. A lobby, its floors laid in unpolished Travertine marble, imported from Rome, Italy, is paneled in the same marble polished to a high degree, a particular treatment rarely ever applied to this special specimen. The ceiling, hand-painted in oil, depicting the Italian Renaissance, is the exquisite work of Athos Manaboni, a wonderfully talented young Italian who has lived for nine years in America. Geometrical rectangles, in unpolished Travertine marble, most artistic setting for the artist's colorful theme, the execution of which is done in shades of tan, yellow, green and red, a

French Group Meets Oct. 3rd. At Slaton Home

The Alliance Francaise will have its first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. John M. Slaton on Peachtree road Thursday afternoon, October 3, at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Slaton will preside in the absence of Charles Lordinas, who is in France.

The program committee has planned a year's study of the modern tendency and influence of French art as expressed in literature, music and painting. Mrs. George McKee, in charge of the program, will lecture upon modern French music, having her lecture illustrated by some of Atlanta's best known musicians.

The present officers of the Alliance Francaise are Charles Lordinas, president; Mrs. John M. Slaton, vice president; Mrs. Harry Atkinson, vice president; Mrs. Hal Davidson, treasurer; Mrs. W. A. Edwards, secretary. Announcement of a detailed program of the meeting will be made at a later date.

Congential Parties Assemble At Driving Club

Assembling congenial parties of Atlantans and their guests the weekly dinner-dance was held last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Case entertained, and Mrs. Cam Dwyer, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Alston, Mr. and Mrs. Strother Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Case.

Miss Barbara Case entertained a party honoring Miss Mary Ann Carr, who recently returned from a European journey. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme entertained last evening, honoring Miss Mary Mosley and John Barnett, whose marriage will be a forthcoming event of interest. Covers were laid for Miss Mosley, Mr. Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. William Sibley, Mr. and Mrs. Robin Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. William Huger, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Healey, Esmond Brady, Price Gilbert and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme.

rich blue predominating as a background for the motifs. There is a rectangle at either end of the ceiling, centered with a yellow shield diagonally striped in red, and encircled by a garland of green oak leaves in which nestle at intervals of brown acorns. A yellow medallion centers the diamond figure, and is garlanded with green, tied with narrow red ribbons, while the beams separating these geometrical figures are painted in blue and decorated with a yellow design. A wide blue band borders the ceiling, extending the length and breadth of the lobby and is ornamented with yellow fleur-de-lis. Hand-etched bronze doors tone with the handsome fixtures. A wide band of bronze inlay outlines two marble medallions in the floor, bearing the inscription: Rhodes-Haverty Building placed on either side of the center medallion, in which is carved "MCMXVIII," the year in which this modern building was begun.

A GROUP of women working toward the development of musical talent in a gifted and ambitious student, headed by Mesdames James R. Little and Charles E. Boynton, relate a wonderful experience wherein they are being thanked for asking for donations to this fund. An arduous undertaking it made a great pleasure when the gift is made with a smile and a "thank you for asking me."

Certainly the Lord loveth those so cheerfully aiding a talented young girl to complete her musical education, so that she may pass on to others the pleasure and charm of her art, making the world a happier place in which to live. The benefit bridge to be given on the Ansley roof garden at 2 o'clock next Tuesday will serve to raise additional funds to be applied to so worth a purpose for which reservations may be made over Hemlock 6031 or Hemlock 5237.

IN A QUIANT COSTUME which reflected the atmosphere of the early sixties, Miss Doris Macklin was a charming

Trace Their Lineage Back to Ancient House of Murray in Scotland

The photograph illustrating today's "As Four Women Hear It," presents two Atlantans, Miss Gertrude Murray and her brother, Rowland William Murray, Jr., daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland William Murray, who reside on Flagler avenue in Ansley Park. They are descendants of the ancient house of Murray in England, their father being the heir presumptive to the baronetcy of his brother, Sir Robert Edward Murray, thirteenth baronet of Duner. Miss Murray is a junior at Oglethorpe University, and Mr. Murray, attending Marist college, is interested in military tactics and football, and desires to be a lawyer. He is in direct line for the fifteenth baronet. Photograph of Mr. Murray by Elliott studio.

Y. W. C. A. Activities Include Meetings of Various Clubs

Thursday evening, September 26, at 7:30 o'clock the semi-annual membership meeting of Y. W. C. A. will be held at the administration building, 37 Auburn avenue, and Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, president of the association, will preside. Reports of summer conferences will be given by Misses Daisy Hoover, Girl Reserve secretary; Constance Rumbough, industrial secretary; and Mildred Wells, business girls secretary. Mrs. Hal Hantz will give a report of the summer season at Camp Highland and the Girl Reserves will present a camp skit. Mrs. Frank Fair is in charge of refreshments.

The girls of the industrial department spent the week-end at Camp Highland to hold a setting-up conference, the feature of the program being a talk by Dr. Armand Wyle, on Saturday evening. The Friendship Club meets Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Exposition Cotton mill, and J. W. Stanley, who has spent a number of years in India, will talk and a tap dancing class will be organized. Friday evening, September 27, the Rainbow Club will have its annual banquet, following the election of officers for the year, and new members will be initiated. The Blue Triangle Girl Reserve Club, sent to the club by the Family Welfare Society, The Russell High School Reserve Club is under

SNAPSHOTS of Atlantans collected at random: Dr. Julian Riley joining his fiancée, Mrs. Katherine Murphy, and his sister-to-be, Mrs. Julia Murphy Whitehead, at the Capital City Club for luncheon, following a shopping expedition of the two leadership of Misses Marquerite Dubois, Lois Parr and Jennie Anderson. Miss Margaret Eakes will continue her work with the Deatur High Club. The Amicus Club meets Thursday afternoon, September 26, at 3 o'clock. Miss Louise McCoy, graduate of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, is assisting with the Girl Reserve Club this year. Their meetings will begin next week. The club at the Exposition Cotton mill held its first meeting and election of officers last Tuesday afternoon with the following elected: Misses Katherine Elam, president; Mary Westmoreland, treasurer; Katherine Dillard, secretary, and next Friday afternoon the members will have a hike to which girls interested in becoming members are invited.

The Business Girls' League of the Y. W. C. A. holds its annual setting-up conference at Camp Highland, September 28 and 29, the theme of the conference being "Skyscrapers," and the program deals with the structure of the club, the construction of the year's program and the building of character. The S. L. S. P., Old Glory and Clover Clubs will meet Thursday night instead of Tuesday. The league meets Thursday night, and the Blue Ridge delegates will present reports of the summer conference to the club in the form of a short skit. These delegates are Misses Dorothy Davenport, Willie Bagwell, Kate Cooley and Mildred Well.

Miss Nannie Burwell Crow, director, and Miss Mabel Johnson, assistant director of the health education department of the Y. W. C. A., will direct swimming and gymnasium, tennis, dancing and basketball, the schedule of which appears on the bulletin board in the Y. W. C. A. building.

Miss Eugenia Bridges being besieged by a group of close friends to forego her departure for Hollins college this fall and become a member of the 1925-26 Debutantes' Club. Mrs. Brian Merry, of Augusta, formerly Miss Sarah Smith, being bombarded with invitations for social engagements on her first visit to her former home since her marriage last June. That's all today. More next Sunday.

Harry Carr To Be Heard In Vocal Recital

Centering the interest of musical circles in Atlanta will be the recital to be given by Harry Carr, well-known tenor, at Ampico hall, next Thursday evening, September 28, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Carr will be accompanied by Miss Elmira G. Wood, pianist.

Mr. Carr's musical education began in New York city, where he studied with Herbert Wilbur Green, Sgr. del Pappo of the opera in New York, and with Dr. John Griggs, of New York and Yale university. In Europe he studied with the greatest teachers of their time, such as Sgr. Vannini, of Florence, Italy; German Lieder with Teichmüller at the Leipzig conservatory; in Paris, France, with Mmes. Doret, Maître de Chant at the Grand Opera in Paris; with Sgr. Delle Sedie, and Sgr. Giovanni Sbriglia, who was the teacher of both Jean and Edward de Reszki, Pol Plancon, Lillian Nordica, Louise Homer, Clarence Whitehill, Ricardo Martin, and Henry Weldon, of the Grand Opera in Brussels. Mr. Carr is a pupil of Alessandro Bonci, of the Italian School of Bel Canto Singing. Upon returning to the United States from Europe, Mr. Carr taught a private class and was vocal coach with the Duquesne Opera Company, in Pittsburgh, Pa. He then accepted the chair of voice in the University of Nebraska. From there to the College of Music of Cincinnati, where he was a member of the vocal faculty and taught voice production and the art of singing for three years, leaving there to open his own school in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Carr is now located in Atlanta, his studios being in the McKenzie building.

Weds W. W. Larsen, Jr. W. K. Stringer.

Dublin, Ga., September 19.—Mrs. J. H. Beacham announces the marriage of her daughter, Frances, to W. W. Larsen, Jr., of Dublin, the wedding being quietly solemnized August 28, but only recently made known to the family and friends. The bride is an unusually charming and vivacious young woman. She is a member of one of Dublin's oldest families and well known throughout the state. She attended St. Mary's college at Raleigh, N. C. The groom, a well-known young attorney, is the son of Representative Larsen, of the twelfth Georgia district. He is a member of the law firm of Larsen, Crockett and Larsen, is a graduate of the University of Georgia and a popular member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Larsen have returned from a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., and other points in Florida, and are now at home in Dublin.

First Regional League Conference Called In Birmingham by Mrs. R. L. Turman

Representatives of the League of Women Voters in nine southern states meet in Birmingham October 28-30 for a regional conference on league problems and policies, being the first regional conference called by the national director, Mrs. R. L. Turman, of Atlanta, Ga., and preliminary arrangements indicate a program of unusual interest to those active in league ranks. Leaders in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, District of Columbia will attend the conference, which is for league members only. One public meeting with "The Industrial South" as its theme is the only evening meeting. Three speakers will discuss the subject from the angles of women in industry, child labor and living costs, three of the most important topics on the league's program. One of the vice presidents of the national league, Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, of Girard, Ohio, who in addition to her vice presidency holds the chairmanship of the department of efficiency in government, is the principal speaker of the first day's session. She will participate in a demonstration of an opening session of a voters' school, used widely in league meetings in instruction of the elementary principles of politics and government. There will be demonstrations also of a study group, round table, and a legislative interview—three types of educational methods utilized by the league in its year-round work.

Miss Duncan Weds W. K. Stringer.

The marriage of Miss Luna Mae Duncan, daughter of Mrs. L. M. Jones, to William Kenneth Stringer, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Stringer, was quietly solemnized at the Capitol Avenue Baptist church by Rev. W. H. major Tuesday, September 17, at high noon. The wedding took place in the presence of the immediate family. Immediately following the wedding the bride and groom left for a motor trip to the mountains. After October 1 the bride and groom will be at home at 347 North avenue.

Boulevard Circle Meets Wednesday.

The Boulevard Park Women's Club sewing committee meets at the home for Friends Wednesday, September 23, Mrs. H. A. Agricola, chairman.

R., of which Mrs. George Berry is chairman, will sponsor a large benefit bridge to be held at the new home of Mrs. Earl Yancey, 1741 Ponce de Leon avenue, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Yancey is a member of the garden committee of the chapter, and many tables have been engaged and a number of prizes have been donated. Players are requested to carry cards and pencils. Tables are $2, and single tickets 50 cents.

Miss Haverty Will Entertain Studio Club at Villa Clare

Miss May Haverty will entertain the Studio Club at a tea at her home, Villa Clare, 2020 Peachtree road, Wednesday afternoon, September 25, at 5 o'clock. Miss Haverty and her father, J. J. Haverty, are well-known patrons of art, are honorary members of the Studio Club, and always take a keen interest in the work the club is doing.

Miss Haverty will display their rare collection of pictures, this collection containing a group of old masters, including a Gainsborough and a Romney, and varied and carefully selected canvases of modern painters, the result of many years' search.

"Outward Bound," by Sutton Vane, a play in three acts, is to be presented in rehearsal, under the directorship of Janet Mills Shepherd, October 25 and 26.

Miss Sarah Foote To Wed Dr. J. H. Joiner At Ceremony Scheduled for October 16

Miss Sarah Foote, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. Foote, whose engagement is announced today to Dr. John Hartwell Joiner. The announcement is of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends of this popular belle and her fiancé, the ceremony to take place October 16, the plans to be announced later. Photograph by Bascom Biggers.

The announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ogilby Foote, of the engagement of their daughter, Sarah, to Dr. John Hartwell Joiner, is of wide social interest, especially in Georgia, where members of the families of the future bride and groom are numbered among the leading citizens of this state.

The bride-elect is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foote, her sisters being Mrs. Henry Troutman and Mrs. Jonathan Woody, two of Atlanta's most prominent young matrons. W. O. Foote, Jr., is the bride-elect's only brother. Her father is president of the Foote & Davies Company and is prominently identified with Atlanta's civic and business realms. He is a past president of the Chamber of Commerce, Retail Merchants Association, and a member of the President's Club and other civic organizations. Both Mr. and Mrs. Foote are well-known in the city's social and cultural circles and numbered among the city's most influential citizens. Before her marriage Mrs. Foote was Miss Laura Mell, of Marietta, the Mell family being pioneers in the educational life of Georgia and South Carolina. The late Patrick Hughes, great-uncle of the bride-elect, is also related to the aristocratic Bartholomew family on her maternal side, her maternal grandmother being a Miss Bartholomew, of Savannah.

The late Rev. William R. Foote, who came to Georgia from Connecticut in 1837, was the bride-elect's paternal grandfather and was numbered among the outstanding pioneers in the religious and educational development of this state. Her paternal grandmother was before her marriage Miss Amanda Jones, of White Plains, Ga., and was a representative of distinguished southern families.

The attractive young bride-elect was graduated from the Girls' High school and later attended Sweet Briar college in Virginia. She is a member of the O. B. X. Club and Pirates Club. Although she has never made her formal debut, the charming bride-elect has been a fete belle in a number of leading southern cities where she has visited.

Dr. Hartwell is the son of W. C. Joiner and the late Mrs. Amanda Womack Joiner, of Tonnelle, Ga. He received both A. B. and M. D. degrees. He is a member of the Alpha Kappa Kappa Fraternity and the Cadeaux honorary medical society. The groom-elect served his internship at Wesley Memorial hospital, Central of Georgia hospital in Savannah and the Steiner clinic. He is now associated with Dr. J. R. Barfield in this city.

The marriage of Miss Foote and Dr. Joiner will be solemnized Wednesday, October 16, the plans to be announced later.

An executive board meeting will be held at 2:30 o'clock with Mrs. C. M. Settle, first vice president, presiding. After the business session of the club Wednesday afternoon Mrs. J. Christopher Brown, music chairman, who has just returned after being away all summer, will have charge of a musical program.

Wednesday, September 25, at 8 o'clock, the West End Woman's Club will be hostess to the members of the South Fulton Federation of Clubs at the clubhouse. All members of the various organizations which form the federation are invited.

Fulton Chapter U. D. C. To Hold Special Exercises September 28

Fulton Chapter U. D. C., will hold special exercises commemorating the birthday of Admiral Semmes, of the Confederate navy, Saturday, September 28, at the Confederate Soldiers Home at 2:30 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the Disabled American Veterans Drum and Bagle Corps, and an address will be delivered by Mrs. Bryan Wells Collier, talented author and historian, who is a member of the Fulton chapter. Dr. W. H. Faust, a prominent minister and a friend of the inmates of the Soldiers Home, will deliver the invocation.

Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, president, will preside, and Mrs. H. G. Andrews, chairman of Soldiers Home committee from Fulton chapters with members of her committee, will receive the guests. Mrs. E. B. Williams, custodian of crosses, will present three crosses of honor to the following Confederate veterans: G. W. Brown, A. T. Collum and John J. Tolbert, also 25 crosses of military service to the following World War soldiers who are lineal descendants of Confederate soldiers: Samuel T. Astin, father of Ralph Astin, deceased; Sam G. Hook, father of Benjamin K. Hook, deceased; Henry G. Bentley, James M. Bentley, Alfred T. Blalock, Hubert E. Brown, Reuel S. Freeman, Theodore Goulsby, William O. Hardage, Albinus Harris, John D. Harris, Ernest Kent, Charles O. Lambert, Henry Frank Lester, William Wylie Lindsay, Frank Hill Martin, A. Nathan Mercer, Charles E. Shaw, Fred R. Stokes, Wilkes T. Thrasher, Cliff Henry Webb, Frank Harold Webb and George G. Whitehurst. This will be the last presentation of crosses this year, and Mrs. Williams invites all Confederate veterans, U. D. C.'s, members of Service Star Legion and ex-service men, especially the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, to be present at the exercises.

THE SOUTHERN ROUTE TO PARIS—THE MUSE FIFTH FLOOR

WITH FASHION SO VERSATILE HOW MAY ONE KNOW WHAT TO CHOOSE?

The word of Paris marks many new turns "excellent." This season woman has greater latitude than before.

It is a season of many things... of lace and golds and femininity... yet simplicity is high on the throne.

And from this shower of authenticity one is to find herself (fashionably.)

Here is how it is done:

Upon Muse's fifth floor you observe the entire mode... the word of Paris from morning to the ermine... every whisper of fashion...

Before you stands the entire mode—according to Paris...

Now... select according to you!

Remembering that Paris does not govern you, so much as YOU govern Paris... if you get the thought.

Individuality must prevail!

With the all of Fashion at your call you discover the colors, the lines, the effects that are individually you!... and in that Muse's assists you, professionally.

This selection is an art... as great as the art of the gowns... and is why you hear that a Muse gown is something more than—a gown!

It is—RIGHT FOR YOU!

The junior department of the Civic Club of West End will sponsor the weekly bridge-tea Friday, September 27. Mrs. B. L. Elrod, chairman, will be assisted by her committee of counselors and a group of young ladies composed of Misses Annette Dwight, Catherine Howard, Elizabeth Savage and Heath Merrill. Weather permitting, tables for the juniors will be placed on the terrace, and the members of that group will play a progressive game. Reservations may be made through Miss Catherine Howard, Main 2330-J, or Miss Heath Merrill, West 2804.

The following juniors have reserved tables: Misses Laura Hicks, Ethel Haynie, Lillian Philip, Hattie Chiles, Lillian McEachern, May Belle Howard, Lucy Philip, Sarah Suttles, Mary Matthews, Queenie Matthews, Augusta Smith, Josephine Rhodes, Elizabeth Sims, Betty Laird, Amy Witherpoon and Serena Marshall. Tables will be arranged, as usual, throughout the clubrooms for the convenience of the senior group. Table and draw prizes will be given and refreshments served. Reservations should be made promptly through Mrs. B. L. Elrod, West 2800-J, or Mrs. P. D. Johnson, West 1150.

The Civic Club Cooking school will open Monday, September 23, under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Smith, chairman of home economics, and Mrs. Carl Raper. Tickets for the course of five lessons may be secured from either for $1. Practical menus will be prepared and served each day. Prizes will also be given. Mrs. A. P. Boardman, instructor, has announced that on Wednesday, September 25, she will serve a salad plate to the members of the board, after which that body will retire to a short executive session.

Miss Parks Is Honored.

Honoring Miss Mary Ellen Parks, whose marriage to John Fleming Kellam will be an event of interest, Mrs. T. Edward Clyatt entertained at a bridal shower yesterday afternoon at her home in West End. Lavender and white flowers decorated the rooms and a miniature well, out of which the bride drew the good wishes of the guests, was featured. Mrs. Clyatt was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. R. H. Conway, and her mother, Mrs. E. H. Gibson. The guests included Mesdames J. C. Lewis, J. F. ## Miss Jane Slaughter Weds G. F. Sharp at Quiet Ceremony

Mrs. George Forbes Sharp, formerly Miss Jane Allen Slaughter, whose marriage was quietly solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Quinn Slaughter in Ansley Park. Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree studio.

Mr. and Mrs. William Quinn Slaughter announce the marriage of their daughter, Jane Allen, to George Forbes Sharp, the ceremony being quietly solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Ansley Park. Rev. Dr. W. L. Duren, pastor of St. Mark's Methodist church, performed the marriage service before only the members of the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Sharp left immediately after the ceremony on a motor trip to North Carolina and upon their return will make their home in Orlando, Fla.

CANINE HISTORY ARTICLE IS RELATED

is saying "Hello, Alfred" to Alfred C. Newell, Ellen's father. That almost sounds like an item for Mr. Ripley's "Believe It or Not," but it's true, nevertheless.

At the present time there seems to be more genuine canine enthusiasm and interest afloat than ever before. In place of "Have you a dog?" the question is being asked, "What kind of a dog have you?" In all times and climes the dog has been man's best friend. He has been immortalized time and again on the canvases of great artists and by the pens of famous authors and writers. One of the most beautiful of Lord Byron's poems he wrote to perpetuate the noble character of his dog. Part of it is quoted here:

"When some proud son of man returns to earth, Unknown to glory but upheld by birth, The sculptors art exhausts the pomp of war, And storied urns record who rests below; When all is done, upon the tomb is seen, Not what he was but what he should have been."

But the poor dog, in life the firmest friend, The first to welcome, foremost to defend, Whose honest heart is still his master's own, Who labors, fights, lives, breathes, for him alone, Unhonored falls, unnoticed all his worth, Denied in Heaven, the soul he held on earth."

Snapshots Collected.

Snapshots of Atlanta dogs collected at random: Mrs. Wimberly Peters little Boston terrier being told by Bobby Jones that he wished his children would mind him as well as he obeys his mistress. Mrs. Julia Murphy Whitehead's Pekingese "Peakey" dancing atop the table for a piece of candy without losing his balance. "Mitt," the prize-winning Pomeranian belonging to Mrs. Harry L. English, reposing on the chair in her living room upholstered in the handsomest of silk brocade. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. McBurney's Manchester terrier "Tim" appointing himself as official greeter and guide to friends touring the McBurney gardens on Peachtree road. Mrs. Charles Howard Candler, Jr.'s wire-haired terrier, "Patsy," diving in the picturesque pool situated on the Howard Candler, Sr.'s home on Briarcliff road. "Sandy" the 16-year-old fox terrier of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Raine, Sr., nodding and going fast asleep while standing erect. Miss Anna Harriett Shewmake's pet dog "Drew" gazing with intense admiration at his mistress while she scolds him for running away. Mrs. Ernest McCullough taking her little wire-haired terrier for a walk out Peachtree road. Miss Virginia Torrance's Pekingese surprising everybody by growing into a beautiful black and tan terrier. Mrs. A. L. Fowler's smart Boston terrier, "Colonel" by name, catching a long rope between his teeth, and tantalizing the Persian cat, "Smoky," into chasing frantically around the house trying to catch the rope.

Miss Calhoun

Honors Miss Carr.

Miss Marion Calhoun entertained yesterday at a luncheon at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club, honoring Miss Mary Ann Carr, who leaves soon for Washington, D. C., where she will enter the National Cathedral school. The guests included a few close friends.

Mrs. Rambo Honors Mrs. S. F. Boykin.

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo entertains at luncheon Tuesday, September 24, in compliment to Mrs. S. F. Boykin, at Druid Hills Golf Club. Covers will be laid for 20 guests, officers of Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Boykin is president.

Miss Cornelia Stribling Weds Joseph Scott.

Chicago, Ill., September 21.—The marriage of Miss Cornelia Stribling, daughter of Mrs. W. A. Stribling and the late William Austell Stribling, to Joseph Crane Scott, took place August 17 at Chicago, Ill. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Norris L. Tibbitts, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, of Chicago.

The bride, a lovely southern belle, is formerly of Atlanta, where she was a popular member of the younger set. She attended school at Washington seminary, and is a graduate of that institution. She was also a student at Hollins college, Hollins, Va., and for the past year has made her home in Chicago.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Scott, of Charlotte, N. C. After completing his education at Poughkeepsie, New York, he became associated with the firm of George G. Scott & Co., Charlotte, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Scott motored to New York on their honeymoon and will be at home after October 1, at the Park Lane apartments, Washington, D. C.

W.C.T.U. Activities in Columbus Featured Today by State Editor

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

The three organizations of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Columbus held an unusually interesting meeting during the week. Sunday morning at the Rose Hill Methodist church, Mrs. R. W. Page, state director of the sailors' and soldiers' department, was in charge of a memorial service for soldiers who paid the supreme price. The flowers dedicated to the Unknown Soldier were later sent to the hospital at Fort Benning. The basket donated by the American Legion in memory of Charles S. Harrison was presented to his sisters, and another dedicated to a gold star soldier, George J. Brown, was later placed on his grave. A musical program added to the occasion. The large assemblage included the members of the families of the World War sailors and soldiers. Those assisting Mrs. Page were B. P. Register, Mrs. J. L. Stephenson, Mrs. Holcombe Harper, Mrs. Ralph Zeigler, Miss Eloise Bowden, Mrs. Frank David and Mrs. D. A. Striffler.

Rose Hill Activities. Mrs. W. C. Pense, Sr., was elected president of the Columbus Rose Hill W. C. T. U. Thursday; Mrs. F. B. Boyce, vice president; Mrs. T. H. Thurmond, recording secretary; Mrs. J. A. Henton, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Walter Thurmond, treasurer. The meeting began with a devotional led by Mrs. R. A. Terrell. Splendid reports were made by Mrs. Boyce, Muscogee W. C. T. U. president; Miss Eloise Bowden, Loyal Temperance Legion leader; Mrs. M. J. Blackmon, county treasurer; Mrs. J. B. Huff, from Theresa Griffin union; Mrs. George Sherman told of the work planned for the W. C. T. U. booth at the fair in October. Other reports of work accomplished were made by Mrs. Holcombe Harper and Miss Jessie Duncan. A part of the meeting was given over to the county union, and part to the Rose Hill union. The annual reports were most creditable.

Young Women's Branch. Friday afternoon Mrs. Holcombe Harper opened her home for the annual meeting of the Columbus Young Women's branch of the W. C. T. U. which began with a period of devotion conducted by Miss Helen Hawkins. Splendid reports of the year's work were made by the following departmental directors: Mrs. J. A. Wells, anti-narcotic and scientific temperance instruction; Mrs. E. O. Smith, health; Miss Gladys Parks, temperance and missions; Miss Mortimer Garrett, motion pictures; Miss Eloise Bowden, flower mission; Miss Helen Hawkins, evangelistic; Mrs. Frank David, soldiers and sailors; Mrs. W. E. Massey, racial groups;

Mrs. B. B. Harper, child welfare. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. H. B. Harper; first vice president, Miss Helen Hawkins; second vice president, Mrs. Frank David; recording secretary, Miss Eloise Bowden; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Johnson; and treasurer, Mrs. W. N. Austin. Plans for the state convention in Atlanta were announced by Mrs. Columbus Roberts.

Fifth District Meeting.

Rev. Louis Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, was the speaker at the fifth district W. C. T. U. meeting at the Druid Hills Methodist church Wednesday. It was a stirring law enforcement talk and stirred the women to greater determination to go forward with the W. C. T. U. work. Dr. Russell led the devotionals. The welcome was voiced by Mrs. A. J. Maxwell to which Mrs. F. A. Smith responded. Annual reports showing progress were made by representatives of the Druid Hills W. C. T. U., the Grant Park, Kiewit, McLenon, Patterson, Peachtree roads, Piedmont unions, of Atlanta, and the College Park, West End, Decatur, Emory University, and East Point unions. The president, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, presided. She appointed a number of state convention committees for the fifth district W. C. T. U. will be hosted to the state convention October 22-24 at the Baptist tabernacle. Officers elected for the new W. C. T. U. were Mrs. O. L. Taylor, president; Mrs. F. A. Smith, vice president; Mrs. A. H. Parnell, treasurer; recording secretary, Mrs. J. T. Winder, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Campbell Luncheon was served at midday by the hostess union. The next meeting will be with the West End union.

Sixth District Rally.

The sixth district W. C. T. U. meeting at the Griffin Baptist church Friday was characterized by optimism, enthusiasm and most creditable accomplishments. Inspirational talks were made by state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Barnesville; state corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, of Atlanta; state secretary of the children's work, Mrs. Robert H. McDougall, Atlanta; and state editor of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, Mrs. August Burghard, Macon. Mrs. J. H. Cheatum made the welcome address to which Mrs. Harry Hudson, of Macon, responded. Mrs. J. L. Lyons, of Jackson, and Mrs. G. B. Ridley, of Zebulon, gave the devotionals. Reports of achievements were made by the presidents of the unions from Macon; Macon, Anna Gordon, Forsyth, Jackson, Zebulon, Griffin. A fine Loyal Temperance Legion report was made by Mrs. A. W. Voight, of Macon. Mrs. J. Rogers sang, accompanied by Mrs. Richard Deane; Mrs. Frank Ellis, who also sang, was accompanied by Mrs. Alene Cummings. An organ solo was rendered by Miss Thelma Brisendine. Mrs. Wilbur Brown, of Griffin, presided. It was announced that she would accompany Mrs. Marvin Williams to the national W. C. T. U. convention in Indianapolis this week. Those elected are Mrs. Wilbur Brown, Griffin, president; Mrs. A. W. Voight, Macon, vice president; Mrs. Elsie Rastello, Barnesville, secretary; Mrs. W. Y. Andrews, Forsyth, treasurer.

Miss Scott Weds Lieut. J. J. Pierrepont.

Boston, Mass., September 21.—The wedding of Miss Mary Adelaide Scott and Lieutenant John Jay Pierrepont, U. S. N., yesterday afternoon in St. John's chapel in Cambridge, Mass. The bride is the daughter of Charles Herrington Scott, of Montgomery, Ala., and the late Josephine Bennett Scott. Lieutenant Pierrepont's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Low Pierrepont, of 580 Park avenue, New York. They are giving a breakfast in honor of the bride at noon at the Copple-Flata.

Mr. Scott gave his daughter in marriage and she was attended by her sister, Mrs. James Remstead Mitchell, at whose home at 215 Beale street, Cambridge, the reception was held. The bride's gown was of ivory panne velvet, and she wore a lace veil, which has been in the bridegroom's family for generations, and white orchids and lilies of the valley formed her bouquet. Mrs. Mitchell wore a gown and hat of tiger lily panne velvet and carried a bouquet of tulle, roses and larkspur, tied with larkspur ribbon.

The officiating clergymen were Right Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, bishop of Connecticut, and Rev. Sherard Billings, D.D., of Groton school. Eastern lilies were on the altar, and the chancel was decorated with cedars, byzantine vases of dahlias and wrought iron candelabra holding candles. The house was decorated for the reception with autumn flowers.

Lieutenant Pierrepont's best man was Lieutenant Alfred Richards Taylor, of Wakefield, R. I., whose engagement to Miss Dorothy Quincy Doggett, of Boston, was announced recently. Three cousins of the bridegroom were ushers, including Evelyn Pierrepont Luquer, of New York and Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Kenneth Ward, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Peter Woodbury, of Manchester, N. H. Thomas Jefferson Scott, 4th, of Cambridge, brother of the bride, was also an usher, as was James Armistead Mitchell, of Cambridge, brother-in-law of the bride, and Philip Stanley Parker, of Brooklyn.

The bridegroom is attached to the U. S. S. Concord, a radio officer, and will take up his duties after the middle of October, with Philadelphia as his home port. He was graduated from the United States Naval academy in 1922 and is a member of the Army and Navy Club of Washington, D. C., and the Sherwood Forest Golf Club. His bride is a graduate of the Horace Mann school, of New York city, and the Packer Collegiate institute, of Brooklyn.

Miss Velma Peek Weds Mr. Chism.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude N. Sanders announce the marriage of their friend, Miss Velma Peek, to T. Harold Chism, of Marrowbone, Ky., which was solemnized at Auburn, Ala., yesterday afternoon. The double ring ceremony was impressively performed in the presence of Miss Elsie Peek, Ovie Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Thompson, little Billy Thompson and Misses Agnes and Sara Ingram. Mr. and Mrs. Chism are residing at 1022 Columbia avenue, N. W.

Historical Data Is Collected.

Mrs. John Lee Davidson, of Quitman, Ga., who compiled Vol. 2, Georgia Historical Collections, which is just from the press, is now collecting material for the third volume. During the summer, Mrs. Davidson abstracted records in Jones, Clarke and Oglethorpe counties and is at present working on those in Elbert county, which are said to be practically complete from the formation of the county. From Elberton, Mrs. Davidson will go to Wilkes county.

This wealth of data in the hands of an historian of Mrs. Davidson's ability will beyond a doubt make volume three another most valuable contribution to the publications of the Georgia D. A. R. Vol. 2 of the Historical Collections was placed September 1 by the Georgia D. A. R. Mrs. W. F. Dykes, 570 Ridge Crest road, N. E., Atlanta, Ga., who is chairman of the Lucy Cook Peel memorial, is in charge of the sale of this book.

Fireside Comforts Suddenly to the Front when Equinox Takes a Hand

Hugh Walpole's favorite manner of getting attention in his first paragraph is to invite you in out of the rain—or a cold blow—tempt you to share a fireside, a deep chair inviting comfort and a glowing lamp or two... with such a stage setting his reader is ready for anything. Let us make you equally ready for what comes in the first paragraph of winter—September warning—when the elements show a tendency to cavort. To enjoy the romance of your own fireside: First—make one—even if it is only a radiator. Surround it with comfortable chairs, a cushiony davenport, a warm rug, cheering lamps—and, of course, a radio—and your stage is set for a hundred and fifty enviable evenings—before the mercury goes down for the third time.

"Better Dancing" Miss Mary Pope Reese To Be Featured To Wed Campbell Ort Jenkins By Woman's Division

Women's division of the Chamber of Commerce features the opening class of instruction in "Better Dancing" Tuesday evening, September 24, these classes being foremost projects of the woman's division and once each year contests are held among members of the class and prizes awarded. A letter from Miss Mabel Haas, the originator of National Better Dance Week, said that the best record of any city participating in Better Dance Week was made by Atlanta. The prime object of the woman's division is to work for better civic development, and this organization feels that better dancing has had and will continue to have an influence in improving conditions. Jazz is not permitted and correct position is taught from the beginning.

These classes are under the direction of Mrs. Lillian A. Dove, and the newest dances will be taught, among them being Claire De Lune, American waltz, London waltz, the So So Tang, the Tango Riviera, the Rudy Valley, and the Kit Kat fox trot. The class for beginners opens at 7 o'clock and the one for advanced pupils at 8 o'clock and these classes are held in Hall No. 1 of the Chamber of Commerce each Tuesday evening. Misses Susie Wailes and Margaret Waite form the committee in charge of this project, and with Mrs. Dove are making plans for the fall and winter and large classes are registering for both beginners and advanced work.

Miss Mary Pope Reese, daughter of Mrs. Mamie F. Reese, whose engagement is announced today to Campbell Ort Jenkins, the marriage to be solemnized in November at the Druid Hills Baptist church. Photograph by Thurston Hatcher.

Cordial interest centers in the announcement made today by Mrs. Mamie F. Reese, of the engagement of her daughter, Mary Pope, to Campbell Ort Jenkins to take place in November at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

Miss Reese is the younger daughter of Mrs. Mamie F. Reese and the late Joel Amann Reese, who was well known in business circles in the city, being president of the Reese Paint Company. She received her education at the Girls' High school and at Brenau college, where she was a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Her sister is Mrs. Orval Everett Williams. Mrs. Reese was before her marriage Miss Mamie Frances Pope, of Carrollton, daughter of the late Joseph Newton Pope, prominent pioneer merchant of Carroll county, and the late Melissa Catherine Kinney. On her paternal side, Miss Reese is the granddaughter of the late Jordan Reese, of Carroll county, and the late Catherine Williams.

Mr. Jenkins is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Williams Campbell Jenkins.

He was educated at the Tech High school, later attending Oglethorpe and Emory universities, where he was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. Mr. Jenkins is now connected with Sears, Roebuck & Co. His sister is Mrs. John R. Kruse, of East Orange, N. J. Mrs. Jenkins was formerly Miss Hattie Mae Smith, of Louisville, Ky., daughter of the late John F. Smith and Mrs. Laura Smith. Her sister is Mrs. Capers Andrews, of Atlanta. On his paternal side, Mr. Jenkins is the grandson of the late Captain and Mrs. J. N. Jenkins, of Louisville.

She returns to New York the latter part of September where she will take up her profession of modeling for noted artists for illustrations appearing in magazine articles and advertisements, a field in which she has achieved remarkable success.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckover Toy, C. E. Handcock, Hugh T. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ruse, Mrs. Martin N. Walter and Corwin Lewis are at Signal Mountain hotel, at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Miss Nellie Boykin, of Charleston, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Rodgers, of Chicago; Mrs. C. E. Wilson, Miss S. F. Wilson and Miss H. Hill, of Peekskill, N. Y., are registered at the Biltmore.

Mrs. Sidney Morey is spending ten days in New Orleans, La.

Joe C. Shearer has returned to the city to attend the wedding of his sister, Miss Hazel Margaret Sreaner, and William Midkiff, after having been away all summer.

Miss Crawford Weds Mr. Jones.

A wedding marked by beauty and simplicity was that of Miss Nannie Lou Crawford and Chalmers Jones, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ernest Newman, on Olympian way, last Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Dr. W. H. Faust, of Gordon Street Baptist church, before an improvised altar of palms and tall baskets of white gladioli. Cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers shed a soft glow over the scene, witnessed only by the relatives and a few close friends. Miss Mae Hill sang two selections, accompanied by Mrs. Hubert Blackwell. The bride's only attendant was Mrs. Kathryn Waugh, who was carried in a brown ensemble and carried a bouquet of Opheelia roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Ernest Newman. Her blond beauty was enhanced by her becoming ensemble of navy chiffon velvet with accessories to match. Her bouquet was of white roses showered with valley lilies. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Buell Jones.

Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held, after which Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for an extended wedding trip. On their return they will be at home on South Gordon street.

Georgia Music Clubs To Exhibit At the Fair

Georgia Federation of Music Clubs will have two booths, 15 by 16 feet each, with two aisle exposures, at the October Southeastern fair held in Atlanta. Federated clubs over the state are invited to send in displays of scrapbooks, posters, year books, programs and the like, in competition for the prize money offered by the fair association. Prizes will be awarded as follows: $10 for best display, $5 for second best, $5 for best scrapbook, $3 for second best, $5 for best poster from a senior club, $3 for second best poster from a junior club, $5 for best poster from a senior club, $3 for second best poster from a junior club and $5 for best poster from juvenile club.

Musical programs will be presented each day except Sunday, and most of the musical programs will be given by music and dramatic clubs of the fifth district. A local piano house will furnish two pianos, and the programs will consist of solos, ensemble work, orchestra music, aesthetic dancing and readings. Gate passes will be furnished those participating in the programs. Clubs should send their display materials to Mrs. J. M. Lennard, chairman, 525 Marshall street, Decatur, so as to reach her not later than Monday, September 30.

Miss Lena Beth Brown Heads Junior Club.

Twenty-four children, in addition to the membership of the Hapeville Woman's Club, were present yesterday afternoon for the organization of the Junior Music Club, under the direction of Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, as a division of the Woman's Club.

Mrs. J. M. Lennard, chairman of Junior Music Clubs for the fifth district, addressed the hosts and presided in the organization. The children elected officers as follows: President, Lena Beth Brown; second vice president, Ardelia Treadwell; third vice president, Sarah Carter; recording secretary, McArva Allen; corresponding secretary, Dorothy Cash; treasurer, Lamar Smith. Mrs. J. Raymond Cathey, president of the Hapeville Woman's Club, opened the meeting and presented Mrs. Treadwell, who introduced Mrs. Lennard. Mrs. J. G. Morris, Mrs. Ernest Schenck and Mrs. Hayden Stanley served punch.

Chamberlin's Believes: Atlanta People Have Good Taste!

And, believing this we create a new department to prove it! Back of every successful venture stands a sound theory. Our new Department of Home Ensembles is based on this simple theory:

We believe that Atlantans are so well versed in beauty lore that they appreciate in their environment, those things, which, through their kindred right, "belong"! We believe that this department, which coordinates home furnishings into perfectly harmonious units, strikes a responsive chord in all real Atlantans!

On what do we base our belief in the good taste of Atlantans?—Their smart appearance, their beautiful homes, well-kept gardens, their civic pride, their liberal patronage of all things cultural!

Chicago, Ill., September 21. (AP) — Shippers of produce and other goods protesting a mule rate increase by the Illinois Central Railroad Co. today displayed a complete line of these machines on the fourth floor of its building.

In addition to the display, the store will stage a demonstration, lasting the entire week, of the cold control device on the refrigerators, showing how the freezing of ices, salads, and usually difficult desserts may be secured up to 100 degrees below zero.

The company is the only department store to have such a display.

Atlanta Beauties and Their "Beasties"

Canine History Is Related In Interesting Article Below

By Runa Erwin.

It is apparent that there are innumerable individuals in Atlanta that are guilty of the charge of being "dog-minded." Everywhere, the conversation is considerably canine as everybody has one, two or three dogs, and if they do not actually possess a dog, body and soul, they are intimately acquainted with the pet of some friend or neighbor, that they are positive is the "smartest dog in the world." Everyone knows or owns a dog like that. (I have one myself). Miss Catherine Erwin is really one of the most ardent dog lovers in Atlanta. She has a regular kennel in her backyard, with runs, small pens, and a little house, where each dog has his private bed—in fact every modern convenience any dog's heart could desire. There is also a dining room which adjoins the dog's "boudoirs." It was formerly the chicken house, but has been renovated and made into an ideal dog banquet and bone hall. Each dog has his separate pan and at promptly 6 o'clock each evening dinner is doled out.

Imports Cairn Terriers.

Miss Erwin has always been particularly fond of Pomeranians and she has two exquisite red ones now. Last fall when she returned from England she brought with her two Cairn terriers, which are rarely seen in this country. Cairns came originally from Scotland, where they have been used for years to hunt foxes and badgers. Catherine owns an entire family of them now, having purchased another in Long Island recently. They are all blue ribbon dogs, having been winners at the Atlanta dog show last spring.

Everyone familiar with the Biltmore gardens or the Driving Club pool, has certainly seen Mrs. Stacy Ernest Hill's little Pekingese, Hilo, romping around. She has what one might call dog "it"—a winning personality, a genial bark, and a wag of her tail for every person she meets. Hilo originally belonged to Patton Mitchell, son of Mrs. Walter Gunby Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell bought her in Palm Beach, at the "Aristocrats of Dogdom," one of the most exclusive dog shops in the country. Hilo is directly descended from dogs which were owned by the nobility of China, and her great-great-grandfather lived in the Empress palace in Peking. Many years ago Pekingese dogs were worshipped by the Chinese as gods, and were only owned by the nobility. They were considered sacred and were tended with such care that their feet were not allowed to touch the ground, and special servants were ordained to care for them. The Chinese called them "little lions" because of their resemblance to lions and their proud and defiant nature.

Mrs. Martin's Dog.

A dog locally renowned for his intelligence is "Don," the handsome German police dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Martin. He is really a trick dog, and he made his theatrical debut with Robert Martin, Jr., at an Emory university performance last year. When he is told to play the piano he jumps on the piano seat, lays his paws on the keys, and howls until he is ordered to stop. He will put out a lighted match with his paw, and he makes a bow to ladies by bending his front legs to the ground. Don could earn his board as a delivery boy, as he brings the packages from the car into the house for Mrs. Martin when she returns from shopping. Don's prize stunt is something he did of his own accord. He stood one day in a playground watching the children playing on a "shoot-the-shoot" slide. After observing them for several minutes, Don slowly climbed the ladder, laid on his paws and feet and slip down. Now he will perform the trick at the slightest suggestion, in fact he used it as his grand finale at his stage debut at Emory.

Miss Marion Hull Smith is another enthusiastic dog lover. She owns a beautiful white Spitz, which she says has only one fault, he's too white. Miss Smith, who spends a great deal of her time in bathing him, suggests dogs of a darker hue for this season.

Only Ruby Spaniel.

Ruby Spaniels are a breed of dogs rarely seen in this country. They are a cross between the King Charles Spaniels, which are black and white, and the red and white Blenheim. Miss Gertrude Harris' "Tiddles," to my knowledge, is the only Ruby Spaniel in Atlanta. She purchased Tiddles in Lowell, Mass. "As she was too small to ride alone in the baggage car," said Gertrude, "I smuggled her home on the Pullman. I stayed awake the entire night to keep her from whining and rousing the conductor. Every time I would put out the light she would howl. I expected to be put off the train every minute from the time I left Boston until I arrived in Atlanta, 24 hours later, but somehow I got by the conductor—he either didn't hear her cry, or he liked puppies too well to put us off."

Mrs. Mildred Jeter has one of the largest dogs in town. He is a Great Dane and very much overgrown for his years. He weighs close to 200 pounds, stands over six feet when erect, and devours from three to four pounds of meat a day. His favorite pastime is catching small dogs and holding their heads in his huge mouth.

Mrs. Kelly Matthews had two Airedales, that she named "High-brow" and "Low-brow." Low-brows did not seem to fit in exactly in the exclusive Druid Hills neighborhood, where the Matthews live, so he has recently wandered away to seek associates of a lesser plane.

Miss Newell's Griffon.

Miss Ellen Newell has the distinction of owning the only Griffon in town. Ann Lane Newell Whitley, Ellen's sister, bought Namais in Paris and carried him all over Europe with her. He tries so hard to talk, and Ellen has taught him to say something that actually sounds like he

Southern Division Conference Features Patriotic Education

Mrs. Charles E. Herrick, national chairman of the committee on patriotic education, has called a conference of the southern division to be held at Pinehurst, N. C., in November. Mrs. F. H. H. Calhoun, of Clemson College, S. C., is national vice chairman of the southern division. The Georgia D. A. R. will be ably represented on this occasion by Mrs. Bus Wylie, of Atlanta, state chairman of patriotic education. The purpose of the committee on patriotic education is to develop in both young and old the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizenship.

The program of the D. A. R. for carrying on this work includes cooperation with public schools, day and night classes in citizenship, conscientious use of the ballot, distribution of patriotic literature, flag codes, flags, teaching love and reverence for the flag, scholarships in local and state schools, sponsoring oratorical contests and debates in schools, offering medals and prizes, distribution of patriotic literature, celebration of patriotic and historical anniversaries, proper budgeting of money in chapters to provide for educational work, one chapter meeting during the year to feature "patriotic education program," and other patriotic work for the extension of educational opportunities to our people.

R. school, Grant, Ala.; Lincoln Memorial university, Harrogate, Cumberland Gap, Tenn.; Maryville college, Maryville, Tenn.; Matthew T. Scott, Jr., academy, Phelps, Pipe county, Ky.; Montverde schools, Montverde, Lake county, Fla.; Pine Mountain Settlement, Pine Mountain, Harlan county, Ky.; Tamassee D. A. R. Industrial school, Tamassee, S. C.

Mrs. Wylie, state chairman of patriotic education, D. A. R., requests the chapter regents who have not already done so, to appoint a chapter chairman of patriotic education, and have all activities along this line reported to the state chairman.

Nancy Hart Chapter D. A. R. Historian Writes of Milledgeville

In view of the fact that the state D. A. R. executive board meets in Milledgeville in October, the following interesting sketch will prove very appropos and was written by Miss Leila Lamar, historian of Nancy Hart chapter D. A. R. She writes as follows:

"In 1803 the Georgia legislature decided to remove the capital to a more central part of the state. The commissioners appointed to act May 11, 1803; fixed the site and laid off the town. December 12, 1804, the general assembly appointed Howell Cobb, John Rutherford, Littleberry Boswick, Archibald Devereaux, George M. Troup, John Orbert, Oliver Porter, commissioners to sell lots in the town of Milledgeville, not exceeding 20, of one acre each. The town was named Milledgeville in honor of John Milledge, then governor of Georgia. The first frame house was built by General Scott in 1805, on the corner of Franklin and Elbert streets.

Erected in 1804. The capitol, now the main building of G. M. C., was erected in 1804, and the first legislature met there in 1807, and the last in 1868. The architect was Jett Thomas, who is buried in the Milledgeville cemetery. The secession convention was held here in 1861. The members made up the ablest body that ever convened in Georgia. Among the distinguished men present were Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederate States; his brother, Linton Stephens, judge of the supreme court; Robert Toombs, United States

State D. A. R. Board To Meet In Milledgeville

Milledgeville, one of Georgia's educational centers, where culture, patriotism and hospitality have extended through many generations, will, on October 9, be the gathering place for the members of the D. A. R. state executive board. The Nancy Hart chapter will be hostess and many social affairs will mark the occasion. A committee will meet all trains Wednesday morning, October 9, and also a committee will be at the Baldwin hotel to welcome the visitors.

The executive session will be held Wednesday morning, October 9, at 1 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Georgia Military college, which was the state capitol building. It was in this Gothic structure that the law makers of Georgia assembled from 1807 to 1888. At 1 o'clock the members of the board will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Beeson, for luncheon, at the old governor's mansion, now the home of the president of the Georgia State College for Women. This beautiful colonial mansion was built in 1808 and occupied successively by Governors George R. Gilmer, Charles J. McDonald, George M. Crawford, George W. Towns, Howell Cobb, H. V. Johnson, Joseph E. Brown and Charles J. Jenkins. Wednesday afternoon the visitors will go on a sight-seeing tour of historical places, after which they will be entertained at tea.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick's Card to Clubwomen
Is On Ella F. White Memorial Endowment

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, state chairman of Ella F. White Memorial endowment, addresses the following card to clubwomen of Georgia Federation, and says:

"The Ella F. White Memorial Endowment is a fund to help pay expenses of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs as the dues, only 50 cents, are not sufficient to cover all the great things we sponsor. The endowment was begun in 1913, when Mrs. F. White, then president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, died in Augusta, suddenly, where she had gone in the interest of the Georgia Executive Board of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. After her death, the meeting after her death, decided most solemnly and most appropriately to name a fund in her honor. Knowing the great needs of the federation, which she loved so devotedly, and how they would multiply as the years went by, the members of the monument take the form of an amount on hand at the Council in Gainesville, $8,968.65, towards the $25,000 fund."

The plan adopted in 1919 to raise this fund was: "Each club to pay $1.00 for the first year, $2.00 for the next years, or 75 cents afterwards. You will see list of clubs that have met this obligation in report referred to above. The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Z. I. Fitzpatrick, chairman; Mrs. John E. Talmadge, Jr., secretary; Mrs. J. M. Linton, treasurer, Mrs. H. H. Tift, Mrs. H. H. Perry."

"The importance of an income for big organizations like ours needs no more argument than does an income for individuals. We are all working, hoping every club member will realize this and delay no longer to meet it. Let us unite in erecting this beautiful monument we are trying to erect to the memory of one who actually gave her life for us, and at the same time, we are sure, will help us to help carry on the business of the feddownment. Mrs. Bolling Jones, a long valued member of the board, made a motion that the minimum amount of the endowment be $25,000, the interest only to be used for the promotion of the activities of the federation. See Constitution in the last year-book, and the club rules in the year-book of XVI. The same year-book shows last report of the trustees which gives

Tallulah Falls School, Inc., Is Placed In Group 1 by Georgia University Bulletin

The many friends of Tallulah Falls Industrial School, Inc., throughout the state will be interested in its ranking for the present year in Group 1 of the accredited high schools of the State of Georgia. This group, according to the Bulletin of the University of Georgia, recently issued, "represents the best schools in teaching staff, equipment of laboratory, library, and building." It lists 104 schools, four-fifths of the academic teachers holding degrees."

Tallahul Falls school has only been an accredited high school since 1927-28. It is the only high school in the school classes under this ranking, and it is a matter of proper congratulation that the school should be placed in this category.

Dr. Joseph F. Stewart, professor of secondary education, University of Georgia, and E. A. Pound, state superintendent, are the two persons who dated school, serving with all grades from the first through the eleventh. The school is holding Group 1 accredited standing.

Georgia clubwomen are being congratulated in educational circles for the forward steps taken in order to raise the school to the standing, which gives them their diploma of great credit as that of any high school in Georgia.

General Federation Art Div. Chairman Appoints Mrs. S. V. Brown From Georgia

Mrs. Howard Green, general federation chairman division of art, has appointed Mrs. S. V. Brown, of Baxley, Ga., chairman of pottery exhibit and Mrs. Green, of Georgia, to run the exhibit during October, November and December, thus saving the clubs in the state the expense of heavy expenses. Mrs. Green expressed the hope that Mrs. Brown will be one of the prize winners, as her work for last year was very efficient.

Mrs. W. R. Johnston, Sylvestre, Ala., federation secretary, arts department, says of the exhibit: "The division of the general federation owns an exquisite exhibit of American pottery of 80 pieces from the best pottery, Corn, Marblehead, Nilok, Pawabic, Overbeck, Paul Revere, Rookwood, Van Briggle, Teco, Dedham, Brydcyffe, Omaha Khayam, Fulper, Nicholson, Indian from five pueblos and North Dakota College of Mines. This exhibit contains many prize-winning masterpieces of the artist's art. Lecture by Mrs. Howard Green, chairman of division of art in the general federation, describing the process of pottery making and how to exhibit. This exhibit has been offered to the clubs of the Georgia Federation by Mrs. Howard Green for the months of October, November and December. Booking must be made once. This is a splendid opportunity for the clubs to use this exhibit at a small cost and I hope the clubs that can use it will do so. Write for the artist's list and expressage from last place of exhibit. Write for date."

With the Women of Today

BY LILLIAN CAMPBELL.

Miss Vivian Copeland's dahlias won the recent dahlia show contest in Pittsburgh.

She and her father have the largest garden in western Pennsylvania. They live in the Perryville section of Pittsburgh.

Children choose present benefits in place of greater deferred awards, but the majority of children who consistently choose the more substantial future laplands were in the behavior group labeled "good." Most of the older children choosing an immediate satisfaction were delinquent.

"It appears," said Dr. Washburne in a report of his experiment to the Psychologic Tests. Dr. John N. Washburne of Syracuse University has devised a set of simple tests designed to measure the ability of children to sacrifice an immediate reward for a greater future satisfaction. A set of children from the ages of three to 17 years, whose home and school records are available, were asked whether they would prefer to own motor car now or have $10,000 later. The results showed that the choice of one piece of candy now over five pieces next week, and a further preference for a higher prize at the center than at the periphery of the wheel, was made by 90 per cent of the children under a certain age, leads to conduct which is generally considered sound.

Impulse Judgment is the term coined by the psychologist to cover this trait of character. "Our results indicate," says Washburne, "that impulse judgment generally grows up with mental age and chronological age, that it is more likely to occur in males than females, and when it lags far behind there is some cause for concern."

Almost invariably the younger child's serious trouble."

Vacation--A Necessity.

The wind whispers vacation time is over, the beacon light of home beckons to us. The thrill of homecoming is as great as home-going.

A vacation is a necessity. The physical need is felt; the mental strain relaxed; the psychological effect of a change of scene and people although often unnoticed and under-estimated, is there, and the call is urgent. The medical world advises it. The big business corporations map out their year's program allowing vacations with salary. They find it a paying policy. Who does not enjoy a vacation and come home feeling refreshed, strengthened and a warm friendship for all the world?

In the marvelous development of civilization woman is given a greater task, the tense life she leads in the great cities, standing behind the counter, sitting at the desk, answering hundreds of calls. The glad vacation time will bring her back with sweet memories of the hills and dales, the birds and flowers, the echo of the chimes of the village church bell, so fraught with the innocence of childhood days. She comes back to her task stronger spiritually, morally and physically to do her part toward making the world a better place to live. We are creatures of limitation. It is well to know our confines and do our best as we pass this way. Let all, who can take and enjoy a vacation to the fullest.

New Beds Have Been Provided Children at Baptist Hospital

Mrs. T. L. Lewis, honorary president of the Federated Church Women of Georgia, submits the first of the series of articles.

The first autumn meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital was held Friday, September 13, in the Joe Brown Connelly hall, Mrs. J. W. Wills, president, presiding. The chaplain, Dr. J. F. Rhodes, offered prayer, and Mrs. W. T. Rhodes, of Inman Park, brought an appealing Bible reading from John 14. Mrs. J. M. Wright, recording secretary, read the revised constitution and by-laws which, after discussion, were unanimously adopted.

Announcement was made that the much needed beds in the children's department have been provided. One of the beds was donated by James L. Key, who served for years as president of the auxiliary, and another bed was given by the Fidelity Class of the Inman Park Baptist Sunday school, Mrs. W. T. Rhodes, teacher. Plates with the names of the donors will be placed on six new beds and the names will be announced later.

Mrs. Charles West was voted chairman of the visiting committee. She will be assisted by every woman of the auxiliary. The Moreland Avenue Baptist Sunday school, which was taught so faithfully by Mrs. James L. Key, was appointed to assist Mrs. C. D. Dural in providing flowers to brighten rooms of the patients. Mrs. J. B. Franklin, superintendent of the hospital, reported 713 patients treated freely as a loving ministry at a total cost to the hospital of $22,333.78. Reports and attendance were unusually good. The second Friday of each month was named as the permanent day of meeting.

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves other troubles caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they are suffering from nausea, or gas, or lack of appetite, etc.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it from your drug store is made in accordance with the original formula from only herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Christian Church Helps Missionaries In Foreign Lands

The women of First Christian church not only support every phase of the local work and missions in the home land but they have several close ties on the foreign fields. For several years Mrs. J. D. Montgomery, of Buenos Aires, Argentina, South America, has been supported as the First Church's Loving Link missionary. She and her husband have been associated with other missionaries in building up a strong Protestant mission. The women of the First Christian church take great interest in providing the salary of this fine Christian worker and will have her as their guest when she returns on her furlough.

The young women's class, known as the Gleaners, some years ago came to have a great admiration for Miss Cammie Gray, a missionary in China, and for several years have been supporting three native Bible women associated with Miss Gray in that far-away land, paying their salary as they go out into the highways and byways teaching the word of God to the women of China. The Gleaners are very happy in their support of these Christian women who are doing so much in a far-away land.

Most recently the Mother Rosa Missionary Circle made up of the still younger group of young women of the church naturally followed in the footsteps of their mothers and older sisters and assumed the support of a woman in the Philippine Islands, Mrs. Nathan T. Moore is the present visitor of this group and is very energetic about their having the far look and the far reach in their missionary work.

The Baptist W. M. U. of the Atlanta association for the benefit of the Georgia Baptist Orphan's Home will be held in the main building of the home at Hapeville. An invitation is extended to the Baptists of Georgia and to their friends.

A visit to this worthy institution will be a splendid way to open fall activities. The need of bed and table service is urgent. Desires for dining table service are also much needed.

Fidelity Class. The Fidelity Class of Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church was entertained by Miss Ada West, the president of the class, at tea in her home, 1068 West Peachtree street, September 15 from 5 to 7 o'clock in the evening. The class had with them Mrs. J. H. Zachary, teacher, and Mrs. T. L. Lewis, a substitute teacher for Mrs. Zachary during vacation time. This tea was preceded by many others held by Mrs. Zachary in her home, 727 Myrtle street.

Circles Honored. Mrs. R. E. Harvey, chairman of Circle No. 9 of the Women's Benevolent and Missionary Society of the Second Baptist church, and Mrs. H. R. Fischer, chairman of Circle No. 7 of the same church, will entertain the members of their respective circles at a splendid luncheon party at the home of Mrs. Fischer, 361 Tenth street, N. E., Tuesday, October 15. Mrs. S. L. Lewis will teach a mission study book, the title to be announced later.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, Carterville, president of Baptist W. M. U. of Georgia, is on the W. M. U. program at the First Baptist church Monday, September 16.

Miss Mary Christian, Young People's secretary of the Georgia B. W. M. U., is enjoying a period of rest with her mother in Elberton.

Mrs. Julia Veach Stewart has recovered from a recent sinus operation and has resumed her duties as rural extension worker of the Georgia B. W. M. U.

Miss Leone Bates, Griffin; Miss W. Youl Dugitt, Unadilla; Miss Maye Lamb, Danville; Miss Claude Stephens, Fitzgerald; Miss Leola Smith, Valdosta; Miss Mary Beane Colquhoun, and Miss Aleta Baker Menlo will arrive in Atlanta Monday, September 23, en route to Louisville, Ky., where they will enter the Baptist W. M. U. Training school, opening September 24.

Rev. and Mrs. Dan T. Hurley, of Buchanan, Romania, spoke at Druid Hills Baptist church Tuesday, September 17.

Laurens County W. M. U. Association Young People's Council was recently held at Cadwell Baptist church. Every organization was represented. Mrs. J. D. Lane, association leader, presided.

The W. M. U. of the Hephzibah Association will hold a conference for leaders in Augusta October 4-5.

Mrs. Paul Etheridge, vice president for the North Central division of the B. W. M. U. of Georgia, announces the annual institute to be held at Houghton October 18-19. Visitors wishing to be entertained should apply to Mrs. Arthur De La Pierre, Houghton, president of the W. M. U.

The Business Women's circle of the Kirkwood Baptist W. M. U., and the monthly program meeting will be conducted Friday evening, September 27, at the church. A splendid musical program has been arranged and an interesting speaker engaged. The chairman, Mrs. H. S. Hamilton, presides.

Mrs. Edward Warner, of St. Philip's cathedral, who has traveled around the world, gave an interesting talk on the Holy Land before the adult department of the Ponce de Leon Avenue S. S. Sunday morning, September 16.

The ladies of the guild and the auxiliary held an informal reception in honor of their new minister, the Rev. Woolsey E. Couch, of the Church of Our Saviour, Friday evening, September 20, in the guild room of the church, Los Angeles and Highland avenues. Episcopalians from all over the city called during the evening to welcome the Rev. Mr. Couch to the city.

Mrs. F. R. Shaw, director of the primary department of St. Philip's cathedral, is spending her vacation in Little Rock, Ark.

Miss Juanita Greer, daughter of Mrs. H. G. Greer, president of the Ladies Aid of St. Philip's cathedral, left Friday, September 20, for Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, Md., where she will resume her research work.

The Ladies Aid restaurant will open Monday, September 23, at 11 Hunter street, S. W., with Mrs. Charles W. Ford as chairman of Monday's committee.

Miss Crawley Handles Case Work At Appleton Home, Near Macon

The photograph presents Miss Charlotte Crawley, social service worker at Appleton church home, near Macon.

Miss Charlotte Crawley was made social case worker at the Appleton Church Home near Macon, in January, 1929. The diocese of Atlanta deemed it wise to change the policy of the home, which is a home for dependent girls, maintained by the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta, hoping that by making it a more or less temporary home while adjustments can be made with family or relatives, or others, that a greater number of children might be served, and that better adjustment might be made. Miss Crawley carefully investigates each case before it comes in, and keeps in touch with the cases after they are dismissed.

The Appleton Church Home, which was founded at the close of the Civil War for orphaned daughters of the soldiers, grew so that five years ago a new home was built just outside Macon, on the highest point of a hill. The home is built on the semi-cottage plan. The children enjoy the wide playgrounds, fresh air and country life.

Perhaps there is no person who has the interests of Appleton home at heart, who gives more of her unselfish hours to the church, Roy LeFraw, who has been with the institution most of her life. The spirit and atmosphere of the home and its high ideals show the impress of her personality.

One of the objectives in view is a mothers' aid program which will make it possible for many children who are taken from their mothers because of poverty alone to remain at home with their mother, leaving the institution for the care of other children.

Miss Crawley received her B.S. degree in education at the University of Virginia, and her M.A. in social service, at the University of Georgia. She has taught for eight years, done part-time work with a statistical study of housing conditions in Chicago, and acted as visitor for the joint service board in Chicago. She also served as superintendent of public welfare and as Red Cross secretary of Albemarle county and Charlottesville City, Va.

Historic Places Are Visited By Local Lutheran Editor

BY MRS. C. V. AHLES, Lutheran Editor.

During a recent trip in the west much of interest was observed by the writer, and this page being set aside for church news, I will endeavor to describe three interesting visits made.

Traveling in southern California, from Los Angeles to Tia Juana, Mexico, our attention was called to bells, held in iron supports, at intervals of about a mile. These, we were told, were so placed originally by the Franciscan fathers, beginning way back in 1769, along the King's highway (El Camino Real), as mission markers.

The first one was placed in San Diego, by Padre Junipero Serra in that year. As the missions increased in numbers so the number of bells increased until finally, scattered up and down the coast, 21 of these missions could be found, the most elaborate being the old mission of San Juan Capistrano, mellowed by age and tradition. It is located in a group of hills midway between Los Angeles and San Diego, and is considered the most beautifully decorated and artistically constructed of the California missions. It is noted for its arched cloisters and the sumptuous interior of gold ornamentation.

The tabernacle, built in 1863-67, seating about 8,000, houses one of the world's finest organs. A recital is given for the public daily from 12 o'clock to 12:30. Regular public services are held in the tabernacle Sunday afternoons at 2 o'clock except the first Sunday, Fast Day, Brigham Young, who was a pioneer and cabinet maker by trade, is given entire credit for the planning and supervision of this well built structure, as well as of the temple and the entire commonwealth of Salt Lake City.

The temple is a massive granite structure with six spires. This building was commenced less than six years after the first pioneers found there a desolate sage brush wilderness; it was not completed until 1893, 40 years later, as the result of poverty and other difficulties confronting these pioneers in early days. The total cost was about four millions. Visitors are never admitted to the temple, but only Mormons in good standing, as it was not designed as a place of public assembly for the people in general. It is to them what Solomon's temple was to the Jews, a holy place, devoted to sacred ordinances, such as marriage, baptismal ceremonies and other sacred rites, some of which are for the dead.

Symbols adorning the temple are those of the sun, moon and stars. The figure of Moroni, son of Mormon, surmounts the central spire. Two life-like bronze figures of Joseph Smith, the prophet, and his brother, Hyrum, stand near the temple.

The museum has a fine display of relics pertaining to pioneer days, and those of the sun, moon and stars. The tabernacle, the church has made many tours into the west and east.

The tabernacle choir of the Peachtree Christian church holds group meetings in the homes Monday afternoon, September 23, at 2:30 o'clock.

The Women's Council of the First Christian church meets Wednesday afternoon, September 25, at 3 o'clock at the church. Roy LeFraw will address the meeting on the "Community Chest."

Social Notes From Avondale Estates. Avondale Estates, Ga., September 21.—Mrs. Harold Antrim, who has been the guest of Mrs. J. E. Okell, has returned home to Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. J. L. Bond entertained her bridge club Wednesday afternoon. The guests included Mesdames C. R. Pyburn, P. B. Hicks, W. O. Parker, C. L. Henry, W. M. Rogers, W. H. Goulder, J. E. Pounds.

Mrs. W. H. Goulder will entertain the Avondale Bridge Club at a luncheon Tuesday.

Mrs. and Mrs. W. O. Parker have left on a motor trip to Los Angeles, where they will spend several months. Mrs. Lee Potter has gone to Sussex, N. J., where she was called home on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. W. F. McCoy.

Mrs. William Rogers, who is chairman of the ways and means committee, will be the guest of Mrs. J. E. Okell, who has returned home to Jacksonville, Fla.

ART OF HOMICIDE PERVADES THE FALL THEATER

Before the CURTAIN

TALKIES BEGIN TO LOOK LIKE THEY'D GROW UP, AFTER ALL

Even if frequent washouts do sneak in, there's no doubt about it, the talkies are getting bigger and better—much bigger and much better. This is going to be somewhat of a review of "Gold Diggers of Broadway," which, from its title, you may be inclined to tush-tush right away, with legitimate reason.

Despite such a title and the information that it was an all-color production, hence by all precedents supposed to be an optical pain, your contributor arose in the middle of the night at 9 o'clock Friday morning in response to the earnest pleas of Manager Bob Hicks, of the Paramount, and went to that playhouse, where he sincerely planned to resume the morning's slumber in some secluded spot in order not to offend "Honest Bob."

That morning's repose still is unfinished, for from fade-in to fade-out a new screen star, Winnie Lightner, proceeded to out-Marx the Marx brothers in rapid-fire gags and laugh situations, pausing only long enough to allow the jolly little story to be told and for the eminent Nick Lucas and Ann Pennington to do their stuff.

No fooling, this Winnie person is the queen of all the comics, the talking screen has given us, and that includes Fannie Brice, too. What this dizzy dame can do with a gag is nobody's affair, and if you don't think so when you see the fillum, then go into the undertaking business.

And further marvelous is the fact that the color job is magnificent. While it may not be absolutely perfect, you would have to pay any installments on your optometrist's automobile after you see it, and that's some consolation.

FANCHON AND MARCO UNIT IS BIG HIT HERE.

All who took pains enough to express their opinion of the first Fanchon and Marco unit, "Up in the Air," at Loew's Capitol theater last week thought much the same thing as your contributor and that was something highly complimentary to Fanchon and her little brother, Marco.

These two, long predominant in west coast entertainment, seem to have the happy knack of marking up a hit with every production and unless something goes wrong with the machinery, you can play a sure bet on every Fanchon and Marco show that comes to town from now on.

The Capitol will play other Fanchon and Marco shows, but it is generally understood that the units will be featured weekly at the new Fox theater, when and if that edifice opens. The Capitol engagements are considered as being in the nature of test shows to find just precisely what the Atlanta public desires, since it is not probable that William K. would choose to do any precarious experimentation at his expensive Fox house if there were any other way out.

USHERS THROW DANCE.

Several Atlanta theater ushers and many score others throw a dance Friday night. And don't think the tense is faulty. We said throwed and we meant throwed. Throwed. Yep, everything but the chandler and it wouldn't come loose. But after many weeks of having to play the courteous and perfect gentleman to grouchy customers, you should excuse it please.

"Boy, that party really 'laid 'em in the aisles,' 'Our Boy, Wildap,' said afterwards, 'and there ain't no triple-tonguing in that trumpet solo. I don't recall having attended no better party since the San Pedro Police Reporters Brawl which came to a brilliant close after three days when the last two surviving members, a trap-drummer and the piccolo player, did an Apache dance and fell down the elevator shaft.'"

OUR OWN POISONAL TALK.

Bob Hicks, Paramount manager adds to Tales of Horror on Opening Nights with yarn of assistant manager in Fort Worth who forgot to place balcony seats on sale, while hundreds of people were turned away . . . Auditor Sidney Schwartz, Charlie Keasnick and Lionel H. Keene, some of Those High-Priced Executives, spend two hours' time arguing over $2.38 bill which Lionel claims Charlie's M-G-M boys are trying to gyp the Capitol out of . . . Mister Speece at the Georgia startles the natives with a faun-gray fedora.

POISONAL NOTE.

Our Boy, Wildap Czinchelo, was hugely elated (hugely, of a necessity, since Wildap weighs 286 pounds on the hoof, I. O. B. Buckhead) when he returned the past week to find four letters from some young lady or sheik in Sheba's handwriting, who, it seems has been shadowing his activities at Keith's Georgia. The writer had spotted Wildap's favorite box seat which he sneaks into each Monday while the guardian usher isn't looking and she proceeded to recount for him his activities.

Wildap was elated not only because the mysterious one addressed him as "Wildap," but because she used special delivery stamps. "Anybody can get insulted by anonymous letters," Wildap said, "but it ain't everybody which can get special delivery anonymous missives." Our Boy said with a smug smile.

Knowing his own well-known popularity with the ladies, Wildap immediately accused the usher force at the Georgia of writing the letters, but these gentlemen were caustic in the comment that they wouldn't even write him to tell him his celluloid collar was on fire.

However, Wildap, not discouraged in his search for the unknown correspondent, weighed the pen pressure on the letters in accordance with his long experience at the Scotch Stockyards and is now going around examining everybody's pen pressure. Have you had your pen pressure taken by Mister Czinchelo?

Reckless Youth Is Seen Again In Met. Picture

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Loretta Young and Chester Morris, three of the most prominent of the new regime of stars, have probably the greatest roles of their short but meteoric careers in "Fast Life," the all-talking dramatic hit, playing the Metropolitan this week.

Chester Morris is a newcomer to the screen, but one who made his debut in a manner that will not soon be forgotten, for his portrayal of the gangster in "Alibi" will stand out as one of the most masterful performances of the talking screen.

"Fast Life" as a stage play was one of the most successful of its season, Chester Morris had the same role in the play as he does in the picture. The story is that of youth, not vicious, but young and interested in their own selves and their own pleasure, caring not for the consequences of their folly, and under the influence of alcohol, rather careless of what may happen.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as the hero, is shown as very much in love with Loretta Young, and she with him. In love with the girl, and she with him, are two boys who are very jealous of each other. Fairbanks' success, and are quite obviously suspicious of his relations with the girl. The picture opens with scenes of a party at young Fairbanks' apartment. Because of the noise the party is dispersed by the landlord.

The other two fellows take the girl home. She returns to the apartment and while in negligence one of the other boys breaks in. A row is started, the fight is carried into the hallways. He tumbles in—dead. Young Fairbanks is tried for the murder, though he does not know how it happened.

Charles Chaney, famous comedian, is seen and heard in "The Big Squawk," an all-talking comedy, on the same program. Other additional features on the program are Pathe News and Red Nichols and his orchestra.

"Paris Bound" Stars Ann Harding, Stage Beauty, at Rialto

Ann Harding, another stage luminary, made found by her creation of the sensational role of Mary Dugan, makes her debut at the Rialto this week in Philip Barry's international stage hit, "Paris Bound."

Miss Harding brings to the screen her renowned comic blonde beauty, exquisite daintiness and golden voice which have made her one of the idols of Broadway.

Featured with her is Frederic March, also recruited from Gotham, who will be remembered for his excellent work with Clara Bow in "Wild Party."

Both stars are admirably suited to the sophisticated and thoroughly enjoyable story which Barry unfolds in a dramatic and intense vein.

"Paris Bound" tells of a young couple of high society who, after marriage, are confronted with former loves. In these loves they find the solution to their own problem and much happiness. However, the time-honored lover triangle here has been displaced by a novel four-sided domestic tangle. Each sequence lays bare the intimate life of high society and for this reason the picture has been accredited with being "a true page from the textbook of today's smart set."

Set in the background of luxury, beautiful clothes play an important part in making the picture outstanding, as well as the superb acting of the stars and featured cast, the latter including beautiful Carmelita Geary and Leslie Fenton.

Harrison's Reports, a magazine of critical comment, acclaims "Paris Bound" as one of the most powerful domestic dramas presented in a long time, while Exhibitors Herald-World, another periodical of critical acclaim, says through its reviewer, T. O. Service, "I consider 'Paris Bound' the smartest talking picture to date, which means, too, that I consider it as good as the best talking picture I have previously seen, and, to my taste, better."

Twelve New Plays See Murder and Bloodshed Done on Stage Boards

Detection of Crime Still Occupies Attention of Playwrights and Producers, Percy Hammond Finds.

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

New York, September 21.—These columns were inquisitive not long ago concerning what subjects the drama would light upon this season. Politics, sport, disarmament, gin, finance, sex, the nineteenth amendment, peace and other themes were suggested as ripe for clarification, with the belief that one or all of them would be chosen. The stage, however, is the art of surprises, and instead of doing as we expected it to do, it takes our breath away by turning what is known as its attention to murder mysteries and their probing.

Statistics of the theater tell me that 12 new plays illustrate the progress of homicide and the difficulty of detecting its perpetrators. Almost every Broadway platform is consecrated to death by violence, until it seems that the drama is an inquest, rather than an art. An ingenué is slain in M. Cohan's "Gambler," a British army officer in "Soldiers and Women."

The bleeding carcass of an elderly spiritualist confronts us in "Remote Control" and in Miss Elsie Ferguson's "Scarlet Pages," a pure little N. Y. night girl sheds the blood of her foster father. Mr. Tyler's "Houseparty" pictures some gay mishaps in the career of a boyish college man, and Mr. Woods' "Murder on the Second Floor," deals, though trivially, with throat-cutting in a Bloomsbury boarding house. "Philadelphia" and "Hawk Island," they say, are steeped in assassination, reeking with blood and retribution.

Hammond Regains Favor of Words.

Mr. Woods, the importer and producer of "Murder on the Second Floor," is notorious for his patience with the dramatic critics. No matter how ill they treat his enterprises he grins and bears them. From the dramatic reviewer's rooster he only asks a thorn, and when he gets it he is grateful. Forbearance is among the most prominent of his virtues, the crowning quality of a Broadway showman's great heart.

Other managers, resentful of the errors of the press, remove their advertisements and banish the offending scribbles from their theaters. Why, then, should we with unanswerable logic, should you criticize our product when you don't find fault with Macy's, Calico, Socony's petrol, Swift's hams, Goodyear's tires or Wrigley's chewing gum?

But Mr. Woods seldom, if ever, nurses a wrong. He was a little miffed at me last week for not understanding "Scarlet Pages," and by way of indicating his annoyance he reduced his paid announcements in my paper until they were skin and bone. However, after I had expressed my enjoyment of his "Murder on the Second Floor," he renewed the amicable relations. So now we are just as arm-in-arm as manager and critic ever were, in undesired forgiveness, in sincerities forgot.

It seems that the pleasure I took from Mr. Woods' "Murder on the Second Floor" was illegitimate. I thought it a jovial prank, a literary and ingenious frolic in melodrama, impish in a routine way and more than usually amusing and well acted. Nevertheless, Mr. Mandle, "The New York News," denounced it as "below par" and Mr. Anderson, of the New York Journal, wrote that it "left something to be desired." In the Times, Mr. Atkinson said of it that it was "not worth the labor of importation," and Charles Darnott, of the Evening Post, described it as "dull and dull."

Mr. Mandle, of the New York Mirror frowned upon it as "frail, tedious and unexciting. The Evening Post's referee, John Mason Brown, declared it "strangely wasteful and inept," and Mr. Lockridge, of the Sun, damned it by saying that it was "mildly enjoyable."

In "bored and irritated" Mr. Littell, of the Morning World, and to Mr. Seldes, of the Graphic, it was but "one key to Baldpate." Of it Mr. Bolton, in the Telegraph, wrote that "there isn't an ounce of real worth in it." Mr. Garland, of the Telegram, in a priceless comparison, preferred its "subdued tastiness" to the "nicest and degenerecy" of "Scarlet Pages," and Mr. Gabriel, of the American, laughingly pool-pooed it as "hokum inevitable."

With this preponderance of testimony, a case is made for the "Murder on the Second Floor." I bow out, confessing that my judgment is bad, even if my taste is good. And I sympathize with Mr. Woods, when and if he reduces his advertisements in the newspapers that have scorned "Murder on the Second Floor." I warn him, however, that they will continue publication, despite the withdrawal of his patronage and that the pay envelopes of his offending critics will be as fat as heretofore.

Critic Likes Mary Nash.

Miss Mary Nash, a handsome actress, appeared last Monday night in a flimsy riddle by Lee Wilson Dodd, entitled "The Strong Man's House." In it she is a roquish nurse who, while ministering to the afflicted, is not averse to crime. Having led a hard life, full of indignities, she is out for retribution. Upon her conduct she has replaced the Red Cross with the double cross.

Therefore she pilfers an incriminating letter from a dying patient and demands hush money. This evidence of her determined character impresses the sick man and he pleads with her to become his daughter-in-law. He is a tough parent and his son, a dreamy idealist, is in need, he thinks, of her iron influence. It is his theory that marriage with a blackmailer will make the boy a better man.

But the old father's scheme goes awry. Instead of changing the poet into a satyr, she herself is turned by him into something resembling a noble woman. In a rickety maze of plot, scenes, conversations and roles, she tries her best to remain a cheat, and in the end is overcome by love. It seems that in the construction of "A Strong Man's House" Mr. Dodd lost his way, confused by the devious surroundings of the drama.

Hal Skelly Stars "Woman Trap" On The Georgia Screen

Thank the talking pictures for bringing us a more powerful form of entertainment than their predecessor, the silent drama. One of the really fine things that has come to us out of the talking picture age is "Woman Trap," Paramount's all-talking dramatic thunderbolt which begins the new week at Keith's Georgia theater on Monday. "Woman Trap" not only brings that famous stage play, "Brothers" to the living screen, but it also brings to you three outstanding stage and screen stars. There is Hal Skelly, the lovable "Kid Johnson" of "The Dance of Death," cast in the role of Dan Malone, the big, easy going detective. Evelyn Brent of "Interference" fame cast in the role of "Kitty Evans" sister of a racketeer, who, for revenge, sets her brother against brother and last but not least Chester Morris, the shiek hand of the melodramatic hit "Alibi" cast in the role of "Ray Malone," gangster-brother of "Dan Malone."

"Woman Trap" is said to be a sensational, daring picture with a theme that moves audiences in perfect rhythm to its action. It is a story of brother against brother. One in the ranks of the guardians of the law and the other a gangster. But crooks and crookdom do not occupy the stage, there is the dear old mother whose very life is entwined in the actions of her two sons. When one leaves home as a hunted man, the other becomes embittered with life and wrecks havoc on the faces of the law.

A girl enters a betting office for the life of her younger brother, yet loving her foes in a primitive manner. The climax is said to be one of intense emotional appeal that will thrill you.

"Woman Trap" was directed by William Wellman, who is well remembered as the director of "Wings," "Beggars of Life," and a score of other successes.

The stage show presented along with this dramatic picture is "Benji Bedini's unit show, 'Keep Smiling.'"

Eskimos Swelter.

The proverb, "time waits for no man," which has stood up for centuries, was put under terrific strain recently on the Fox lot where in the hot sun of August, an Eskimo village covering three-quarters of an acre was reproduced in its traditional snow-covered state for the filming of "Frozen Justice." Lenore Ulric, debut talking picture. A feature of the set is an old trading bar kiosk on a snowy Arctic coast.

Three very modern girls who choose different paths to an ultimate goal of happiness provide the motivation for "Our Dancing Daughters," appearing Monday only at Alamo Theater No. 2.

With Joan Crawford, Johnny Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian and Anita Page in the leading roles, the M-G-M feature has a stellar cast. In support of the principal players, such screen artists as Nils Asther, Kathryn Cummings, Huntley Gordon, Evelyn Hall and Sam De Grasse are seen.

DAVEY LEE.

spendent of The Constitution learned Saturday.

Young Mr. Lee, who is the captor of more feminine hearts than the late Mr. Valentino and all the stage matinee idols combined, was signed to appear in Atlanta at a figure said to exceed any price ever paid for a stage attraction here.

While he admitted that the youthful film star had been engaged for the Capitol appearance, Carter Barron manager, Saturday said he would not be prepared to issue any announcement concerning details of the engagement until the latter part of this week.

Davey first edged his way into the limelight as occupant of Mr. Johnson's knee in "The Singing Fool" with his candid request, "Daddy, thing me 'Sonny Boyee.'"

From then on it was just a panic of femininity when the juvenile celebrity returned in his own feature picture, "Sonny Boy," and subsequently as knee-sitter for Johnson in "Say It With Songs."

It is expected that the youngster will be seen here in a specially written skit.

"Sonny Boy" Film Monday at DeKalb.

"Sonny Boy," a Warner Bros. Vitaphone talking picture starring Davey Lee, will open the week's program at the DeKalb theater Monday. Davey Lee, as everybody knows, earned his advancement to stardom by the wonderful work he did in "The Singing Fool" as Sonny Boy. However, in his latest picture he is not required to make people cry, but to furnish entertainment of the highest type, and this he does, and how.

Wednesday, Billie Dove, the screen's most popular beauty, will be featured in "Adoration."

Thursday and Friday, "The Divine Lady" will be shown. This gigantic feature will star Corinne Griffith in one of the most entertaining pictures of the silver screen.

Saturday, Rough-Riding Hoot Gibson will be offered in his greatest action western, "The Danger Rider."

Three very modern girls who choose different paths to an ultimate goal of happiness provide the motivation for "Our Dancing Daughters," appearing Monday only at Alamo Theater No. 2.

With Joan Crawford, Johnny Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian and Anita Page in the leading roles, the M-G-M feature has a stellar cast. In support of the principal players, such screen artists as Nils Asther, Kathryn Cummings, Huntley Gordon, Evelyn Hall and Sam De Grasse are seen.

Loew's Grand presentation for the first three days is the Fox all-talking movie production, "The Valiant." This is a heart-moving story tense with humor interest and portrayed by an all-star cast. Paul Muni and Marguerite Churchill of legitimate fame, are co-featured in the leading roles; the former as a confessed murderer sentenced to electrocution, and the latter as a girl who seeks to discover whether the convict is her long missing brother, Johnny Mack Brown also has a prominent role. The rest of the cast give able support.

Madame X, one of the greatest masterpieces of the drama, is Loew's Grand presentation for the last part of the week. This sensational film is a M-G-M all-talking presentation and is adapted from the famous and successful stage play. Ruth Chatterton in the title role, rises to superb dramatic heights, especially in the opening plea to the wronged husband to see her child and in the great court room sequence that brings the dramatic climax of the play. Lewis Stone, as the husband, plays the role of the austere lawyer with a fine restraint, and Raymond Hackett, who scored in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," reaps another triumph as the son and defense attorney. The supporting cast are all adequate.

Two of the season's outstanding sound pictures and two silent productions comprise the Tenth Street Theater's feature offering for this week. George Bancroft's remarkably successful all-talking Paramount picture, "Thunderbolt," a powerful drama with the star in the role of a dominating underworld character, heads the program for Monday and Tuesday and Fay Wray and Richard Arlen are splendid in fine supporting roles. Bancroft surpasses his own notably fine previous work in "Underworld" and "The Wolf of Wall Street."

By way of contrast, the program for Wednesday is made up largely of comedy. The feature attraction is Harry Langdon to one of his greatest successes, "The Strong Man." On the same program there will be a riotous slapstick comedy, "Uncle's Visit," and a new episode of detective serial, "The Black Book."

Thursday and Friday will bring Richard Barthelmess in his first singing and talking picture, "Weary River," a First National-Vitaphone production. The star scores an individual triumph in the role of a singing radio artist and composer of the song hit, "Weary River."

Douglas MacLean heads the program for Saturday, appearing in the stellar role of "Divorce Made Easy," a typical MacLean picture.

PICTURE STARS FIND HIGH SALARIES DRAWBACK

Midnight Show
Tonight Opens
Hollywood Film

"Hollywood Revue" Acclaimed as Musical Sensation at Loew's Capitol.

Presenting the largest and most pretentious array of stage and screen stars yet offered in a single motion picture production, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's gigantic "Hollywood Revue" will be shown all this week at Loew's Capitol theater beginning with a midnight show tonight at one minute past midnight.

Due to the unusual length and stupendous cost of this all-talking, singing and dancing production, the usual bill of Loew's vaudeville has been eliminated for this week only, the management announces.

Twenty new song hits and novelty dances, abundant "gags" and laugh-laden melodies and dialogue that sparkles, to say nothing of the largest dancing chorus of beautiful girls that ever dazzled the bald-headed row.

This is the material Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has compounded into the greatest all-star musical attraction ever produced on stage or screen. The talkie era moves fast indeed!

It is a Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll and George White show rolled into one with many deft motion picture touches, and because it is a motion picture, many cities and towns of the country off the beaten track of road productions will witness a great revue of revues for the first time.

Sound technique's rapid development, the startling success of "The Broadway Melody," the transposition of Broadway's stage and musical comedy stars as well as its "tin pan alley" to Hollywood—all these backed by the resources of a great studio, have wrought this wonder.

M-G-M's "Hollywood Revue" more than redeems the promise of "musical movies" made with the first talking picture. For example:

Marion Davies makes her talking screen debut in a song and dance number supported by a male chorus of six-footers. She sings and she tap dances in a way to make the greatest tap-dancing stars of the stage look to their honors. Conrad Nagel makes his screen debut as a singer and appears in a new role, that of interlocutor in a minstrel number.

Bessie Love sings, now famous for her part in "Broadway Melody," sings and dances and gives generously of her talents.

John Gilbert and Norma Shearer appear in a romantic skit, Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," and give a modernized version of the same.

and who says he never will, keeps his promise in this picture.

William Haines and Gwen Lee are there with one of the famous Haines "gags" to which Karl Dane and George K. Arthur put a few deft touches.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, famous comedienne of stage and screen, do their stuff extravagantly, with Bessie Love as their little playmate.

Charles King, of "Broadway Melody" fame, introduces another song hit—one of the 20 with which this stupendous picture is endowed.

Gus Edwards, father of the revue type of shows, appears in several numbers to which he contributed four new songs.

"Ekele Ike" (Cliff Edwards), sonsation of the musical comedy stage and famous revue comedian, is seen and heard in a new medium for his versatility.

Natasha Nattova, adagio dancing headline of vaudeville, starts with new hair-raising leaps and bounds.

The Brox Sisters, singing harmonists of the Ziegfeld "Follies," introduce a number of new songs, especially written for the "Revue."

Jack Benny, vaudeville headliner, is humorous as the wise-cracking master of ceremonies.

The Albertina Rasche ballet joins the M-G-M dancing chorus in the colorful "Orange Blossom Time" number.

They Put on Own Talkie. "Extra! Extra! Extra!" shouted the Hollywood newsboys in the streets. Immediately 200,000 inhabitants rushed from their homes thinking they were wanted at the studios.—The Pathfinder.

Broadway Honeymoon For Hollywood Pair

Norma Terris, musical comedy and film star, and Dr. Jerome Wagner, of New York, who were married in Hollywood recently after a long distance courtship, are spending their honeymoon in familiar haunts along Broadway.

A few days after her marriage Miss Terris finished work on "Married in Hollywood," Fox Movietone adaptation of Oscar Straus' operetta, and will return in a few weeks to begin a new picture. J. Harold Murray, who is co-featured with Miss Terris in "Married in Hollywood," arrived in New York for a vacation on the same train as the honeymooners.

Never Seen by Woman. So far as records show, no woman of any race has ever seen or set foot on the icy shores of Antarctica, says Dr. E. E. Free. And another opportunity to be among the first women to set foot on the antarctic continent has just been denied the feminine sex.

Next winter, which is the summer season in Antarctica, Dr. Douglas Mawson, distinguished Australian explorer, will lead another scientific expedition to that continent. More than a score of women scientists applied for places in the expedition but were denied the privilege solely because it was feared the scheduled sled travel, mountain climbing and the like would prove too strenuous for them.

Before long, however, it is expected that a scientific woman will be admitted to some exploring party or will get up one of her own for the purpose of visiting this last of the unknown continents. But until that actually happens it will be interesting to speculate as to just how famous the first woman to visit Antarctica may become.—The Pathfinder.

Sound Perspective. A method of changing the loudness of recorded dialog to conform with the movements of the characters toward and away from the camera, is the latest advance made by technical experts in audible film reproduction.

The process was developed in the making of "The Sky Hawk," the first all talker of wartime flying, by Fox Movietone.

A sight that made many a gay dog rub his eyes and vow to change his bootlegger was that of Aileen Pringle, whose raven tresses had been bleached blonde for a film followed by Laura LaPlante, whose blonde tresses had been dyed brown for a role, and Ann Pennington with her hair a bright red, all marching in to the R-K-O theater opening, dressed like Mr. Astor's pet horse.

Big Money Featured Players First To Go In Expense Slashing

Costly Satellites Lose Contracts As Featured Productions Fail To Justify Heavy Expense.

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.
(Copyright, 1930, by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Hollywood, Calif., September 21.—One of the greatest drawbacks to picture careers at present is a high salary. Which remark seems like a paradox in times when Irene Bordin, Marilyn Miller, Lawrence Tibbett and other notables are receiving small fortunes for one picture. These artists work on a one-picture a season basis.

The star whose dominance suffers a severe trial is the Colleen Moore type, whose salary is $12,000 a week or $624,000 a year. Her main responsibility in life is in making her pictures realize in gross receipts sufficient money to warrant such a salary.

In days of such numerous novelties and violent incursions from stage and opera ranks this isn't easy to do. Especially when you have been before the public as many years as Colleen Moore, and that public has had its appetite for change whetted constantly.

The studio which brought Marilyn Miller to movieland at a fabulous salary will probably not renew negotiations with Colleen Moore this fall. She will most likely do what Bebe Daniels has done—go over to William Le Baron, where she will get not only a big salary but a percentage of the profits as well.

If she succeeds in breaking through the jinx of the ended career legend as Bebe Daniels and Bessie Love have done, the Moore star will rise to splendid once more in the cinematic sky, and the Radio producing group will have scored once more.

Another artist laboring at present under the high salary handicap is that excellent actor Basil Rathbone. Producers find fault with his lack of sex appeal or some other such nonsense. Rathbone has distinguished good looks and sufficient charm and personality to hold the woman element in the audience. He managed to fill the bill for romanticism on the stage when necessary, and can do so in films.

But he was brought into movies when the fury for stage material was in its extravagant beginnings. Rathbone received a huge salary. Motion picture producers find it is not difficult to tap Broadway nowadays.

Stars Enjoying Home for First Time.

Broadwayites, knights of the wardrobe trunk, the hotel room, the apartment with five-foot-square kitchenette, are having their first taste of home life, swimming, golf, motoring, surfboarding and other delights which they once considered the prerogative of fat first-row audiences who could sit at home listening to the radio.

Are the successful Broadwayites longing to close their negotiations in movieland?

I should say not. They miss their Manhattan and are prone to speak longingly of it. But most of them would just as soon go through a winter of large profits in the sunshine.

Hence the artists of Basil Rathbone's financial status find plenty of competition from their own group. And producers, pressed by Wall Street for larger profits, are not at all above shopping about a bit for their talent.

Olga Baclanova, perhaps as good an artist among women as has come into the colony's life, is on vaudeville tour. Renewal of her contract is doubtful. It expires next month and the star's English is not negotiable for talking pictures. Nor are there sufficient roles for dialect parts to warrant holding such a high-salaried artist in the company's stock.

One year ago Menjou, Baclanova, Jannings, Veit and Camilla Horn were the bright lights of all colony news, and stars of some of the most ambitious ventures in silent pictures. With a demand for silent pictures, which will undoubtedly be answered by the producers with a limited number of talkies films each season, we may see the return of some of these favorites.

Revamp Talkies As Silent Films.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
MANY NEW IDEAS MAKE APPEARANCE IN MOTOR CARSSixteen-Cylinder Cadillac
And Four-Speed Packard
Among New Announcements

Quiet Second Gear and Baby Automobile Follow Close on Front-Wheel Drive.

BY E. Y. WATSON,
Written Exclusively for The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

Detroit, Mich., September 21.—New ideas in motor car operation are being brought forward faster than for several years. The newest is the Cadillac announcement that within the present year there will be produced, in addition to the present Cadillac and La Salle lines, a 16-cylinder V-type car.

That confirms a prediction early this year, with which was linked the statement that still another company, not named, would build a straight line 12-cylinder power plant to supplement a present series of straight eights. It is now certain that the straight 12 plan has been discarded, for the present at least.

The Cadillac development represents the most ambitious departure from conventional practice the industry has seen for years.

As yet no specification details have been divulged, other than that the car will be ultra in luxury and price.

Packard's adoption of the four-speed transmission signifies more progress in a new direction. Packard is the seventh maker to utilize this principle and the fifth to introduce it within the last two years.

Among the other departures have come a transmission from the Geo. Company, James V. Martin's baby automobile which makes a packing case serve as its garage, and the advent of the English Austin car in the American market.

In the same category, but of less recent introduction, is the use of front drive in the cord and Ruxton cars.

The Ruxton transmission is a three-speed mechanism with second gear taking on the smooth and silent characteristics of high-gear by the use of V-shaped or herringbone teeth in the wheels. It is said that it is possible to keep the engine running in second and get the continued effect of being in high, with freedom from sound and back lash at speeds from 30 to 40 miles an hour.

As the engineers explain it, Ruxton's silent second is made possible because the constant mesh gears and the second gear train are of the herringbone type. Because of the constant mesh there is no clashing when a shift is made.

The only part that moves is a dog clutch which slides to the rear, engaging with a main shaft second gear and locking it to the shaft. When the dog clutch moves forward from neutral it locks in high gear in the usual manner. Low gear and reverse are the same as on the conventional transmission.

Production of the Martin baby car has been the objective of a $45,000,000 deal in progress at Washington, according to report. The plan is said to contemplate marketing the car through a mail order store chain. In connection with the report, William B. Leeds and the DuPont interests have been mentioned.

The car would sell for $200 at retail. The small car in models of vest-pocket size may be revived within the next year. This is indicated in the reported plans of General Motors to produce from its Opel plant in Germany a line of small automobiles to fit the special price and economy requirements of the European markets.

Last January, James D. Mooney, head of General Motors export, outlined the necessity for such a car and the reasons why it should be smaller and lower priced than any of the American models now marketed abroad.

This was followed last week by a statement from Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the corporation, giving more reasons and analyzing the conditions in European countries which demand a different kind of individual transportation.

While General Motors has this move mapped out, production plans are under way at Butler, Pa., to put the Austin seven, the largest seller of English cars, on the market in this country. This car, according to its builders, who have acquired American backing, weighs only 850 pounds, is mounted on a wheel-base of 110 inches, and employs a four-cylinder engine of 2.2-inch bore and 3-inch stroke. It is described as "the cheapest car in the world to run."

ESSEX WINS BODY TROPHIES

Hudson Motor Car Company officials have been notified that Essex—the Challenger—has been awarded two first prizes by the Belgian Chamber of Commerce of Body Manufacturers and Allied Industries, which organization held its annual salon at Ostend recently. This salon is the most important of its kind held in Belgium and annually attracts the newest and most exclusive body exhibits from American as well as continental manufacturers.

Essex won the two awards in the two-place vehicle and the sport classifications. Both bodies were standard and were produced in the Hudson-Exess ten million dollar body plant in Detroit.

Essex has created an enviable record on the continent this year, having won the Annals trophy, most coveted prize in the annual reliability tour organized by the Motor Club of France, the Lyons Cup, the Pyrenees Cup, the Atlantic Cup, the Cup of Brittany and the Cup of the North. These contests attracted the largest entries in their respective histories.

OVER 1,500 CARS
SHIPPED IN ONE DAY

Flint, Mich., September 21.—Experiencing the heaviest shipping day in the entire 26-year history of the Buick Motor Company, 1,582 Buick and Marquette cars were shipped by the factory's traffic department on Friday, August 30. The day's shipment of cars broke the previous high record when 1,554 automobiles were sent away.

Of the total number of cars shipped from the factory on August 30 this year, 1,332 were loaded into freight cars and sent to all parts of the world, the total figure, including the export shipments, it required 425 freight cars to handle the record shipment. In addition 250 automobiles were sent by train, 250 were driven away to nearby points.

Chrysler Adds
New Words To Motor Vocabulary

Among the writings of the philosopher Diogenes, who lived some 2,000 years ago, was the statement: "Things are not made for the sake of words but words are made for things."

This is as true today as it was in the time of Diogenes. In the process of new movements bring into being those phrases that best describe them. When a new thing comes it demands a label, a name, a word.

From the World War phrases and words, hitherto unknown or with unfamiliar meanings, expressed the experiences of the men in the trenches as no other words could have done. Taken up by everyone, such words as "dud," "barage," "Big Bertha," "dugout," "flexible," "zero hour," and even "cooties" were as familiar to the man in the street as words people had used all their lives.

The vocabulary of the air, also to great extent a legacy from the war, has given the modern dictionary its "fuelage," "tailspin," "aileron," "hangar," "falling leaf," "airframe," and "joystick" and with the advent of the radio came "static," "microphone," "broadcast," "antenna," "heterodyne," "aerial," "time in" and "sign off." Recent political moves saw the words "bolshhevik," "left wing," and "fascist" coined to deserve them.

So, in industry, with each development there comes the necessity of the new words to tell about it.

Not long ago, in the recent announcement of three new lines of cars—the "77," the "70" and the "66"—Chrysler had to create a language all its own to describe the innovations they brought to the mechanical world. Such words as "multi-range gear shift," "down-draft carburetor," "architonic body," "synchronized power," "pennon louvers," "chromium architraves," "paraflex spring suspension," and "scooter-type parking lights" are examples of phrases that appear in the vocabulary of the automobile world for the first time.

The "multi-range gear shift," for instance, as the name implies, is a gear shift with many ranges. The forward gears are heavy duty, starting, accelerating and speed ranges, and the term was chosen to emphasize the unusual flexibility, range and scope of power range it affords.

Applying a new principle in fuelization, "down-draft carburetor" takes its name from the fact that the gas is drawn down into the carburetor, aided by the force of gravity, rather than sucked up, as in the old style method. The word "architonic" comes from the dictionary to describe a structure that is the essence of master craftsmanship and the "architrave" is from architectural phraseology and means moulding around the windows. "Synchronized power" tells the story of the new Chrysler power plant, engineered as a single unit, not a group of connected parts but one smoothly operating carefully synchronized whole. "Pennon louvers," the banner or pennon shaped vents in the hood of the "77" and the "70," are named for their shape, and have been designed to conform to the modernistic motif expressed elsewhere in the car. In the "paraflex spring suspension" Chrysler springs are mounted parallel to the wheels to eliminate sideways, absorb torsional strains, and stresses and control rebound by checking the impulses and shocks. The parking lights are called "scooter type" because of their similarity to a scooter, a bracket candlestick attached to a wall.

And so it has been throughout the history of the industry. As new advancements came, they were given new words and the words have become a part of the language. The balloon tire, the chassis, the spark plug, the windshield and hundreds of others came into general use since the automobile, and many others will follow as time goes on.

RETURNS TO ATLANTA

Jack Sellers Will Represent the Texas Company.

Jack Sellers, formerly of Atlanta, and quite active then in charity and amateur entertainment work, has returned to this city after four years absence in North Carolina and Virginia in sales and organization work, and more recently with the Texas Company in Roanoke, Va., to accept a similar position with the same organization here.

SECRETARIES TO MEET

Dr. Memminger Will Speak at Monday Luncheon.

Dr. William Memminger will be the principal speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta Secretaries' Club at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Atlanta Athletic Club. R. C. Broyles will be chairman of the committee in charge of the luncheon program.

The club is composed of executive secretaries and managers of a large number of civic and commercial organizations.

Sales Follow
Service, Says
Joel Daves

"With a firm belief that sales follow service, our constant endeavor is to render the type of service that anticipates the every need and desire of the Hudson-Exess motor car owner," says Joel Daves, local Hudson-Exess dealer.

"We have applied railroad maintenance principles to automobiles. This plan is known as preventive maintenance. In railroad operation each locomotive is automatically shunted to the maintenance division at the termination of a definite number of miles of operation. Thorough inspection often reveals impending trouble and through this system the railroads of America have reduced accidents due to locomotive failure to almost a minimum.

"This system we have found can very easily be applied to the operation and servicing of automobiles. For a nominal charge our owners may place their cars under a preventive maintenance contract. We ask these owners to bring their cars in to our service station at the end of each thousand miles. The car is thoroughly inspected and minor adjustments made as needed. These inspections are of such a nature that all ordinary and most of the unusual service requirements are anticipated.

"We have found that this system is a real economy of our owners. It reduces maintenance cost by making repairs before real damage has been done. It also tends to reduce the possibility of the owner being inconvenienced by car failure on the road. Probably the greatest benefit that accrues to the owner under this plan is the ease of mind he has in knowing that his car is being regularly inspected and its very requirement except gas, oil and water being anticipated.

"Visitors from all parts of the country have commented favorably on not only the preventive maintenance plan but also on the above ordinary service with which our service station is conducted," continued Mr. Batchelor.

"We take unusual precautions to see that each car is properly serviced during its stay in our hands. We believe that each customer is entitled to have his car treated as well or better than he handles it himself. We provide each mechanic with the necessary seat guards and hood protectors as well as an abundant supply each day of clean rags and waste. Our mechanics are all carefully trained and thoroughly familiar with the most modern methods of maintenance work.

"Having taken every possible precaution to see that each car is kept clean and neat we pass each car through two final inspections. The first is for mechanical condition and each function of the car is checked. Having passed this inspection, the car now goes to the delivery room where it is given the second final inspection.

"This second final inspection is for cleanliness. It is under the supervision of a woman. Here the car is carefully gone over for grease spots, dirt, steering wheels, etc. This assures us that each customer that leaves our car is clean in every way and safe for the woman driver clothed in even the sheerest fabrics."

Speedway Picture Shows Records
On Firestone Tires

The automobile world welcomes as an invaluable experimental record the new comedy drama, "Speedway," which caught the crucial scenes of the 1929 Indianapolis speed classic. Including those which show the extraordinary performance of Firestone tires.

"The Cameramen for the picture happened to be located in such positions that they were able to catch Woodbury's crack-up, Chiron hitting the wall, and the crack-up of William Spence which was the only fatality of the race," said John Doe, of Doe Service Stores, Inc., local Firestone dealer.

"The picture is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production with William Haines, Anita Page, Ernest Torrence and Karl Dane, in which Haines drives a racing car, and is his usual 'smartalee,' yet likeable self. Firestone tires play such an important part in the speedway races that they naturally are a part of the picture."

"That tires can be made to stand the terrific pounding in the heat of that 500-mile race is always an outstanding point of interest to the spectators. In the 500-mile race, looked upon as a valuable test for automotive products Firestone tires have come through with victory for 10 successive years."

"This speedway picture shows in a graphic way what Firestone engineers have done to produce better tires for all motorists."

Buick Plant Running
At Peak Production
To Supply Demand

Flint, Mich., September 21.—Peak production is being maintained at the Buick Motor Company plants here in order to fill the enormous demand for the new 1930 Buick models, E. T. Strong, president and general manager, announced today.

That the total production for August exceeded the output for the same month last year is shown in the company's monthly report, which sets forth that 20,634 cars were manufactured during the month just ended as against 27,476 in August, 1928. Last year's total output also showed a substantial gain over July of this year when 25,694 cars were manufactured.

Production for the last six months exceeds that of the similar period in 1928 by more than five thousand automobiles, the report shows.

Demanded for the new Buick models has steadily increased since they were introduced to the public on July 31, and plans are being made to maintain peak production in the weeks to come.

Buick's output schedules for September call for an average production of more than 1,200 new cars per day, Mr. Strong said.

Work Started on Water Tunnel
To Ford's River Rouge Plant

Work has been started on a two-and-one-quarter-mile water tunnel from the Detroit river to the Ford Motor Company plant at Rouge, Dearborn, Mich., to supply the expanding needs of the plant with 500,000 gallons of uncontaminated water a minute, or three-quarters of a billion gallons a day.

That enormous volume is 100,000 gallons a minute more than present supply which is now withdrawn from the Rouge river through the slip, the docking place for Ford ships. Ninety per cent of all the water is used for cooling purposes. This is heated up and returned to the lower Rouge river below the plant through a discharge tunnel.

The increased demand for water for manufacturing purposes followed adoption of plans for doubling the capacity of the power plant, with provisions for further anticipated expansion. Several power plant units are now being replaced by two 110,000 k.w. turbine-generators, each of which alone requires 150,000 gallons of water a minute for condenser cooling.

The new tunnel, to be completed in a year, is of the gravity type and is being laid 40 feet underground. Its inside diameter is 15 feet. The walls are of concrete 25 1/2 inches thick with an 80-inch wood lining around tunnel used for timbering and jacking shield forward.

The expanding needs of the Ford plant precipitated a nice engineering problem, according to engineers. Water for the power plant must be cool.

Present requirements are approximately four to six times greater than supplied by the upper Rouge river. Therefore, the balance must be drawn from the lower Rouge river which reverses the current from the discharge tunnel to the slip. This returns the warm discharge water to the slip and the constant recirculation raises the temperature 18 or 20 degrees above the average river temperature.

To overcome that objection and also to provide for adequate quantities for further expansion the company was faced with the necessity either of tapping the Rouge farther upstream and installing a cooling spray or to tap other sources. By tapping the Detroit river, more than two miles away, the company is assured of an unlimited supply and will be able to use its present river Rouge system for disposal of water after having passed through the plant.

The gigantic undertaking now in progress is another evidence of the increasing activity at the Rouge plant due to the high rate of automobile production now maintained by the Ford Motor Company.

Fall Trade-In Sale Started By
Goodyear Dealers

The six Atlanta Goodyear dealers, Dobbs Tire Company, 400 West Peachtree street; Consolidated Tire Store, Inc., 155 Spring street; Brooks-Shattley Company, 1643 Jonesboro road, Lakewood; West End Tire & Battery Company, 780 Gordon street; Modern Tire Service, 968 Marietta street; and Miller Service, Inc., 3070 Peachtree road, N. E., are now in the midst of a city-wide trade-in sale, allowing up to 33 1/3 per cent for old tires on the purchase price of new tires, according to the condition of the used tires.

This sale offers everyone an opportunity to trade old, worn-out tires for a set of brand-new Goodyears, the tires known for its superior traction, strength, safety and endurance. This combination has made Goodyear the most popular tire offered today. Only recently Goodyear produced its 150,000,000th tire, which goes to prove that more people are now riding on Goodyears than on any other tire.

The Atlanta Goodyear dealers have replenished their stocks with a complete assortment of all sizes and types of Goodyear tires, and are equipped to render prompt and courteous service. They have been trained to appraise the tire needs of all car owners and recommend the type and size Goodyear that will give the most economical service.

Now those motorists who are reluctant

AUBURN BREAKS
ANOTHER STOCK
CAR RECORD

Auburn, Ind., September 21.—Winning its second major race in Australia, a strictly stock Auburn speedster model set a new record on the unbanked dirt track at Perth by covering the 20-mile course in 13 minutes and four-fifths seconds.

This race was made from a standing start and the condition of the track was reported as poor by Leon Harris, Australian representative of Auburn.

Two months ago an Auburn 8-90 strictly stock sedan broke all previous Australian stock car records on the test course at Melbourne both in speed and hill climbing.

Home for Incurables
Will Hear Concert
By Power Co. Band

An open air concert will be presented at this afternoon by the Georgia Power Company band at the Home for Incurables on South Boulevard near the Grand park.

The band will play from 2:30 until 4:30 o'clock and will present a varied program of overtures and foxtrots.

The public is invited.

FAIR APPEAL SET

Convicted Slayer Will Be Heard On October 7.

The appeal of Fred Fair, who is under death sentence for the murder of Patrolman J. E. McDaniel, will be heard before the state supreme court on October 7. Fair appealed to the state supreme court following his first conviction and was given a new trial. Convicted again, he appealed for a third trial.

Franklin Makes Six Non-Stop
Trips Up Famous Pikes Peak

In one of the most sensational runs in the history of motor cars, an air-cooled Franklin sedan driven by Canon Bill Baker, made six complete round trips without stop from Crystal Creek plateau to the rockbound summit of Pike's Peak, a total distance of 150.28 miles, in four hours and 22 minutes, averaging 34.03 miles an hour. Each trip to the summit of the peak, a distance of 12.4 miles, required a climb of 4,550 feet, making a total climb of 29,704 feet for the six upward trips.

Motor experts who witnessed the remarkable run declared that the gruelling grind could not be accomplished except with an air-cooled engine, since the test can be compared only with airplane performance. It is the first time that such a daring test had ever been attempted on the historic course.

Every type of weather and road condition was encountered in the spectacular test. The start of the route at Crystal Creek found a temperature of 32 degrees above zero, while the snowclad summit showed a temperature of 18 degrees above zero. The highway was perfect as far as Glen Cove, the halfway house. From this point onward, however, climatic conditions changed rapidly. Baker piloted his car upward into the rarified air which is always a most severe test for the inbuilt stamina of a car. The highway from Glen Cove was banked with snow, while mud and slush taxed the roadability of the car. Within two miles of the summit, as the temperature dropped rapidly, the highway was ice-rutted and perilous but failed to slacken the outstanding performance of the air-cooled car.

Reaching the top, Baker immediately turned his car and pointed it down the steep and dangerous grade for the descent. Six times he repeated and with every trip the Franklin developed that same rugged power necessary to conquer the world-famous mountain.

The course over which Baker piloted his air-cooled car is the same route that is used in the annual Pike's Peak race, with its 205 dangerous hairpin curves and switchbacks in the upper ranges. In the six round trips of four hours and 22 minutes, the Franklin safely negotiated 2,400 turns, despite the treacherous condition of the highway over the final four miles of the route.

The Franklin's dramatic proof of the high efficiency of air-cooling and air-cooled power under the most drastic conditions was officially timed by Postal Telegraph at the base and Western Union at the summit. At the conclusion of the almost impossible test, Baker declared that the car could have continued up and down the peak indefinitely, since the air-cooled power plant was functioning perfectly despite the terrific demands that had been made. Baker also stated that the test provided the most notable demonstration of the ability of the air-cooled engine to master conditions that are seldom met in the life of a motor car.

AUSTRIA NAMES
TRADE LEGATE

Robert Hecht, president of the International Corporation of Atlanta, has just received notification of his appointment as commissioner for the Central Association for Foreign Trade of Vienna, a quasi-public organization supported jointly by the Austrian government and the most important industries for the purpose of extending Austria's trade with the world.

Mr. Hecht, who was born in Vienna, but has been a naturalized American citizen and a resident of Atlanta for many years and a leader in cotton trade of this section, said Saturday that the Austrian people are desirous of maintaining friendly commercial relations with the people of the United States for the mutual extension of their trade.

"Austria now sells to the United States over $12,000,000 worth of merchandise consisting of such articles as furs, leather boots and shoes, confections, silks, laces and embroideries, hat trimmings, carpets, paper, glassware, porcelain, tiles and many other articles," he said.

CHRYSLER

has now definitely raised motoring to a still higher plane. The difference in favor of the new Chryslers is decisive and overpowering. You must personally experience this new performance if you would be abreast of the times. Only by demonstration can you learn fully of the great new performance possibilities ushered in by the many characteristic new Chrysler features such as these:

—the new type of Chrysler gear shift by means of which the driver is able to dominate any modern traffic situation whether on the congested city streets, on the open highway, or in the mountains. You have nothing new to learn. Makes driving a joy; shifting, easy—sure—smooth. Engine, gas and oil are conserved while every previous limit of performance is far extended.

DOWN-DRAFT

—the new Chrysler carburetion principle which literally reverses previous fueling practice, with incredible gains in power, smoothness, surety, economy and accessibility. Not merely a gravity manifold, but the same scientific method of carburetion so successfully employed in many recent astonishing aviation endurance flights.

ARCHITONIC

—the new principles and methods of Architonic body construction give the new Chrysler bodies their aristocratic smartness and style, their "dreadnought" strength, permanent silence and restful riding qualities. Actually, scores of such basic betterments await you in the new Chryslers!

Reo Salesmanager Arrested on Second Gear Speed Test

The above illustrations, ladies and gentlemen, show just what happened when Frank Garman, salesmanager for the Reo sales and service, was demonstrating to the editor of these columns Reo's new "silent" second gear transmission. But it so happened that Bill Mashburn, one of Atlanta's alert motorcycle officers, happened along and immediately put a stop to this test. We had reached 50 miles per hour when caught. Top left, "Bill" is re-enacting his moves for our cameraman; right, George Cornett shot us trying to convince Mr. Mashburn that it was a legitimate test, but in vain; bottom insert shows side view of this new engineering achievement that has set all motordom agog. The cars with this new feature are being shown all this week here at 402 Peachtree street.

Quite suddenly the subject of transmissions becomes of paramount interest to drivers and owners of automobiles. Next year will very definitely be a transmission year. The trend is pointed strongly that way, and that the Reo silent-second transmission has become a fact, the motoring public is more than eager to know what this outstanding invention accomplishes and how it is made. This new Reo silent-second transmission is original, the only one of its kind. In designing it, Reo engineers struck upon a principle which has never before been applied to steel gear making—the principle of non-harmonics.

All sound is made up of vibrations. Certain notes in the musical scale, when sounded, find response in certain other strings, or from other articles in the room. These resultant vibrations often produce a definite second tone. That synchronized vibration can become a destructive force as well as merely an annoying condition is familiarly known. Before marching men can cross a bridge they are ordered to break step, else their combined rhythmic cadence might do serious injury to the structure. The non-harmonic principle employed in producing Reo's silent-second transmission is accomplished in so simple a manner as to be startling.

thing. In place of the ordinary or straight tooth spur gears, which have been used for many years in all automobile transmissions, Reo uses a V-type or herringbone gear. Due to the method of constructing these gears, which is exclusively Reo's design, there is never a time, at any speed, when they find an instance of harmonic accord.

Second to its silentness of operation, the greatest feature connected with this transmission is its simplicity. The new Reo silent-second transmission construction is practically the same as the former spur gear type. The bearings used in the old and new types are interchangeable. The transmission case is but three-quarters of an inch longer than the other and weighs but slightly more. The small number of working parts make for long life and the similarity of construction to the former transmission makes the silent-second easy to service.

Of vital importance is the ability to stay in silent-second gear and get the effect of being in high gear. The absence of any sound and the freedom from annoyance caused by the over-run and back-lash of the ordinary second speed spur gear draws immediate favorable comment from the operator, and with the new lower rear axle ratio the motor speed at 30 to 40 miles an hour in second is still smooth and quiet in operation. Wherever traffic is at all congested, the effect obtained by demonstrating the Reo silent-second transmission is marked. This silentness of operation gives the driver, passengers and competing traffic the impression that the car is being operated in high.

The introduction of this new silent-second transmission to the Reo Master Flying Cloud is but another step in Reo's far-reaching program to build a most comfortable, easily operated, and longest-lived automobile.

Now, for the man who is mechanically inclined.

The new Reo silent-second transmission is simple and rugged. One of the principal differences from the conventional type is that the constant-mesh gears and the second gear train are the herringbone type. It is a three-speed transmission and the shift is standard. Some new discoveries concerning the herringbone principle have been made by Reo engineers in perfecting the new mechanism, which accounts for the extreme silence and longevity obtained.

Daring Fliers Are Good Losers

To lose a trans-continental race by a matter of minutes would test the good sportsmanship of even the most magnanimous of rivals, yet, when Henry J. Brown won the trans-continental non-stop race from Los Angeles to Cleveland in the 1929 National Air Races, while flying the flagship of the General Tire and Rubber Company's "Sky Fleet," among the first to greet him and offer their congratulations when he reached Cleveland, 13 hours 15 minutes and 7 seconds after leaving Los Angeles, were Lee Schoenhair and Captain Roscoe Turner, the only other two men who were able to complete the race. Schoenhair lost the race to Brown by more than half an hour, while Turner was disqualified because he did not arrive within the time limit set by the National Air Race officials.

counts for the extreme silence and longevity obtained. In going from second to high gear there is no possibility of clashing, for these gears are in constant mesh, a simple mechanism, known as a dog clutch, being the only part moved by the shifter fork. When the dog clutch is slid to the rear, it engages with the mainshaft second gear, thus locking the gear to the shaft. When the dog clutch moves forward from neutral it locks in high gear in the usual manner. Low gear and reverse are the same as on the conventional three-speed transmissions.

In the new Reo the mesh gears of the transmission are of one pitch, the two left sections of the second gear of another and the two right sections of still another. Fundamentally, it is this feature which makes herringbone gearing suitable for a transmission. The three numbers of teeth at three different pitches reduce the vibration to an absolute minimum and produce the effective silence. Any other known principle would bring about noise and vibration, even if it were practical.

In Reo's new transmission the constant-mesh gears align themselves automatically because the countershaft gear cluster is free to slide slightly lengthwise on the stationary countershaft. The second gear train keeps in perfect alignment in a similar manner because the second gear mainshaft is free to slide lengthwise for a few thousandths of an inch.

The mainshaft second gear, except when engaged, rotates continuously on the mainshaft on hardened and ground steel-to-steel surfaces which are lubricated simply but positively by a radial hole running from the center of one of the many "vees" formed between each two pairs of teeth on the mainshaft second gear. Lubrication for the second gear is trapped at the base of this particular vee and is forced through the hole to the wearing surface as the second gear rotates, the lubrication occurring once every revolution.

In order to slow the engine down to the point where it is exceedingly smooth, a standard rear axle ratio of 4.07 to 1 is used in preference to the previous standard of 4.42 to 1. This also makes the engine quiet up to 70 miles per hour and above. Simultaneously, however, there is sufficient power to provide lively acceleration and good hill-climbing ability on high.

An unusual performance is apparent in the silent second gear. This gear provides a reduction of .167 to 1, making the overall reduction of 6.68 to 1. This ratio is low enough to give exceptional acceleration and yet high enough to allow a maximum speed of approximately 50 miles per hour.

A TRADE TREND WITH PUBLIC SIGNIFICANCE

The present pronounced trend towards Durant among prominent automobile dealers possesses tremendous public significance. It is the best possible endorsement of Durant products and policies. It reveals a widespread and enthusiastic confidence in the executives who now control Durant Motors, Inc. And it emphasizes Durant's competitive leadership in offering a time-tested Six under a thousand dollars, equipped with 4-Forward Speeds.

A CAR FOR ALL — MARMON-BUILT

The papers are full of talk about new models. Values are revised. Comparisons are changed . . . In the $1000 field one car still stands out—the Roosevelt. This one car, of all cars at this price, is really different. The Roosevelt alone is an eight. The Roosevelt alone has this one great feature which characterizes practically every high priced car on the market. The Roosevelt alone brings Straight-Eight smoothness, power and durability—yet adds not one cent of premium to the purchase price or to the upkeep costs . . . By all comparisons the Roosevelt is still the newest, most advanced $1000 automobile in the world today—bar none.

Smart transportation for the thrifty

The Roosevelt (illustrated) is a full-sized, five-passenger, four-door Sedan (not a coach or an improvised coupe). It is priced at $995, factory, group equipment extra—the lowest price ever quoted by any manufacturer on a straight-eight automobile.

Dynamometer Test Insures Performance of Dodge Engines

How Dodge Brothers make sure of smooth and dependable engine performance can be readily appreciated by a visit to the engine test room of the company where rows of engines running on blocks are tested for hours before they are placed in the chassis of new cars.

In this test, a motor operates under the watchful eyes of men trained to observe the slightest deviation from perfect performance. The engines are powered by refined gas from city mains as a precaution against carbon formations. A central oil clarifier forces a constant flow of pure oil through the lubricating system of the motor.

After a protracted run under its own power, each engine is connected to a dynamometer and electrical meters so the energy developed can be measured and translated into horsepower.

'Royal Master' Tire Announced By U. S. Rubber

As the final step in bringing out a completely new line of tires, the United States Rubber Company has announced the introduction of the "Royal Master," a new tire in the so-called super-quality field.

This latest product of the company is designed to meet the need for a tire that will last for practically the lifetime of the car. Rubber has been matted where wear is heaviest, and in the building of the carcass and in the tread configuration, the aim of these power generated at various speeds. Dials also indicate generator charging rate, oil pressure and revolutions per minute from successful idling to high speed.

Engines failing to pass the rigid standards set by Dodge Brothers engineers are rejected and returned for corrections. Those proving their fitness under such tests are carried on conveyors to the final assembly lines where they are dropped into the chassis of the Dodge Brothers New Six and Senior Six cars.

Only by these tests are assured the smoothness, flexibility and quietness which every owner has a right to expect from the engine of his new car. Guesswork is eliminated by these rigid standards applied to all engines, so every completed car rolls off the assembly line as mechanically perfect as it is possible to build it.

engineers was to construct a tire capable of unusually high mileage.

Just as style is a leading factor in the design of automobiles, so appearance has been stressed in the Royal Master. The large sidewall markings with the company name which have appeared on tires since the earliest days of the industry are replaced, on the Royal Master, with a crest emblazoned on the dark sidewall and the name of the tire in small white letters less than a half-inch high.

Introduction of this new type of tire brings the number of passenger car tire styles manufactured by the United States Rubber Company to five: The recently announced United States Royal heavy duty; the United States Royal regular; the United States Peerless; and the new, inexpensive Traxion tire.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

THE LAME, THE HALT AND THE BLIND

A recent ruling in the State of Oregon may well make every motorist give extraordinary thought to safety driving. Don't always expect the person in front of your car to hop spry out of your way when you blow the horn. He may be blind! He may be deaf! He may be lame! And if he is, it is no negligence on his part to be there unattended. In fact he has as much right to the road as you have.

The Supreme Court of Oregon has recently made such a ruling and the admonition and explanation carried with it is most excellent. In making the ruling authorities in Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana and Massachusetts were quoted.

The Supreme Court of Oregon said:

"You are instructed that the blind and the halt have as much right to the use of the streets in the city of Portland, Ore., as those who have possession of their faculties, and it is not negligence as a matter of law for a blind person to walk unattended, either without a companion or a cane, on a public street. "Those who drive automobiles on the streets of a city, and who observe, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence ought to know, that a pedestrian is blind, must use care commensurate with the danger involved. It will not do to drive on under such circumstances and assume that one thus deprived of sight will jump the right way. The automobile should be stopped."

"No person or class of persons has an exclusive right to the use of the streets. Public thoroughfares are for the beggar on his crutches as well as the millionaire in his limousine. Neither is it the policy of the law to discriminate against those who suffer physical infirmity. The blind and the halt may use the streets without being guilty of negligence if, in so doing, they exercise that degree of care which an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under the same circumstances."

Body Designers Show Interest In New Willys-Knight '66'

Automobile body designers of both custom and standard production cars are showing a marked interest in the new Willys-Knight Great Six which is now being shown throughout the

OVERLAND DECLARES PREFERRED DIVIDEND

Toledo, Ohio, September 21.—The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock of the Willys-Overland Company was declared here today by the board of directors. The dividend payment totals $278,185.25 on the 158,963 shares of outstanding preferred, payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 16.

The directors expressed gratification over the wide public acceptance of the new Willys-Knight Great Six, recently introduced. Sales of the new model, they said, with thousands of unfilled dealer orders on the books for immediate delivery, have necessitated maximum production.

Although the design of these new cars is not radical and keeps well within the bounds of refinement, yet the completeness of each detail is seen as a marked advance of previous body types.

For example, a side view of the Great Six sedan shows that the straight horizontal lines have been almost completely eliminated. This has been accomplished through the treatment of the belt moldings which curve up at the front and rear, blending nicely into the window frames. This is further accentuated by a curved moulding near the base of the body panels, which sweeps upward over the cowl and then curves forward again to terminate in a point on the center line of the hood. The forward portion of this line produces the effect of great hood length. This treatment of the moulding is chiefly responsible for the carefully placed color combinations.

This new conception of outstanding style is carried also into the interiors which are marked by unusual refinements. The hardware is of dull copper, which is a distinct relief from the highly polished nickel finishings so generally employed, and is in perfect harmony with the rich upholstery fabrics.

The new type of instrument board is a high point in the decoration of the interior. All of the instruments and buttons are compactly grouped within a square dull copper panel, the design being entirely original.

In these striking models nothing has been left undone to make them not alone the outstanding product of Willys-Overland history, but to embrace a new standard of quality and style that would have a tendency to antedate previous conceptions of motor car design.

The new Great Six line is comprised of a five-passenger sedan, sport roadster with a roomy and comfortable rumble seat in the rear, coupe and five-passenger coupe.

Two-Mile Line Of Cars Sold By Four Salesmen

Four retail salesmen, whose combined deliveries of 679 new Oakland and Pontiac Sixes during the year ended July 31 would form a closely packed single line of cars nearly two miles long, were entertained at Detroit and Pontiac, Mich., last week by factory executives of the Oakland Motor Car Company in recognition of their outstanding achievement.

The guests were the four leading salesmen of the company's retail organization who by virtue of their sales records, had been chosen national officers of the Oakland Fifty-Two Car Club. The president of the club is J. G. Hiney, Erie, Pa., who sold 197 cars. A. W. Aldrich, Cleveland, who sold 164 cars, is vice president, and F. W. Fenton, San Francisco, and A. G. Liles, Philadelphia, with sales of 159 cars each, are respectively secretary and treasurer.

Only those salesmen who sold and delivered 52 or more new Oakland and Pontiac Sixes during the year which ended July 31 are eligible to membership. Nearly 700 men qualified. Each year new national officers will be chosen on the basis of individual sales records.

A. R. Glancy, president of the Oakland Motor Car Company, was host to the visitors at a luncheon in the executive dining room at the Oakland factory. Besides the guests of honor, others attending the luncheon were W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales; W. B. Sawyer and W. E. Fellows, assistant general sales managers; Hugh Higginbotham and H. E. Mahaffey, eastern and western sales managers, respectively; C. S. McElwain, acting advertising manager; W. M. Chamberlin, sales promotion manager; W. L. Shaffner, manager of fleet sales; James S. O'Rourke, manager of parts and service; M. L. Bus used car manager; W. H. Loudon, assistant to sales manager; B. H. Anibal, vice president in charge of engineering; Gordon LeFebvre, vice president in charge of operations; C. O. Miller, director of purchases, and C. B. Stiffler, comptroller.

The two-day program of entertainment also included trips through the Oakland-Pontiac factories and the Fisher body plants at Pontiac, a visit to the General Motors proving ground near Milford, Mich.; golf and dinner at the Bloomfield Hills Country Club, and a theater party at Detroit.

BOY SCOUT DRUM CORPS PRACTICING FOR NEW EVENTS

Regular weekly meetings for practice and instruction have been resumed under the leadership of F. E. Davenport, director of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps by the Boy Scout Drum and Bugle Corps, which meets every Tuesday evening at 7 p. m. at the Legion hall in the Bolling Jones building on Ivy street. The Scouts are learning some new marches in preparation for the South-eastern fair next month.

Troops not at present represented in the drum corps, are being urged to appoint their representatives as soon as possible.

RIVER VIEW INN TO REMAIN OPEN DURING WINTER

Announcement is made that the River View Inn, operated by E. J. McGill, on the Marietta road at Bolton bridge, will remain open during the winter months. The place has gained a wide reputation for its clean and fresh, river fish dinners, and has a new dining room that will accommodate 30 persons and may be engaged for private parties. A feature of the inn is that live fish are kept in tanks for one to choose from, and may be prepared in any manner desired. As an indication of the popularity enjoyed by the place, several organizations are holding regular meetings there.

Top Quality
Top Performance
Top Value!

Only a few dollars more per month than the lowest-priced cars on the market to own and enjoy this fine and beautiful Essex Super-Six.

That little difference buys the top quality, top performance and top value of this field. Instead of a lesser car you have the unquestioned leader. Instead of a compromise you have the best—a big Super-Six, fine appearance, rich upholstery and appointment, outstanding performance and riding ease, and foremost reliability of the year. For any car at all comparable to Essex you must pay a much higher price.

Those who want roomy cars—room for five adults in the five-passenger cars—find that kind of generous roominess. There is plenty of head and leg room, too. There is unexpected quality in the hardware and upholstery. Such fineness is not limited to things that can be seen. The seat springs are made to give lasting service. The doors and windows are made to give protection and stay in condition.

These are but a few of the 76 advantages you will find in Essex the Challenger. Go inspect the others and let your judgment of values decide.

Dodge Starts Helicopter Test

This helicopter, designed by a Detroit for vertical ascent, recently underwent preliminary tests near the motor city. After being towed into position by a Dodge Brothers Six sedan, several experiments were conducted with the machine. The lifting force is provided with the umbrella-shaped propeller at the top.

FAMOUS AVIATOR BUYS CORD FRONT DRIVE

Disdane Costes, famous French aviator who attempted to set a speed record across the Atlantic but was driven back at the Azores islands by storms, has ordered a Cord front drive car for immediate delivery at his home in Paris.

Costes is rebuilding his plane in which he made his unsuccessful flight and plans to attempt a new record late this year or early in the spring, advises from Paris say.

DeSoto Dealers Report Large Sales Increase

"With shipments of De Soto cars totaling 8,163 during the month of August, and with dealers in all sections of the country placing orders for more cars to meet the demand in their localities, De Soto officials are enthusiastically speeding up production to take care of unfilled orders on hand," according to L. G. Peed, sales manager of the De Soto Motor Corporation, division of Chrysler Motors.

"Shipments of De Soto cars in August," Mr. Peed says, "showed an increase of 3,100 cars, 61 per cent over the month of August last year, and what is even more remarkable, an increase of 1,200 cars over the monthly average of the first seven months of this year."

"The unusual demand for the De Soto six is proof of the fact that the motor buying public is becoming more and more experienced in the finer points of automobile construction and that it appreciates real quality in a car of low price," he continued.

"Although the De Soto six is a car of moderate price, quality has not been sacrificed in its manufacture. The low prices is due to its association with Chrysler Motors with its enormous purchasing power, its facilities for engineering research and its huge manufacturing properties—all of which are conducive to enormous savings in time and money. It is our policy to pass these savings on to the purchaser in the form of more value for the money he expends."

"Although the De Soto Motor Corporation is only slightly over one year old," Mr. Peed continued, "there are approximately 2,000 dealers selling De Soto cars throughout the country. The growth of this dealer organization and the growth of the De Soto Motor Corporation as a whole has been one of the outstanding feats of the automobile industry."

"The De Soto Motor Corporation was organized and started production in August, 1928. Since then there have been manufactured and shipped over 90,000 De Soto sixes—a record not only for De Soto but for the entire industry."

2 TROLLEY LINES TO RESUME ROUTES ON FORSYTH TODAY

Rebuilding car tracks on Forsyth street from Luckie street to Peachtree street has just been completed by the Georgia Power Company and street cars temporarily rerouted on account of construction work will resume their regular runs this morning.

The northbound tracks were rebuilt, new rails, ties and ballast being used.

Cars affected by the rerouting were on the Ponce de Leon-Walker West View line and the Buckhead-Oglethorpe line.

RIGHT TO CLOSE RAILWAY AGENCIES SOUGHT BY ROADS

Applications to close several railway agencies will be heard Tuesday by the Georgia public service commission. The order includes the application of the Central Telephone Company, of Ashburn, for approval of rates and stock.

The Atlanta & West Point Railroad Company is seeking authority to close the station at Trimble, discontinue the agent and make the point a passing station. The Southern Railway is asking for authority to abandon the depot building and facilities and discontinue publication of Occurrence as a passing point.

The Southern also is asking for authority to close the agencies at Lithia Springs and Waco in favor of nearby points.

SPARK PLUG TIPS

After cleaning spark plugs or installing new ones be sure they are screwed in the cylinders securely. A plug insecurely installed will cause leakage, an AC Spark Plug Company engineering bulletin says. This means that the hot gases escape between the plug and the cylinder threads, causing the plug to run too hot, resulting in loss of power.

For efficient car operation spark plugs must be screwed tightly in the cylinders.

Five Cord Cars To Be Displayed At Paris Salon

Auburn, Ind., September 21.—Auburn will have one of the most outstanding displays at the Paris annual salon, October 3-13, that any American car manufacturer has ever shown. Five Cord front drive cars, ten or more Auburns, including four convertible models and four Duesenbergs will be shown.

First announcement of the new Cord front drive automobile was made in Paris September 20 by Messrs. Jomini & Martet, distributors for Cord and Auburn cars in Paris. Already 14 orders have been placed for these cars and Messrs. Jomini & Martet estimate that more than a hundred sales will be made by December 1.

Auburn export sales show a 60 per cent increase over last year and it is estimated that this percentage will be greatly increased by the first of January.

The annual continental Auburn dealers' banquet will be held at Paris during the salon week and distributors and dealers from all parts of Europe and northern Africa will be attending. It is expected that fully 60 dealers will be present.

R. S. Wiley, export manager for Auburn, has left for Paris and will be present for the salon.

Public Shows Unusual Interest In Foundry of Studebaker Plant

In Studebaker's 11 1/2-acre foundry at South Bend, Ind., one of the largest grey iron foundries in the world, scores of skilled workmen may be seen daily making "sand pies" or cores for the 500 or more castings which go into the Studebaker engine, according to Alfred Thompson, sales manager for the Yarbrough Motor Co., Studebaker-Erskine dealer here.

"The sight never fails to arouse unusual interest among the hundreds of visitors who make the trip through Studebaker plants. The operation of turning out these cores looks about as easy as the mud pie making of childhood days, yet the job is one which requires a high degree of skill and accuracy."

"Most casting calls for a sand 'core' and sand 'mould.' The 'core' and 'mould' may be likened to the core and skin of an apple, the 'core' representing the hollow portions of the finished casting, the 'mould' the outer husk or covering."

"Several types of sand are used in their making. An especially fine grade free from clay for the 'core,' a coarser, darker clay bonded quality for the 'mould.' Huge quantities of this sand are stored in giant bins with a capacity of 325 carloads, the sand being routed to the various 'core' and 'mould' tables through wide funnels. Core sand is mixed with an oil and resin compound to give it the necessary consistency for baking. Mould sand is mixed with water and clay and does not have to be baked. The 'core' maker fills a core box with his hands, then inverts the box and removes it."

"The result is a perfect reproduction of the inside surfaces of the die, conforming accurately to every ridge, convolution or corrugation. In the case of very large 'cores,' a machine appropriately called a 'sand slinger' is used to force the sand into the dies. The 'cores' are then baked in ovens under high temperature to a brick-like hardness."

"Moulds are made in the same fashion except that they are built up in two parts—top and bottom—but are not baked. As in the 'core,' the sand is forced into the two halves of the die under pressure, the baked 'cores' inserted in their respective positions and the two halves of the 'mould' placed together. A hollow space then exists between the 'mould' and the 'core,' into which the metal is poured. When the metal has cooled and set, both 'mould' and 'core' are removed, leaving the casting ready for machining. While it is possible to reclaim the sand used in cores and moulds, Studebaker finds it inadvisable. The close proximity of the Lake Michigan dunes to South Bend gives Studebaker an ample supply of fine, clean sand at exceedingly low cost. Studebaker's foundry has a daily capacity of 600 tons of castings."

Whippet Braking System Provides Ample Safety

A braking system on four wheels that assures the maximum of protection and safety for quick stops has been built into both the Whippet four and six-cylinder cars, according to engineers of the Willys-Overland Company, who considered ample braking power equally as vital as quick acceleration in these cars.

In the case of the Whippet six, a two-shoe brake which is the latest Bendix development is used and gives a much better braking condition than even that which prevailed in the previous model, the engineers say. This, of course, was particularly necessary in view of the increase in weight of the car, it was pointed out.

Investigations conducted by insurance men and traffic experts interested have revealed that the biggest cause of accidents in many cities is the lack of quick braking power in automobiles. This is frequently due to the braking system in the Whippet has been tested under all kinds of conditions and the distances measured to make certain that they could be brought to an immediate stop. Other tests were made to determine the rate of deceleration to find how rapidly the braking power of a throttled-down motor is effective in stopping the Whippet with the use of the brakes from various speeds.

In fact, the engineers point out that braking power is one of the most important elements in the riding comfort of a car, along with sufficient springing and ease of steering.

New Endurance.

Madison Wis., September 31.—(P) Having set a new endurance record of its own, the Wisconsin legislature adjourned sine die yesterday. It had been in session 254 days, or nearly nine months. The longest previous session was seven months. Governor Kohler, in a message to members, complimented them on their constructive work.

Marmon Official To Attend International Automobile Show

Frank L. Hamblly, export manager of the Marmon Motor Car Company, has sailed to attend this year's international automobile show in London and Paris, at which the Roosevelt Eight will be prominently displayed before the motor car leaders of England and the continent.

Mr. Hamblly is an annual visitor at these exhibits as well as to every other outstanding automobile show the world over. His visit to London and Paris this season, however, holds greater importance than usual, since the Marmon-Roosevelt line has gained a strong position abroad and sales have increased rapidly in practically every country where automobiles are the accepted mode of everyday travel.

Always appreciative of advanced steps in engineering, European motorists were quick to voice their approval of the Roosevelt straight-eight, which, even abroad, is priced considerably lower than any other car of its type. As a consequence, the Roosevelt is expected to attract more of the usual attention granted American-made cars at the international displays.

The first of the two great foreign exhibits to be attended by Mr. Hamblly is the Paris salon, October 3 to 13. He will then travel to London for the annual Olympia show, the British counterpart of the French display.

Before returning to this country, Mr. Hamblly will visit a number of Marmon-Roosevelt distributors in European countries. He will arrive back for the United States in interest for the New York automobile show in January, an event that is attended each year by many foreign automobile dealers.

Aside from establishing an enviable European sales record this year, Marmon-built cars won signal prominence a short time ago through their participation in the automobile elegance contest at Bois Boulogne, Paris. In this event, a Marmon 68 roadster, Marmon 68 standard coupe and Roosevelt collapsible coupe were awarded prizes for their appearance, beauty of line and appointments, and their showing attracted the greatest interest only in France but in other European countries as well.

FAMOUS STRING BAND WILL PLAY THIS WEEK

The Old Tray String band from Gainesville, headed by W. G. Keith, and including fiddles, banjos and a "bull fiddle" as tall as the six-foot mountaineer who scrapes it, will furnish dance music for the fiddlers' convention to be held at the Auditorium Friday and Saturday.

That announcement came Saturday from Professor Aleck Smart, secretary of the Georgia Old Fiddlers' Association, who is in charge of the program for the two nights and matinee sessions. It is customary to hold an old-fashioned square dance after the championship contest on Saturday night, with an expert calling the figures, and the Old Tray ensemble, named for the mountain under whose shadow they live, was engaged largely for that purpose.

Entries for the fiddling champion of Georgia have been pouring in, according to Professor Smart, and it is probable that an elimination contest will be necessary to weed out the weaker musicians.

Gid Tanner, of Dacula, whose photograph records are nationally famous, will defend his title in Georgia champion, while the former titleholders, Fiddlin' John Carson, A. A. Graves and Earl Johnson, will be among the contenders. Besides these, 40 or more fiddlers who have won successes in their own home counties will undertake to fiddle their way to fame and fortune.

Several thousand persons from Atlanta and the surrounding counties usually flock to the Auditorium for these annual sessions of the Old Fiddlers' Association, and it is expected that the big hall will be filled Friday and Saturday nights.

POLICE HOLD MAN IN COPPER THEFT

Augusta, Ga., Sept. 21.—(P)—W. E. Mitchell, alleged member of a gang that stole a large quantity of copper wire from the Broad River Development company at Columbia, S. C., has been placed under arrest here and is being held for South Carolina authorities. Officers here said the man has confessed his part of the theft.

GEORGIA PEACH MEN TO GATHER IN MACON

Manning S. Yeomans, state entomologist, Saturday announced that W. C. Bewley, general manager of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange, had called a meeting of peach growers from all sections of the state to be held at Macon Tuesday morning.

Experts will discuss peach insect and disease control and will conduct open forums for the growers, with questions invited, Mr. Yeomans said.

Among speakers, discussing the subjects indicated, will be: Dr. John W. Roberts, of the United States bureau of plant industry, "Bacteriosis and 'Brown Rot'"; Dr. Lee M. Hutchins, director of the United States peach disease laboratory at Fort Valley, "Phony Peach Disease"; William F. Turner, in charge of "phony" peach eradication for the United States bureau of plant industry, "The Eradication Campaign"; Charles H. Alden, in charge of the Georgia field insect laboratory at Cornelia, "Oriental Peach Moth" and "Curculion"; Oliver I. Snapp, of the United States bureau of entomology, same subjects treated by Mr. Alden; Dr. H. P. Stuckey, director of the Georgia experiment station, "Fertilizer and Cover Crops," and Manning S. Yeomans, state entomologist, "Fungicides and Insecticides."

TWO PETS LOST, ORPHANS' HOME CHILDREN FORLORN

A bleakness that wasn't altogether a matter of autumn chill in the air had settled over the receiving home of the Georgia Children's Home Society in Ormewood Park Saturday.

The 35 children there were desolate because no news had come from their two beloved pets, a black pony and a tan donkey which strayed away three days ago and of which nothing has been heard.

Miss Emma Hardcastle, superintendent of the society, has sought the truant in the city and by personal tours through the neighborhood, but to no avail, and the waits of the home were a little more forlorn about it Saturday.

And Now, the All-Adjustable Car

By photographing the front and back seats in their forward and rear-most positions, this phantom view was obtained to show the wide range of seat adjustment in the newly introduced Graham-Paige 1930 models. In addition, the steering wheel may be raised or lowered and the brake and clutch pedals may be set near or far. Because these five variables allow the car to be fitted exactly to suit the needs of any driver, the new Graham-Paige has already become known as the first all-adjustable automobile.

Custom beauty, sleeve-valve power IN THE COMPLETE WILLYS-KNIGHT LINE

FROM THE LOW-PRICED "70-B" TO THE LUXURIOUS NEW GREAT SIX . . . . .

THE beauty and style of the new Willys-Knight, the power, smoothness and economy of the patented double sleeve-valve engine, are now available in two lines of ultra-modern motor cars—the popular low-priced "70-B" and the distinctively beautiful Great Six.

The brilliant success of the new style Willys-Knight "70-B" proves its value as the largest, smartest and most powerful Knight-engined car ever offered at such a low cost.

The new Willys-Knight Great Six is distinguished by an individuality that reveals itself in a higher order of design, luxury and performance. Some of the car's many advanced mechanical features are: Bijur one-shot lubrication system, heavier seven-bearing crankshaft, extra-strong and rigid frame, full internal four-wheel brakes, manual heat control and automatic radiator shutters.

Book Reviews in Tabloid

The Devil and the Deep Sea. The new mystery romance by Elizabeth Jordan, is another best seller.

Henry James said that she was the most delightful woman he met during his last visit to America. When she was told of this tribute, Miss Jordan shook her head. "Somebody has misquoted him," she said. "But he will probably remember me, for we laughed a great deal together."

She was educated in a convent and graduated at the age of seventeen, then coming to New York and getting a job as a newspaper woman.

For three years she was assistant to Arthur Brisbane, then editor of the New York World. Later her superior sense of humor enabled her to edit simultaneously the comic supplement and the editorial forum of the Sunday World—the most frivolous and the most dignified departments of the newspaper.

She reached the zenith of a distinguished career as editor of Harper's Bazar. Then her ambition to write for the best of her and she embarked on the successful literary career during which she has written such immensely popular novels as "The Lady of Penzance," "Black Butterflies," "Miss Nobody from Nowhere," and now "The Devil and the Deep Sea."

A few years ago a motion picture company paid her an annual salary of $25,000 to write stories for the screen.

Miss Jordan spends her winters in her New York apartment on Gramercy park and her summers in some, Spread Wings, in the Hampshire hills of Massachusetts. However, she is just as likely as not to decide today to leave her home and steamship leaving New York at midnight tomorrow. She has done it before and she will do it again.

Such sudden decisions of sweeping proportions have for her all the zest of adventure. They are, she will tell you, characteristic of the "higher learning." (The Century Company, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Joyous Conspirator. By George Gibbs. Author of "The Yellow Dove," "The Bolted Door," etc. The reader of these popular books will thoroughly enjoy the story he has woven around Joyce Bayly and a tall Englishman, who meet for the first time on the streets of Paris.

The author is a nature story teller. He twists and turns his plots until the reader feels like he is traveling rather rapidly over and around mountains roads. He creates amusing characters, indulges in sparkling conversation, all of which makes his stories readable and delightful. (J. I. Sears & Co., New York.)

Kink, or Colonel Gore's Case. A mystery story. By Lynn Brock, author of "The Deductions of Colonel Gore," etc. Readers of detective stories know "Colonel Gore." His reputation is widespread, but when he was called in to solve the "Kink" with its series of mysteries he was at first both surprised and baffled.

The background of the story is laid in post-war England, and there are several well known characters who are prominent in society. They play a most important part, even the ex-prime minister, and Lord Inland find themselves in this fascinating tangle. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

One Crystal and a Mother. By Elton DuPont Taylor. The scene of the story is in modern Chicago. It is founded on the ridiculous, illogical and rapid pace at which this great metropolis is moving. The author in his story has caught the sparkling wit and laughter that is needed in the spinning of a tale which has for its location a city that never sleeps, never grows tired, but continues unceasingly day and night the colorful parade of humanity.

Both amusing and ridiculous are the episodes told in this book. There are many adventures that will hold the reader's attention to the last page. There are many kinds of characters in this amazing story which is really a comedy of modern life.

Ford Madox Ford says that the author's story is absolutely astounding. "It should have an enormous success in the United States. Her knowledge of life comes only second to her talent." (Harper & Bros., New York.)

RECEIVED.

Ten to One in Sweden. By David Sylvanus. Susan Erzt, who is among the most popular fiction writers, says of it: "I enjoyed reading this book. The author's pictures of Sweden are quite unforgettable." Appleton's Book.

The Under Dog. By Dr. Mariano Anzola. The author has written a novel on the Mexican revolution. (Brentano's, New York.)

Plum Bun. By Jessie Redmon Fauset. (Author of "There is Confusion.") (Stokes, New York.)

Birds Got to Fly. By Ruth Blodgett. The story of a New York girl, who, having married into the well-known Porter family, is transported to New England, where she finds her new relatives "all new people but still the same old ways." (Harcourt, Brace & Co.)

On the Anvil. By L. I. Crawford. The story of a young man of mixed German and English blood who grows up in Chile and reaches manhood at the outbreak of the World War. The difficult problem of national feelings, when personal affections are involved, tells the story. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

Crooks of the Waldorf. The story of Joe Smith, master detective. A former Scotland Yard man, he is well known not only to the guests of the Waldorf, but to all the good places in the city of New York. (Macaulay's Book.)

Written on Water. By Francis de Miomandre. Translated by William A. Drake. Woodstock by Clement Sereau. This novel, winner of the Prix Goncourt, has won praise from the European press. (Brentano's, New York.)

PROSE AND POETRY.

Brooks-Bright Prize Essays—1929. With an introduction by John H. Finley. Of New York Times. This little book contains six best among more than 87,000 essays written by the schools of 42 states on the subject of "Armaments." (The Brooks-Bright Foundation, 42 Madison Avenue, New York.)

The Chaff of Life. By George Otis Schoonhoven. The author's light and witty verse will be remembered by those who read his columns in the New York newspapers. "He belonged to that small group of artists who leave the often heavy load of American poetry." (Harold Vinal, Publisher, New York.)

Science and Happiness. The rules laid down in the Science of Happiness have one superlative attribute, they work. By Whitney Gott. Among the author's sound sayings are the following: "Happiness is the one thing humanity cannot endure." "Life is a continued process of adjustment." "Concern yourself with what concerns you, essentials." Here are no lessons for one who persists in self-deception. (Duke Publishing Co., Kansas City.)

Clouded Radiance. By Louis William. These poems are the shifted lights and shadows of many moods—they hold something of the beauty and force of life, something also of its troubling meanings. (Harold Vinal, Publisher.)

Thirty Years of Verse Making. By Joseph Dana Miller. This collection of verse is introduced by the author's preface.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Humanizing Education. By Samuel D. Schmalhausen. The author discusses the bankruptcy of education: Education has become the great enemy of enlightenment; teachers have become mere salesmen of the intellectual life; school systems are the "higher learning"; "the order of the day is 'Quick Lunch Counter' education! Our so-called education is a study in farce and utility."

A most interesting subject is "What all our School System." He quotes from Mark Twain: "First God made idiots. That was for practice. Then he made Boards of Education." The author writes in this book to impress the truth about education, society and about human nature. (The New Education Publishing Co., New York City.)

The Shopping Book. A Manual for Housewives. By William H. Baldwin. The author of this most interesting and instructive book received his inspiration from the retail merchants of every city. The managers have with time and money, and with a scatter of literature throughout the country made the selling proposition as attractive as a first class romance so that the housewives have very little trouble or effort now in buying from the furnishing of a house to laying in the groceries after the pantry has been finished and furnished.

Mr. Baldwin realizing the need of a book to assist the housewife in her purpose to give her all the information needed on the more important items in shopping with a number of suggestions, simple but practical, that will enable her to shop intelligently as well as economically. He tells you how to get your money's worth. This is a new reference book, but one that will give you good service. (The MacMillan Co., New York and Atlanta.)

An American Banker. By Jesse Rainsford Sprague, author of "The Making of a Merchant," etc. This book contains the story of one man's life from the time he was simply a messenger in a small town bank until he was elevated to the presidency of a great New York financial institution. It could be called a novel. It is as interesting as the best fiction. But while it is the experience of one man there may be others who have had similar experiences. More than 50 bankers the United States furnished the material for the story which is a real experience. Men and women, too, will enjoy its facts, its humor and the slow but sure evolution of the hero. (William Morrow and Co., New York.)

Life and Labor in the Old South. By Ulrich B. Phillips. 372 pages. (Boston, Little Brown & Company, $4.00.) By William M. Robinson, Jr. "Ulrich B. Phillips has no rival in the field of the antebellum South. A lifetime of solid research and a mellow, tender, yet discriminating and not at all sentimental love for the land of the South have made his book a masterpiece." This is the verdict of the Springfield Republican—as, indeed, it must be of all those who have the good fortune to read this book, which is at the same time so informative and so delightful.

Dr. Phillips' approach is not only that of the historian but of the philosopher as well. While portraying the old South he shows how and why its life and labor took its peculiar bent. He shows himself not only conversant with customs and manners but with geology and climatology. Yet he becomes didactic. He has a piquancy of style and a dry sense of humor which prevent that.

Let us begin by discussing the water for that, the chief agency in making the South distinctive," opens the book. "It fostered the cultivation of the staple crops, which promoted the plantation system, which brought the importation of negroes, which not only gave rise to chattel slavery but created a lasting race problem. These led to controversy and regional rivalry for power, which produced apprehensive reactions and culminated in a stroke for independence. Thus we have the house that Jack built, otherwise known for some years as the Confederate States of America."

The South is nowhere tropical except at the tip of Florida, for it has winters with killing frosts. The characteristic feature is merely the length of the summers. The growing season lasts on an average six months at Baltimore, Louisville and St. Louis; seven at Norfolk, Atlanta and Memphis; eight at Columbia, Montgomery and Dallas; and nine at Charleston, New Orleans and Galveston. The climate has fostered the cultivation of tobacco in the first zone, cotton in the second and third, and rice and sugar cane in the fourth.

"The summer is not merely long, but bakingly hot, with temperatures ranging rather steadily in the 80s and 90s of the Fahrenheit scale. In the droughts which occur at some time nearly every summer, when the sky is like brass and the ground is like iron, all shallow-rooted vegetation is parched. Thus the country in general is not well adapted to grass or to the small grain except rice, to which water is artificially supplied. The deficit of grass curtails cattle raising, and this restricts the supply of barnyard manure and makes it hard to maintain the fertility of the fields. So we are not for its own particular staples, the South would hardly prosper from agriculture in competition with the great grasslands of the world."

"Gastronomic resources is fostered by the climate, to stimulate appetites, which the hot weather makes languid. Indeed, most of the habits of life are affected. In the tedious heat work is hard, idleness is easy; speech is likely to be slow and somewhat stuffed; manners are soft; and except when tempers are hot, the trend is toward easy-going practices even among healthy people."

Dr. Phillips is delightfully fond of cause and effect. He concerns himself with every economic province of the South. He neglects none of the various components of the population, beginning with the redskins and including the entire range from the Anglo-Saxons in Virginia to the Latins in the trans-Mississippi. His economic explanation of the English migrations to America is a refreshing departure from the sentimental stuff of Puritan and Cavalier. He traces the westward movement from the Atlantic coast; and shows how culture came into the bluegrass of Kentucky and how the English remained in the mountains. Transportation played as important a part in the development of the several regions, and this theme calls forth a chapter on ox carts and horses and on railroads and steamboats.

Broad as is Dr. Phillips' canvas it is not a panorama of generalities but rather a series of slow motion pictures. He pursues the case method; and by long and prolonged searches and researches in old diaries, letters, plantation journals and records, newspapers and magazines, he has projected before our eyes a succession of individual masters, plain people, overseers, slaves and free negroes, each at his daily life and ticketed with his own name and address. The picture presents a sufficient variety—the good and the bad—in the several classes to satisfy the reader with the thoroughness and honesty of this cinema.

The work is well indexed. The illustrations are happily chosen, with full descriptive notes. There is an economic map of the South of 1860 folded in the back of the book, which by an ingenious system of colored lines and dots shows the railroads, navigable rivers, diversity of crops, and the outlines of the natural provinces.

To one who is familiar with Dr. Phillips' American Negro History, published in 1918, and his History of Transportation in the Eastern Cotton Belt to 1860, published in 1908, the charm and vigor of Life and Labor in the Old South seems as a matter of course. This work stands out almost unique in its treatment of a subject which has been so generally the subject of sentiment on the one hand and prejudice on the other. Its preeminence was recognized by the judges for Little Brown & Company, who awarded him the prize of $2,500 in the American history contest which closed last October.

Dr. Phillips was born at LaGrange, Ga., in 1857. He received his A.B. degree in 1887 and A.M. in 1890. He has occupied a chair in American history at the University of Wisconsin, Tulane university and the University of Michigan. He leaves Ann Arbor this fall for a tour of the world under the $100,000 Kaifu travel fellowship for 1929-30.

BOOKS ON RELIGION.

The Mystical Life of Jesus. By H. Spencer Lewis, F. R. C. Ph. D. Emperor of the Rosicrucian Order of North America. (The Rosicrucian Press, San Jose, Cal.)

In Time of Sorrow. A book of consolation. By Charles Lewis Slattery, author, "Why Men Pray." The author of this little book is at present Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts and acts as general chairman of the church congress in the United States. It tells the reader of what his author, a true man of obvious sincerity, understanding of spirit, and Christian refinement of perception, has been saying to the men and women, face to face, as he has been going in and out among the sorrowing for more than a quarter of a century. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

The Immaculate Perception. By Jean Parke. With seven pictures of the Christ by the author. It is timeless and undenominational. (Harold Vinal, publisher.)

MAGAZINES FOR SEPTEMBER.

The Book League Monthly for this month presents "The Love of the Foolish Angel," with picture of the author, Miss Helen Beauchamp. The publication of this story in Great Britain was one of the noteworthy events of the season," says Hugh Walpole. This magazine contains other articles by well-known writers and it has become one of the most popular on our list.

The American Review. This is another magazine—that has a popular list of contributors among them being Edward Dean Sullivan, Dean William Ralph Inge, Robert Y. Davis, Louise Worthington and others. Edna Yost discusses "The Intelligent Sex," "Let's Export Prosperity." This interesting article is by Benjamin A. Javits, who discusses "How can increasing foreign trade, greater prosperity and world peace be realized better than by establishing American standards of living abroad?"

Scribner's for September is an unusually interesting issue for the mid-summer. The cover decoration is by Rockwell Kent. Frontispiece, drawn and engraved by L. L. Balcom; Waldo Frank writes of Charles Chaplin, the idol of millions, moves through life as through his pictures, a lonely figure.

Current History for this month from the front cover to the last is entertaining, interesting and instructive. The writers are among the ablest, the subjects among the latest, and most up-to-date and the reader will find everything to interest among the writers being Raymond Moley, professor of Columbia law, Columbia university; A. S. Cortesi, Rome correspondent, New York Times, of Rome, Italy; Ernest Gruening, Remsen Crawford and others.

LITERARY VACATIONS.

This is the time of the year when authors drift back from their vacations to their typewriters. Harpers reveal that:

"Homer E. Hays, whose novel, 'Coney Island,' will be published October 2, passed his vacation 'up on Cape Cod to study the cod in its native habitat.' Rex Beach stayed in New York City because he finds a pent house cooler than most summer resorts—and because it is 'always possible to use the hose and pruning shears for exercise.' Nevertheless, Mr. Beach took a short trout fishing trip with Ray Lowry and Roy Howard to the Quebec at the invitation of the Canadian National Railways.

Fannie Hurst rented a large white house at Windrose Farm, Hudson, New York, where she began work on a novel to succeed her latest one, 'Fire and Ten.' Here her three dogs and her yellow Persian cat came at will over the country-side.

As usual, Inez Haynes Irwin and her husband, Will Irwin, passed their vacations in Scituate, Mass. They also took a motor trip through Canada. O. E. Rolvaag went fishing in the woods of Minnesota, because he is 'by trade a fisherman.' As for some of the Harper poets—Joseph Auslander passed his vacation at Monticello, New York, Edna St. Vincent Millay at her farm near New York, Arthur Guiterman in the southern wing of the old Canfield home in Arlington, Va., lent to him by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. And Edward Davidson, after a lecture tour, also repaired to Arlington.

Psychology Lecture.

Telepathy and mental radio will be the subject of a psychology lecture at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the mahogany room at the Ansley hotel by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby. The public is hereby invited.

Studebaker Adds Pikes Peak Record To Long List

By winning the Penrose trophy in the 11th annual Pikes Peak hill climb, Labor day, and establishing a new record of 21 minutes 45 and 2-5 seconds for the course, a strictly stock model Studebaker President Eight added another great record to its imposing list of 11 world, 23 international and 145 American stock car records. Studebaker now holds more official stock car records than all other American manufacturers combined. Insert, Glen Shultz, who drove the President to its latest triumph.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

BY JESSE O. THOMAS.

At the night school session of Booker T. Washington High school there has been a new course added known as the home maker's course. This is the first time such a course has been conducted by any one of our night schools and its purpose is to increase the knowledge, efficiency and domestic equipment of housewives, all persons employed as domestic and personal servants, all teachers and all persons interested in the newer and better methods of home making.

The course includes the proper planning, preparation and serving of meals, sewing, renovation or making over of garments, proper feeding and general care of children, the correct way to answer the telephone and receive messages by telephone or otherwise, how to clean and arrange furniture in a home so as to present the most artistic appearance, and the most cheerful atmosphere, how to take stains out of garments and in general, to make a home the one place where each member of the household will find pleasure and contentment in spending leisure hours.

The Georgia public service commission held a meeting in the senate chamber Friday morning, at which time all persons interested in the proposed rules and regulations governing motor carriers were invited. The purpose of this public hearing was to give the owners and operators of buses and motor cars, the stockholders or legal representatives a chance to register their approval or to offer constructive criticism and suggestions of the tentative rules so that they might be amended or changed before being put into execution as of October 1, 1929.

Upwards of 175 persons, 95 percent of whom were men, attended this hearing and many suggestions were made and criticisms offered. There are some 73 rules that are being promulgated for the purpose of regulating motor carrier transportation in the state of Georgia. Rules 14 and 31 made specific reference to the consideration of passengers. The latter rule is as follows:

"Rule 31. Motor carriers may confine themselves to carrying either white or colored passengers or they may provide different motor vehicles for carrying white and colored passengers; and they may carry white and colored passengers in the same vehicle."

One of the understudies of the commission's office stated that there had been five lawyers, each of whom had given a different interpretation as to the meaning of Rule 31. It is optional with the company as to whom it shall haul so long as it complies with the other prescribed regulations of the public service commission.

FORD PROMOTES FOUR BRANCH MEN

Three Atlantans Advance to Department Heads at Local Plant.

P. P. Pratt, assistant manager of the Atlanta plant of the Ford Motor Company, announces four promotions of importance that have been made at the branch recently in recognition of faithful and satisfactory service on the part of Atlanta men.

In three instances the men affected advance to heads of departments and the other becomes an assistant manager. Mr. Pratt speaks very highly of the ability of these men and their worth in the organization, which have been proved in numerous instances.

The changes are: W. C. Mogford becomes wholesale manager. Formerly he occupied the position of assistant manager in this department.

J. N. Thomas is advanced to service manager. He formerly held the position of service traveling representative.

T. F. Wilson, formerly assistant chief clerk, is promoted to chief clerk. Mr. Mogford and Mr. Wilson have been with the company for many years and both started at the bottom. Mr. Pratt says Mr. Thomas and Mr. Davis having entered the employ of the company in more recent years, the former as service traveling representative and the latter in charge of the advertising department.

W. V. Davis, formerly car distributor, is promoted to assistant wholesale manager.

W. C. Mogford becomes wholesale manager. Formerly he occupied the position of assistant manager in this department.

Private Detective Fined for Operating Without License

C. W. Scarborough, 40, of 339 Washington street, appeared before Recorder A. W. Callaway Saturday charged with operating as a private detective without a permit. He was fined $50 and costs and permitted to go free after an agreement with the judge, whereby no charges of fraud would be pressed provided that Scarborough, made restitution for money said to have been obtained from several clients.

MEMMINGER TO SPEAK Secretaries' Club Will Hear Minister Monday.

Dr. Willis W. Memminger, pastor of All Saints church, will address the Secretaries' Club of Atlanta at its monthly luncheon at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Atlanta Athletic Club. His subject will be "Today."

WEST END THEATER HOST TO VETERANS

Monday will be veteran's day at the West End theater, corner Lee and Gordon streets. All veterans of the War Between the States will be guests of Manager L. L. Shields to witness the showing for the last time in Atlanta of "The Birth of a Nation," which will be the feature attraction at the theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Twenty-five veterans from the Confederate home on Grady avenue, will be taken to the theater in several Black and White taxicabs, which have been donated for the occasion by A. L. Belle Isle, president, while all other veterans in the city who come to the theater will be allowed to enter free as guests of Mr. Shields.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION OFFERS OVER

$9,000.00 IN PRIZES

NO WORDS TO BUILD—NO DICTIONARY TO REFER TO $7,540.00 IN CASH PRIZES
AND A
$1,500.00 BUICK SEDAN
---in a simple, fascinating competition

Your Answer

Any man, woman, boy or girl, resident of Georgia or adjoining states, who is not an employee of The Atlanta Constitution, or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer. When you have made your selection of the twins, send in your answer.

The whole family may cooperate in this competition, but only one prize will be awarded a member of a family, or any one of a group outside of the family where two or more have been working together for a prize in any one prize group; but one person may win one prize in each of the three prize groups and also have a chance of winning the $1,500.00 automobile for promptness. This contest is conducted by The Atlanta Constitution.

Clues

At first glance all the young ladies look alike; but you are asked to find the Twins that are clothed exactly alike. Now then: upon closer examination you will find a difference in their wearing apparel. Have they all earrings or necklaces? How about their coats and hats? Are they trimmed the same? Some have bands on the brim and crowns, others have not. Maybe the difference is just the buttonhole in the lapel of the coat.

Just look closely—make sure that you have found the Twins, then send in your answer. Somebody who finds the right twins is going to win a big cash prize of $500.00, $1,000.00, or $2,500.00—or better still, $4,000.00 cash and a $1,500.00 Buick automobile for promptness, a total of $5,500.00—and that some one may be and can be you if you will only try.

Can You Find the Twins?

START LOOKING NOW!

This is one of the greatest arrays of cash prizes that has ever been offered in an Atlanta Constitution puzzle contest.

Prize group 3 has ten cash prizes, first prize $500.00. Prize group 2 has ten cash prizes, first prize $1,000.00. Prize group 1 has ten cash prizes, first prize $2,500.00.

No, they are not all Twins! Two and only two are identical, and are the Twins you are asked to find. Can you? To be sure, the 18 pictures all look alike; but look closer. How about their hats? They are not all clothed the same. Many young ladies look alike, and the 18 on this page look like each other, but the Twins are dressed exactly the same, like all real twins. Read the clues.

It takes real care and cleverness to point out the difference and find the two real Twins, because two and only two are identically the same.

Think of it—you can win as much as $4,000.00 cash and a $1,500.00 Buick four-door sedan! Yes, sir! $7,540.00 in cash prizes may be won in this interesting puzzle contest plus the $1,500.00 Buick sedan, and these prizes will be awarded after the close of the contest, November 12th, 1929.

Just think of it! You have a chance to win $500.00, or $1,000.00, or $2,500.00. You also have a chance to win all three or a total of $4,000.00 cash plus a $1,500.00 Buick sedan for promptness. It will pay you to be prompt.

100 POINTS WINS FIRST PRIZE

You will be given 90 points for finding the twins. Immediately on receipt of your correct answer to the twins we will send you particulars for winning the big cash prizes and the magnificent $1,500.00 Buick sedan for promptness. No words to build—no dictionary to refer to. Everyone has an equal chance. All you will have to do then is to earn the final ten points required for the first cash prize or prizes.

REMEMBER: THE TWINS ARE EXACT DUPLICATES!

When you have found the twins, write the numbers in the coupon below, fill in your name and complete address and mail at once to the Puzzle Manager, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. In the event of ties in the final awarding, prizes of equal value will be given.

10 CASH PRIZES IN EACH PRIZE GROUP

You can win first prize in list 3, first prize in list 2, first prize in list 1, or you can win one prize in each prize group, but no more than one prize in a group. This gives you a chance of winning all of the first cash prizes, or a total of $4,000.00 cash plus a magnificent $1,500.00 four-door Buick sedan, fully equipped with spotlight, for promptness.

Picture These by Thinking of Expensive Fall Dresses, for These Are Faithful Copies

We were determined to secure the most astounding values we'd ever had in dresses for High's 47th Anniversary Sale, and we spared ourselves no pains . . . but we got them!

These dresses are really sensational. We chose dresses from expensive lines and had them copied . . . faithfully! The result is . . . well! you'll just have to see for yourself to appreciate them.

Not only do they follow, but they actually predict fashions for fall! Waistlines cleverly marked or intriguingly omitted in a princess sweep; tightly modeled to just above the knees where they burst into exciting flares; whimsical hemlines; engaging necklines. New? . . . why they're the very breath of newness!

One, Two and Three-Piece Styles in Delectable Street, Afternoon, Dinner and Evening Models in All Sizes. Many Original Samples Included.

*A Dress for Every Woman
Sizes 14 to 20 and 36 to 50*

Their Styling, Their Furs and Their Materials Tell How Much the Anniversary Saved on These

Coats that are authentic fashion reports on what fashionable women will wear for fall! Every pleat and flare and band whispers volumes to the knowing woman of their sophistication!

Not only does their styling proclaim their value, but their quality as well. The coatings are soft and luxurious. The lining of heavy all-silk crepe back satin and their furs of selected pelts.

We want to impress this fact . . . these are not $47 coats. They're coats for the woman who always pays a much higher price . . . an opportunity to save brought to her by High's 47th Anniversary! It's an offering of which we're very proud, for it cannot help but make many new feminine friends for High's.

They Show Their Style-Rightness by Their Abrupt Flaring, Adroit Circular Insets and Side Drapery. Also Straight Wrap-Around Models.

Hand Bags Agree With Ensemble

Fashion demands that every part of the fall costume go well with every other part. That means that no longer does the same bag go out with Milady's every costume. She must own two, three or maybe a half dozen so that her entire costume may fashionably agree, no matter what she wears. Therefore, bags are more interesting, and in a greater variety of styles and colors than ever before.

HIGH'S FURNITURE STORE

FIGURE THIS ONE OUT!—Marie Skotnicki, of Warsaw, recently started talking to herself in a foreign tongue which no one could understand. Linguists have pronounced the language pure Gaelic, and scientists are greatly interested in the case. Marie's parents speak only Polish and she has never spoken to a foreigner. (Herbert)

THE GIRL FROM "GUNTOWN"—Ability to handle a "shootin' iron" isn't confined to Chicago's well-known gunmen. Miss Mary Ward, 19, of that town scored 395 hits out of a possible 400 at the Camp Perry meet. She is the first woman ever to compete in an international match.

GIVING HIS FRIEND A LIFT—This giant, Doberman Pinscher, owned by A. L. Sanderlin, of Seattle, has saved a number of human lives due to his uncanny ability to find persons lost in the forests of Washington state.

DIDN'T DO SO GOOD—This tandem-winged plane, a new idea in aviation, hit a fence and landed on its nose when it attempted to take off for its trial flight.

(Left)

ENTERS COLLEGE AT FIFTEEN—Miss Mary Snow Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Johnson, of Atlanta, who entered the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, recently, at the age of fifteen. She is a graduate of Fulton High school, where she was a leading debater. (Lomax)

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY POUNDS OF WATERMELON—The biggest melon grown in Arkansas this season was presented to Chairman Legge (right), of the Federal Farm Loan Board at Washington, by Representative Parks and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas.

(Right)

WHAT THE WELL-DRESSED NICARAGUAN WILL WEAR—A "forty gallon" hat brought back from Nicaragua by Miss Helen Stay, of Cleveland. It takes the place of a sun-shade.

FINE VOICE IN CASE OF FIRE—J. Cox, town crier of Burnham, England, who is reported to have a voice that can be heard seven miles. (International) BROUGHT COMMUNISM INTO THE SOUTH—These three women, Vera Buch, Sophia Melvin and Amy Schlechter, under indictment at Gastonia, N. C., for the murder of a police chief, are said to be the leaders of the rabid reds in that town.

(Right)

CONNIE MACK'S DAUGHTER TAKES THE VEIL—Miss Mary Cornelius McGillicuddy, 18-year-old daughter of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, who has started life as a novice in the Order of St. Joseph at Chestnut Hills, Pa.

PRIDE OF THE GOLDEN WEST—Miss Evelyn Smith, girl rancher of Pomona, Cal., has become nationally known as a breeder of Palomino horses.

FROM ATLANTA TO DECATUR IN ONE MINUTE—That was the speed made by Captain A. H. Orlebar of the British Schneider Cup team when he flew 368.8 miles an hour, or better than six miles a minute, at Calshot, England. This is the fastest any human has ever travelled. (Associated Press)

COMPETITION FOR THE IRISH—The crack 100 per cent Jewish police force of Tel Aviv, Palestine, distinguished itself as a defense unit during recent Arab attacks. (International)

SAVES SUNKEN SUB SAILORS—A new device for lifting men from sunken submarines to the surface has proven successful in tests held at New London, Conn.

NO WONDER BOBBY LOST!—Just study this photo of the Pebble Beach (Cal.) golf course where the national amateur tournament was staged. Incidentally the huge gallery in the picture is following Bobby.

TITLE PLUS—When Princess de Braganza, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rhineland Stewart, was bequeathed $25,000,000 she became the richest titled woman in America.

"BIG GUN AND SWORD MAN"—William B. Shearer, of New York, says "patriotic" motives inspired him to oppose disarmament plans at Geneva. However, his suits against shipbuilding concerns for back pay have caused President Hoover to start an investigation.

CIVIC CENTER NEAR COMPLETION—The beautiful new Atlanta city hall on Washington street as it looks today. (J. T. Holloway)

ALL SET FOR THE FALL RAINS—Anita Page at the Capitol in "The Hollywood Revue" doesn't seem to enjoy the prospects of a rainy season.

"THE STORY OF THE PEARL"—One of the most beautiful settings ever designed is this one from "The Hollywood Revue of 1929," the super movie production at the Capitol this week.

REAL ROMANCE—Lydell Peck, Oakland, Cal., lawyer, never missed a picture in which Janet Gaynor was starred. Now she's Mrs. Peck. They were married recently in Hollywood.

(Left) CHIC, EH?—Leonore Ulrich looks exceedingly snappy in this new tam of green wool. Designers say they will be quite the thing this winter.

(Left) TWO GIRLS HAVE ONE BIRTHDAY EVERY FOUR YEARS—Leo and Theo Bogant, leap year twins, having been born February 29, 1916. They were awarded a cup at the recent twins roundup at Albany, Ore. (International)

"KIDS' PARTY"—Lieutenant C. H. Jaffee and Mrs. Carl Seals carried off the prizes as the "cutest kids" at the party.

Men o' War at Play

Army officers, their families and guests, are shown in some of the interesting costumes worn at the "Kids' Party" held recently at Fort McPherson.

"JUST KIDS"—Mrs. E. A. Higgins, Miss Helen Caffey, Mrs. R. T. Edwards, Mrs. T. S. Timberman and Lieutenant T. S. Timberman at the Fort McPherson "Kids' Party."

BUMPER CROP—Members of the Boys' Cotton Club, of Tifton, Ga., are shown bringing in their crop of 41 bales. It brought $3,618. (Associated Press)

(Right) MODERN MADONNA—This beautiful camera study is of Mrs. Grady Osborne Terrell, and son, Billy, of Hendersonville, N. C. She is a former Atlantan, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Thatcher, of Marietta. (Culberson)

(Left) KNOWS HER HISTORY—Miss Cecil Evelyn Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Jones, of Scotland, Ga., who won the Oconee chapter (D. A. R.) cup for excellence in history.

THE IDEAL WEDDING COSTUME—Ann Harding, Broadway favorite, is shown wearing the latest creation for brides. She will appear at the Rialto this week in "Paris Bound."

(Right) LIVING TOMB—More than a thousand years old is this mighty oak in Noebdenitz, Germany. The hollow trunk forms the tomb of the poet Hans von Thunmel, who was buried in it in an upright position on March 1, 1824.

"NICE BABY"—Captain H. F. Teate, is the "lame" in the picture and Colonel Henry A. Ripley is the "four-year-old."

Georgia From the Air—No. 4. Moultrie.

This is the fourth of a series of photographs showing Georgia cities as they appear from the air. The Constitution in conjunction with the T. A. T. Flying Service recently dispatched a plane on a 1,200-mile flight around the state for the purpose of securing this interesting set of air views to be published weekly in the gravure section. The photo above is of Moultrie, Ga.

A Sandwich at Peacock Alley

A sandwich at Peacock Alley is not only an inviting bit of elegance, but is really a meal in itself. For we have elevated the sandwich to a place of distinction, and are honestly convinced that in quality and in sheer, tempting goodness, its equal is to be found nowhere else in all the South.

Try a sandwich at Peacock Alley today. See for yourself what skill and artistry can do with meat—and cheese—and all the tempting trimmings... And whether you are in our dining room, on the terrace or in the privacy of your own car—service is always prompt and always courteous.

Look years younger

Sallow, Dinky Skin made Lovely—Coarse Pores become Fine—It corrects oily skin, heals eruptions and dissolves blackheads

The newest discovery in beauty culture is that creamed magnesia is much better for the complexion than any soap or cleansing cream. It beautifies the skin instantly, in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with creamed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face. It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture almost as if by magic. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. You will marvel at the effect of your first five-minute facial massage. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger. It's marvelous how magnesia dissolves blackheads, clears eruptions and corrects oily skin.

And because it is so mild, mothers use it instead of soap to bathe infants. It certainly is a blessing as a face wash for fine, sensitive skins that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. Being greaseless, it cannot fatten the face or grow hair. It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, mallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons. Test it on those clogged nose pores that stand out so boldly. Let it whiten your neck. It will also keep your hands soft and white. Until recently, creamed magnesia was used only by New York doctors' wives, and nurses. But now the large druggists everywhere find it hard to keep enough on hand to supply the demand. To get genuine creamed magnesia, ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. Remember, five minutes works wonders. So, get your magnesia today and look lovely tonight. It costs almost nothing to try. It's Guaranteed!

No More Ugly Nose Pores

DENTON'S CREMED Facial Magnesia

Makes poor skin lovely—keeps fine skin fine

NOTE: Do not hesitate to try this marvelous skin treatment at once. Thousands of delighted women have written they could not believe anything so simple could be so wonderful. But they were convinced when they saw so many friends suddenly get lovely complexions.

The 26th Keeps Rendezvous

A Thousand Members of the Twenty-sixth Division Will Sail Next Saturday for France to Dedicate a Chapel Erected at Belleau in Memory of Their Heroic Dead.

BY T. HOWARD KELLY.

Author of "Why General Edwards Was Sent Home," "Dream Lights," "What Outfit, Buddy?" Etc.

HE Yanks are coming! Once again the magic word has gone forth and mounted to the stars. Today, somewhere in our own A. E. F.'s high heaven, the Yankee division's battle dead are marching down the skies to meet us, their living brothers, at the shrine we have raised to proclaim and pledge "Faith Everlasting Strong, a Memory to Live as Long."

We do not go back to this rendezvous as helmeted, gas masked, combat packed warriors with fixed bayonets, rolling caissons, rumbling guns and fighting cries. Survivors of the great crusade in which thousands of our buddies gave their all, we go as understanding pilgrims with a sacred sense of tribute in our hearts and memories that shall never pass from us.

For we of the old shock troop 26th Division from New England embark at Boston next Saturday 1,000 strong to dedicate our memorial church at Belleau, France. There have we, the spared, built a church. Not a new and shining temple, but a little church, centuries old, which has risen Phoenix-like from ruin. In the mellow light of day an abode of prayer and grateful thanksgiving. Our restitution. In the still hours of night the haunt of helmeted, khaki spirit forms. Our memorial to the voiceless marchers who are coming down the skies to this, their latest triumph over death.

General Edwards—the man who put soul in soldier and whose creed was, "Fight for your men and they will fight for you"—organized, trained and commanded us at Armageddon. Eleven years ago next month, when the armistice was just around the corner, Edwards was suddenly relieved from command and sent back, in the midst of brilliant battle success, to train green troops that would never be needed. At that moment the feeling was general that these orders were designed to deprive him cruelly of the honor and credit of marching home with his veteran troops.

On the night of October 22, 1918, under Edwards, we stood between Verdun and the ancient enemy. Since 1914 Verdun's citadel had rocked bloody but unbowed in the Terror's cockpit to keep a brave pledge. Once more the watchwords, "They shall not pass," were on the lips of men. This time, strong young men in olive drab from a nation across the sea repeated them and leaned against the flame.

Back on their throbbing rails, American fourteen-inch naval cannon were booming.

In positions far ahead of these monster railroad guns, heavy and light field artillery was in action. In the front trenches Yankee rifles and machine guns poured a cataract of crackling crescendo into this savage clamor that was swelled again by the German barrages and the sharp takata-taka of Maxims.

Our division had come into this inferno north of Verdun, October 18, with orders to take the heights of the Meuse river. It was strategically necessary for the enemy to command these hills which arose before us like gun-studded citadels of death. So necessary was it that the German high command had ordered its veteran troops to hold them to the death.

The enemy held stubbornly and died bravely. Although our men were cut down like fine young trees in their springtime, they drove forward tortuously for four days. During this time, these outfits, straight from the bells of Chateau-Thierry and t. Mihiel, went forward gallantly with everything they had. Step by step the New Englanders drove the Germans up the slopes.

On the night of October 22, the division, in advancing attack night and day since the 18th, was repulsing German counter attacks while reorganizing its depleted and bullet-whittled regiments for a new attack scheduled for the next day, October 23. As the preparations for this attack went ahead, commanding officers anxiously asked if another attack were possible by their worn and exhausted men. Did they have enough push left in them for another assault?

Their questions were destined to be quickly answered in the most dramatic and gallant fashion.

In the meantime General Edwards and his staff were going over plans for the new attack. He has told me how pride and agony gripped his heart. Pride for the proved gallantry of his men; agony at the thought of having to send them in, spent and frayed.

On the banners of his regiments there were glorious names that have since become household words in America. Apremont, Seicheprey, Torcy, Belleau, Etrépilly Plateau (where the wheat turned poppy-red with Yankee blood. It was here that General Degoutte, of the French Sixth Army, said, "The 26th Division alone made possible the advance of the whole Sixth Army.") St. Mihiel. The Meuse-Argonne. Edwards, who was destined to become known as "the general who got a raw deal," and whose whole division was never to receive the full official credit and praise its war record merited—was often accused of fighting too much for his men. In this particular instance Edwards made no effort to have his men relieved, although he knew the new attack was asking a great deal of them. It was a question of straining to achieve a vital objective, and he was determined to make the sacrifices involved.

Edwards' loyalty was of the head as well as of the heart. He made recommendations. He was a professional soldier with almost forty years of continuous military service behind him. He was a West Pointer to his finger tips. But in dealing with volunteer and civilian troops he believed in tempering militarism with humanness because he understood the psychology of the American man at war.

Nothing official had been done against General Edwards prior to October 22. However, many things had been inferred. He was said to have disobeyed battle orders beyond Chateau-Thierry. But General Degoutte saw fit to congratulate Edwards for the brilliant results obtained by his "disobedience."

As our general plotted movements on his maps, he was hiding a burning personal grief. Only a few days before, his daughter, an enlisted army nurse, who had been on the way to France, had been buried in Arlington. His wife was convalescing from a serious operation, and his personal devoted aide, Captain Nat Simpkins, had just died from gas and pneumonia. With all this to bow him down, he remained the soldier, the commander.

Suddenly there was a stabbing sound as of machine gun fire on the road to his headquarters. A motorcycle courier! He brought an order relieving the general, and a letter explaining that he was to proceed to America to train troops!

Edwards' heart must have broken then and there. Here was the end for him—after all his victories. Sent home alone, his command given to another to reap the final glory. Soldier that he was, Clarence R. Edwards accepted his fate with military stoicism. Not a word of complaint from him. But curses from his own generals down to his privates.

"To hell with the Twenty-sixth! I'm done," a colonel said, tears of anger in his eyes. "You are the 26th Division, and when you are gone it is gone."

"Listen," the general said, "I have tried to put a soul in this division. Nothing would be more fatal to me than to have something happen that would warrant my enemies—if I have any—saying that I had built up a personal machine. If you want to show your loyalty to me, carry on with the new commander with the same devotion."

Zero hour had been set for early next morning. Here was a spent and depleted division about to go into action without the leadership of the one officer it needed most of all in such a critical attack. A new general was on the way to take command.

General Claudel, the French corps commander, took a swift hand in proceedings. He officially refused to let the attack orders stand unless Edwards led his men. The latter was told to remain in charge until the assault had been delivered successfully.

Colonel Bearss, commanding the Fifty-first, which was to be the attacking infantry brigade, wrote his famous assault order in his dugout. Runners took copies out to every platoon, and the news that it was the last time the men would go over under Edwards spread like wildfire. Colonel Bearss' order ended:

"Every officer, non-commissioned officer and man is depended upon to uphold the glorious traditions of the Twenty-sixth Division. All hell's flying artillery cannot stop this brigade when it has once got into action."

Up in their death holes on the slopes of the writhing Meuse, our cold, hungry, tired doughboys fixed their bayonets and looked very grim. Some of them were worn out. Some were ill. Some were on the verge of shell-shock from the strain. There were even wounded men in the forming waves who refused to miss this last chance to go over for the Old Man, and send him off in a blaze of devotion and glory.

At the command these men flung off their exhaustion, their nerves, their pains; and something of barbaric exaltation swept over them. They went up against the enemy and, as Bearss prophesied, "all hell's flying artillery" couldn't stop them. The division gallantly took all of its objectives.

Edwards issued his farewell order on October 24, and left us that night.

This is no moment or place for controversy. The general himself would not have it so. This is the story of fine faith among soldiers, a story that proves we cherish the memories and the heroic deeds of our buddies who gave their lives on the field of honor when civilization hung in the balance. Out of the brutality and sordidness of a modern war that raged ten years ago has come this free, beautiful desire to perpetuate the deeds of our slain brothers. And here in our coming pilgrimage lies the fulfillment of this desire, the fulfillment of our unspoken promise that we would always keep faith with our battle.

Ralph Eastman, of Boston, secretary-treasurer of the Yankee Division Overseas Memorial Committee, has drawn for me a vivid picture of our Memorial Church's history, and why Belleau, France, was selected as the place to build our shrine. I will try to give you this picture in his own way.

Mr. Eastman knew Belleau, a village of the Marne valley country, in the summer of 1908. Little, then, did its people dream of what was to come.

Here the crops were ripening in the warm sun—cattle grazed contentedly—the evening chimes rang out—peace lay upon this land. A decade passes.

It is July 17, 1918, and the guns are going furiously along the battle line that curves through the Valley of the Marne like a crimson crescent. Here, along this crescent we are to meet the Terror near Belleau. Battle orders are delivered.

Headquarters First Army Corps, A. E. F.
July 17, 1918.

P. O. No. 9—

1. J day is the 18th of July.
2. H hour is 4:35 o'clock.

Headquarters 26th Division, A. E. F.
July 18, 1918.

P. O. No. 51—

- 6 Objective of the 26th Division.
- First objective: Torcy-Belleau-Givry Railroad from Givry to Bouresches (exclusive).

8. At H hour the barrage will be laid down along the front of the attack. No artillery firing will take place prior to H hour.

Thus the peaceful land of ten years before became the theater of historic conflict. The name of Belleau, unknown through the centuries, was shortly to be on the lips of millions. The dawn crept through the shattered woods like a great gray ghost.

The command was forward! The Yankee division's battle cry—"Let's go!"—rang out above the barrage. Attacking shoulder to shoulder with the little men in horizon blue the brown-clad hosts from across the sea won back the homeland of their comrades de guerre.

At about 8:30 o'clock the 26th Division attained its objectives in Belleau and Givry and was abreast of the line. . . .

Another night has fallen in Belleau. Its shattered walls secrete and partly protect our men. They have made it theirs and staked their claim to glory. The evening chimes are the drumming guns; sunset's light is the green and baleful flicker of star shells. The flaming poppies are not the only crimson spots in the wheat fields. America's blood hallows this soil.

Twenty-sixth Division—Victory, Honor and Fame eternal—mangled bodies in the wheat—blank files in the broken columns. What else do the star shells reveal? Crumbled and leaning walls of a little church, centuries old, a shattered altar, a village restored to its people, but a village of stark and smoking ruins.

Armageddon roars away from Belleau like a raging, receding sea. Months later the Terror ends. Armistice. . . .

A few years afterward two former Yankee division soldiers stop before the American cemetery at Belleau. Before them gleam "the crosses, row on row." Each marks the final sleep of a Yankee lad. Beneath many of these crosses lie those who bore familiar names. Against the blue of the sky flutters the Stars and Stripes, their vigilant guardian.

For the two veterans of the 26th this is the end of the trial. Their comrades beneath the white crosses won this soil by the valor of their arms. Here should their memorial be!

Beyond the cemetery, in Belleau, the village priest of old welcomes the two Yankee veterans. The hand of war still lies heavily upon M. le Cure's church. A crumbling ruin, the little edifice, centuries old, still gapes roofless to heaven.

Here, then, in this land hallowed by our sacrifice, in this village shattered by our guns, in the shadow of their crosses that mark our brothers' graves, came the vision of our memorial.

26TH KEEPS—Three

Granite columns and sculptured forms eloquent of martial pride already dotted the landscape of American achievement. Were we to add another symbol of our share of victory? No. Ours was the opportunity for a nobler tribute. Here could we erect a shrine to serve the highest aspirations of the living and to honor sacred memories of our dead.

This very thing the Yankee Division has done by raising a Memorial Church fund of near $100,000 from its former officers and men who have not let this opportunity to honor their buddies go by. On October 10, a thousand of these men who have kept faith will gather in the rebuilt church at Belleau.

Headed by General Edwards, General John Sherburne, General E. L. Logan, General Charles Cole, other ranking officers of the old 26th and their chaplains, these men will join with such distinguished Frenchmen as M. Poincare, M. Clemenceau, Marshal Petain, General Gouraud, Degoutte, Claudel and others in a solemn ceremony of dedication. Once more the hand of America will clasp the hand of France in a profound moment of sympathy and understanding, blessed by memories to be shared forever. And surely, if ever the battle dead know new glory and feel new triumph over Death, ours will, as they hear their names called in their Memorial Church and see the familiar faces of their spared brothers through the veil eternal.

After impressive services to be conducted by the Bishop of Soissons our church will be reverently committed to the people of Belleau. For them a house of rest and worship. For us a shrine of memories, a rendezvous of faith. For our battle dead a place to come in the still of night and whisper that it was something to have fought and died by comrades who keep "Faith, Everlasting Strong, a Memory to Live as Long."

"Females Would o' Kept Their Tail to Rock
the Baby With While They Was Cookin'."

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

"If the monkey theory was sensible, I'd believe in it without no proof —an' I've got proof enough when I look at some o' Pa's folks."

"I READ a piece in the paper last night that said everybody except simpletons had learned to believe in evolution, an' if that's so I'm right proud to be a simpleton."

"I'm just simple enough to believe that man has always been just as different from other animals as he is right now."

"This world has been here a long time an' every critter in it has had plenty o' time to lose his tail an' learn to talk, but nary one of 'em except man has ever done more than his pa did, an' I'm just simple enough to believe the crack o' doom will find 'em all just like they are now."

"The evolutionists say it ain't reasonable to believe man was put here like he is because it would o' took a miracle to make him, an' miracles ain't scientific."

"They prefer believin' man is just a high-grade monkey that shed his hair an' tail as he blossomed out, but I'm simple enough to believe it would take just as much of a miracle to make a monkey as it would to make a man."

"And if the monkey grewed out o' somethin' else, an' so on back to the beginnin', there had to be somethin' created to start the thing an' how was it created without a miracle?"

"It ain't no easier to make a bug out o' nothin' than it is to make a man out o' nothin', an' since it took a miracle o' creation to make man in the first place, whether he was a two-legged critter or just a germ, I prefer believin' the miracle made him purty much like he is—only maybe not quite so ornery."

"The monkey theory don't make sense, anyway."

"Evolutionists say the reason animals changed was because they quit usin' certain parts they didn't need no more an' the parts dried up, or else they needed new equipment like wings an' fingers an' just set their minds to it an' developed what they needed."

"That sounds good, but look at the monkey's tail. You couldn't hardly think o' nothin' handier. You could change gears with it without takin' your hands off the steerin' wheel. You could use it to swing a fan while you was sewin'. The city man ridin' a street car could hang on to a strap with it if his arms were full o' bundles. Why, you could use it for somethin' ever' minute o' the day, an' you know good an' well no animal that ever had one would let it dry up an' drop off for want o' use."

"If man ever had a tail, he'd have it yet; and if creatures could develop new parts an' accessories accordin' to their needs, you know man would o' had sense enough long ago to grow a new eye for the back of his head."

"Man's skeleton is kind o' like a monkey's, but it's kind o' like a horse's, too. They're made purty much alike, the same as all automobiles is made purty much alike, because that's the best way to make 'em."

"It's easy to argue when they ain't no way to prove nothin', but scientific theories can't take the place o' common bay-horse sense."

"If the monkey theory was sensible, I'd believe in it without no proof—an' goodness knows I've got proof enough when I look at some o' Pa's folks."

The World's Greatest Enterprise

Highway Engineers Must Bear In Mind Comfort, Beauty and Convenience in Planning and Completing Their Work—Thousand Delegates To Attend International Conference.

BY JOSEPH FRANCIS COLEMAN.

Highway travel constitutes an important subject in our present-day life. Some travel the highways for pleasure. Some for business. Some take to the highway because they lead through the great outdoors and provide the means for physical rejuvenation.

Engineers of this age are building the highways to meet all of these requirements. They wish to provide the shortest overland route between two given points. They wish to give to the traveler all that is possible in scenic beauty and they wish to provide clean, smooth roadway without dust and grime so that the physical assistance given the health seeker will not be offset by a greater peril.

Perhaps, most thought is given to the scenery once a highway is mapped. Nothing is left undone to make that roadway stand out in the mind of those who traverse it. Highway engineers are in a sense landscape gardeners and tax nature for her utmost.

Road engineers add beauty as well as ease to tourist's path. At left is shown a new concrete bridge of striking architectural design which replaces the wooden bridge in Georgia, shown at right.

With the meeting of the international road commission in Paris, in 1928, highways definitely passed from the national to the international stage and plans for their further consideration from this standpoint will be discussed at the meeting of the international road congress of the world in the United States during 1930. One thousand delegates, representing forty-seven countries, will attend this congress at Washington, and will be taken by automobile over practically the entire United States so that opportunity may be had to view our accomplishments in road building.

The interest in highway building is literally worldwide and practically all important countries are evincing an active desire to become informed of the best in every phase of their development. To this end special delegates and commissions are continually making excursions for first-hand study of road activities and problems as encountered in foreign countries.

This desire—you might say necessity—for full knowledge and comprehension of all fundamentals of road building has resulted in the road congresses aforementioned where not only may roads be discussed theoretically from all angles but actual demonstrations may be viewed by the delegates on the ground. Vivid mental pictures and actual photographs can be carried back by each visitor for the better application of its lesson in his own homeland. While the results of his own knowledge and experience can be disseminated throughout the globe by the other delegates in attendance.

It will thus be a great clearing house for exchange of ideas, theories and practical demonstrations between all nations of the world—where instant advantage may be taken of the latest and best in design, construction and maintenance of highways.

Discussions, reports and surveys already are being made of Pan-American highways, particularly relating to connections of the United States with all of Latin America. A grand vision and a striking example of the magnitude of our ambitions in this direction—the accomplishment of which is perhaps not so far distant as we might suspect. It is an enterprise that offers stupendous obstacles which no one realizes more keenly than those actively engaged in its promotion and serves to bring home to us the incredible extent of the highway idea. The scope of it is unmeasurable, the room for growth limitless, the necessity unfailing. It is the world's greatest single enterprise.

The next few decades will see an expansion and growth that will amaze as we watch its sequence unfold before our eyes. The economical benefits, opportunities for travel, an ever-widening trade horizon will have far-reaching effects and influence that will be felt in the daily lives of the least of us. The increased use of materials and equipment will offer stimulation to countless industries and the absorption of labor is sure to be gratefully felt by this sometimes perplexing problem.

The fact that the whole world is awakening to the necessity of good roads and that our own country is naturally looked to as a leader from possessing over half of the world's road mileage and the greatest road building organization in existence, brings a natural desire to know more of the history and growth of an activity which is attracting such favorable worldwide attention.

Our own highway organization, which has so prominently come before the world, has had a quick phenomenal growth extending back comparatively only a few years. In fact, highways, as well as highway organizations, such as we know them today, were scarcely in existence twenty-five years ago.

At that time, 1904, we had listed 2,151,570 miles of road, of which only 153,530, or 7.14 per cent were surfaced with any kind of material whatever. Scarcely a mile of this total surfaced could be termed a satisfactory road compared to present standards. In fact, all but 8,000 miles were of a gravel or stone type. Types of surfacing varied with the geographical location—the type predominating which could be most economically obtained, locally, thus: Maryland and Virginia had some shell obtained from Chesapeake bay; California then, as today, was a leader in oiled roads, having over 2,500 miles; the Carolinas, with Georgia and Florida, led with sand clay, with which they are plentifully supplied, South Carolina being at the top of the heap with over 1,600 miles. While Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana excelled in stone roads from lying in our largest belt of limestone deposits—Kentucky leading with over 8,000 miles. Many states not plentifully supplied with local material had less than 1 per cent of their total mileage surfaced.

Today we are expending annually the sum of $1,300,000,000 on highways. Compare that with the paltry $80,000,000 of 1904, an increase of over 1,500 per cent, or 60 per cent a year. Further, we have invested in highway rolling stock more than 3 per cent of the entire national wealth, or $10,000,000,000. Twenty-five million automobiles have been dumped upon our highways in practically twenty-five years, 19,000,000, or 76 per cent, in the last eleven of these, and it has taken little short of a miracle to provide roads for them.

The problems which have been met and solved by our engineers and highway commissions in providing a roadway for these millions of vehicles are amazing. A constantly increasing number of millions of dollars must be provided yearly and efficient well oiled organizations must be developed for their economical expenditure. The best in highway and bridge design must be determined by our engineers, who must also discover the most satisfactory materials which go into them as well as evolve the specifications governing their proper methods of use.

Highway boards and commissions must work out feasible schemes for financing these enormous projects. There must be systematic propaganda fostered for the education of the general public to the point of voting for money-raising schemes to carry them on.

We have in the 1928 tabulation 3,000,000 miles of highways in our road systems—approximately 300,000 of which are included in the state highway systems and are under vigorous programs of improvement—600,000 miles of our total system have been graded, drained, bridges built and surfaced with materials varying from sand clay to highest type of hard surface. We have 155,000 miles surfaced with a type higher than treated gravel.

We have accomplished all this in spite of the fact that it has been necessary to discard or reconstruct practically every mile of what was a satisfactory highway in 1904, which is to say we practically started at zero.

And in considering our progress, we must take cognizance of the fact that while a mile of first-class road would probably cost less than $7,500 in 1904, it now requires a minimum of $30,000 to produce the same result.

The greatest progress we have made, no doubt, lies in three facts, first: That we have efficiently organized and trained forces for the direction and prosecution of highway work—as exemplified by our federal, state and county highway departments. Second: That definite and logically established systems of roads have been accepted by these agencies of construction. The federal system of 200,000 miles, which crisscrosses our country at strategic points, taking precedent and being the primary system, also receiving the aid of the government, is the skeleton on which our state highway systems are hung and is included in them, while to state systems in turn are attached the two and three-quarter million miles of county highways. Third: That scientific research and experiment with road materials and design are being enthusiastically encouraged and vigorously prosecuted and common standards to which these experiments point as being the best are being accepted and adopted by all road building agencies.

It is to be wondered what mental portrait our foreign visitor will carry back with them from the Washington congress in 1930. It is safe to say it will be a magnificent one. No doubt they will probe deeply and acutely into our successful financing methods, however, it is other more inspiring and exhilarating pictures which will be impressed on their memories. Thousands of miles of beautifully constructed highways will stretch out before them—innumerable gracefully arching bridges, spanning our streams, will call forth study and admiration—the magnitude of our accomplishments—the vastness of our plans—the immensity of our tasks—our unbounded enthusiasm will be the chief components of the picture they will carry home.

Myrtle at 6 A. M.

By Arnold Bennett

IT WAS 5:50 a. m. A lovely, virginal summer morning. The vast London square, with its vast central garden surrounded by vast roads surrounded by vast houses, lay half in sunlight and half in shadow, and the sunlight was gaining every moment over the shadow.

The vast door of No. 91 opened. Mr. Emmarce stepped forth, and at the same moment a vast automobile slid forward from somewhere, silent as a ghost, and stopped in front of him. No other living thing in the whole square. Mr. Emanuel Emmarce, known wherever financial newspapers are read, was a short, stubby man nearer fifty than sixty, who wore his distinguished clothes without distinction, and had thick fingers, full, pink cheeks, and a grayish mustache—but warm, dark, gleaming eyes: eyes of a passionate lover of music, a passionate collector of pictures and of Persian pottery.

Following Mr. Emmarce through the vast door came a slimmer, more elegant person rather younger than Mr. Emmarce—Plai-stow, his "man," carrying a despatch case. "Come along," said Mr. Emmarce, petulant.

"Yes, sir," said Plai-stow, with deferential hostility. It was as if he had said: "Now be careful. You're all nerves because you got up too early. But I got up earlier, and I went to bed later, as I always do. I'm a very good valet, and I could get a new situation any day of the week. So don't go too far."

"My stick?" queried Mr. Emmarce. But, tyrannic, self-made Napoleon though he was, he modified his tone; for he was aware of all that Plai-stow had not said, and he could hardly imagine existence without Plai-stow. He hated servants, especially the males, but they were necessary to him. In the attics and basements of the square slept probably two or three hundred men servants. In Mr. Emmarce's opinion they ought to be slaves, but each year they were growing less and less like slaves. March of democracy.

"Oh!" exclaimed Plai-stow, startled by his own forgetfulness.

He sprang back into the mansion, having first deposited the despatch case. Mr. Emmarce walked to and fro, head bent, hands behind. Napoleonic. He utterly ignored the chauffeur, who utterly ignored his employer. Still, it was a lovely, a heavenly morning.

A taxicab appeared on the horizon of the square. It approached. Mr. Emmarce thought: "That taxi is coming here." He was right. Before it had stopped, he thought: "That taxi contains my daughter." He was right. The taxicab pulled up his flag, and the bell rang. Mr. Emmarce very grimly opened the door of the vehicle and held it open. The moment was dramatic; he felt the drama.

A beautiful young girl within the cab; lightly, fashionably, indecently clad in pale green; a velvet wrap insecure on the bare shoulders; cheeks and lips rosy with rouge; marvelous auburn hair, waved; jewels, richness, perfect expensiveness, the finished product of civilization, as fine as anything the square could show! His girl! He contrasted her with his memory of his sister at her age, pretty but dowdy—because poor, having to count every sixpence. He had created his daughter, and he was proud of his creation. She was one measure of his success in life.

But he was tired, short of sleep; he had risen too early; he was harassed by the anxieties of an imminent negotiation which would require the most delicate and ruthless handling and which, if he was equal to the ordeal, would mean a gain of half a million to him; his nerves were stretched tight, ready to snap. He was annoyed to witness his daughter arriving home in a taxi, and alone. True, he had given an order that his chauffeurs were never to be kept up after 2 a. m. But he threw the order out of his mind. And was there no young man with a limousine eager to escort her to her door? A slash across the face of his family pride.

"Hullo, daddy!"

Myrtle admirably maintained her calmness. No sign of astonishment at the strange encounter. No symptom of curiosity as to the reason for her father's presence on the pavement at that hour, obviously prepared for a journey. He appreciated the equanimity of her demeanor, while condemning her for it. She had character. She was his daughter. She jumped elegantly out of the cab. What youth! What grace! What style! What enchanting arrogance! What a challenge to the democratic contumacy of flunkies. He did not return her greetings.

"Pay the taxi, there's a darling," she said, negligently. "Haven't a cent."

He asked inimically: "What would you have done if I hadn't happened to be here?"

"Don't know."

He banged the door of the taxi, and paid the driver his fare, plus a generous tip. It was his family function to pay. He was the cashier in chief. He was always paying and he was always expected to pay. His family knew nothing and cared nothing of money—where it came from, how it was made. They took money as a matter of course, immense sums of money all the time. But the sums were as naught to him. His expenditure could never match his income. The driver, recognizing a gentleman, and, having no eye for thick fingers, touched his hat and departed.

Mr. Emmarce said: "You're as bad as your mother. How often have you been told never to go out without money?"

"Yes," said Myrtle casually. "How often have I?"

The nerves of Mr. Emmarce snapped.

"You know, my girl," he began bitterly. She was already moving towards the vast open door of the mansion, and with a savage glare he held her gaze as she turned her head at the sound of his voice. "You know, my girl, you ought to be thoroughly ashamed of yourself. Coming home like this at six in the morning after one of your parties! I don't say much, but something must be said some time. Your cocktails and your dancing and your sleeping it off all day! Day after day and night after night. How old are you? Twenty-two. And look at you! What good are you in the world? What sort of an example do you think you're setting? To servants, for instance? It's the goings-on of young people like you that are upsetting the country, making bad blood, giving these labor fellows a stick to beat us with. What answer is there to their criticisms, I should like to know? There's no answer. It isn't as if you hadn't been educated. You've had every chance. And what use have you made of it? What use have you made of it?"

He paused for an answer. She gave no answer.

He thought, "What the hell's that man doing with my walking stick? I shall be late."

Then he continued, "Here am I, just starting out on my day's work, and you're coming home after a night of what I suppose you call pleasure. Do you think anybody respects you? How can anybody respect you? I'm ashamed of you, and I tell you flat." His voice was rising.

Plai-stow appeared, bland and unhurried and hostile, with a walking stick. Plai-stow perceived that trouble was afoot between father and daughter, and he was cynically delighted. He passed across the pavement to the automobile, and deposited the stick. He and the chauffeur exchanged saturnine winks.

Myrtle had not moved. Her body was still turned towards the mansion and her head towards her father. A statue! But still Mr. Emmarce noticed a blush on her neck. He savored it, as he waited for her to speak. She did not speak.

"If I speak to her, she ought to speak to me—if there were forty servants here!" he thought resentfully. He grunted and got rather heavily into the car. Plai-stow shut the door and jumped up by the side of the chauffeur. The car fled away, silent as a ghost. Myrtle had entered the mansion.

Myrtle walked vigorously up the broad, thick piled stairs, on which no footfall was ever audible. She had felt tired in the cab, but now all the sensations of fatigue had left her with extraordinary suddenness.

The house was in a twilight, pierced here and there by bright shafts of sunshine in which millions of motes vibrated. The electric lamp on the first landing patiently awaited its extinction by the earliest descending housemaid. Dust lay on the glass of the show case of the rare falence which stood beneath this lamp. The toilette of the vast mansion would not begin for another hour yet, if as soon. The second landing was lighter than the first, because the curtains of its windows had not been drawn close.

Myrtle hesitated at her mother's bedroom, and then opened the heavy door. An enormous chamber, all curtains, cushions, upholstery, knickknacks; and in a corner the Louis Seize bed, and in the bed her mother, sitting up, and half bent over a spirit lamp surmounted by a gleaming kettle. One electric lamp burned on the table near the kettle. Otherwise the room was in darkness. The two windows were hidden by thick curtains, for the least ray of daylight would wake Mrs. Emmarce, who even in the most favorable circumstances was a most inefficient sleeper. She made tea for herself when she could not sleep, and she was making tea now.

Myrtle looked at her mother. A handsome woman; a handsome wreck; plump; she had a magnificent, impressive frontage, which a cashmere shawl imperfectly covered. Completely unconscious of the invasion of her room, she was putting tea leaves into the teapot with a childlike, ingenuous interest in the operation.

"Mother!"

Mrs. Emmarce gave a start.

"O, my dear! How you frightened me! What's the matter?"

"Nothing's the matter. I thought you'd be—"

"Wait a moment. Wait a moment. I can't hear you."

The tea maker pulled wax out of her ears. Any sound, like any light, would arouse her out of her precarious slumber; the wax enabled her to defy the nocturnal noises of the square.

"Now! What time is it, my pet?"

"O! Six o'clock, more or less."

"Good gracious! I thought it was about two."

Mrs. Emmarce lived in a world of her own, where time was not. None of her wrist watches was ever in order, and she seemed to exercise a magical deprecating influence even on all respectable and reliable clocks within a radius of twenty feet.

"But you're very late, my pet. How is my dear Lady Massulam? Didn't she ask after me?" The tones of Mrs. Emmarce was charmingly querulous. She loved a tiny grievance; she was always crossing the stream before she reached its bank; but she had a kindly heart.

Myrtle, touched by the simplicity of her mother's yearning for affectionate appreciation, invented at once an agreeable reference to her by Lady Massulam. Then, in response to another inquiry, she mentioned the names of a number of Lady Massulam's other guests.

"You surely must be wanting some breakfast, my pet," said Mrs. Emmarce, abruptly starting a new subject as she poured boiling water into the teapot.

"No, thanks, mother. The usual bacon and eggs were served at five o'clock."

"Well," said Mrs. Emmarce. "I don't know how they manage. Our kitchen staff wouldn't do it. Come and sit on the bed, my pet. We'll drink out of the same cup."

"But don't I tell you, mother—"

"And there are plenty of biscuits. I've got a new sort!"

When Mrs. Emmarce had decided to play the role of good Samaritan, nothing would deter her.

Smiling, she beckoned to her daughter, who slowly approached the bed and perched thereon, dropping her cloak. Mrs. Emmarce poured some tea without waiting for it to infuse.

"If you'd only come a tiny bit earlier," she said, "you might have shared your father's sandwiches and tea in his room. He hasn't been gone a minute. I wonder you didn't see him."

"I did," said Myrtle, briefly, harshly.

"Where?"

"On the pavement outside. I suppose he's 'stealing a march' on some one as usual."

"My dear!" Mrs. Emmarce protested mildly against the sarcastic tone.

"Well," said Myrtle. "He was very rude to me."

"Rude?"

"Yes. And in front of Plaistow and Price, too!"

"But Myrtle! Perhaps you weren't very polite to him."

"I was perfectly polite to him, and he snapped my head off. I blushed. I could feel myself blushing. But not for myself! For him!"

"It's very strange," said Mrs. Emmarce, tremulous. "He popped in to see me only a few minutes since, and chatted—said he'd seen my light burning under the door, and he couldn't go without giving me a hug. Why! He actually wanted to make my tea for me, though he was in a hurry. But I wouldn't let him. No. I would not. Nobody could have been more charming. He takes just as much trouble to be nice to me as he did before you were born, my pet. If all husbands were like him the world would be a very different place for wives."

"O, yes," Myrtle retorted, with a hint of a sneer. "We all know he's always charming and all that to you. But not to us. And every one says he's simply terrible when he's doing one of his business deals. Hard as flint. And that's how he is to me—I mean that's how he was this morning. I really came in to tell you about it."

Mrs. Emmarce was gently crying. Myrtle refused to notice the tears. She loved her mother, but in spite of herself and in spite of her judgment. It was true that the Napoleonic financier invariably treated her mother with the most marvelous consideration. But Myrtle cynically suspected that her father's conjugal demeanor was chiefly the result of a deep, feminine, unscrupulous cleverness on the part of her mother, who acted the sensitive simpleton, the ivy to the oak, the weak, foolish woman adoring and trusting the strong, sagacious, loving, leniently masterful man. Myrtle suspected. She was not sure. Had she been sure, she would have scorned her mother, burned her with disdain, loathed her. Womanly wiles were for Myrtle the most despicable form of iniquity. Ugly! She retched at the thought of it.

"Have some tea."

Myrtle shook her head gloomily.

"To please me, my pet. Just one little sip."

Ruthless, her mother's soft insistence!

"O, well!" Myrtle, beaten, took just one little sip. Then, with trembling hand, she returned the cup, and stood away from the bed, towering formidably youthful over the aging weak woman with her sex appeal undiminished by age.

"My dear! My dear!" said Mrs. Emmarce, when Myrtle had finished the tirade in which she repeated, very correctly—save for a few exaggerations due to her youthfulness and a state of high emotion, all her father's remarks. "Of course, I can understand your father. You coming home at six in the morning—he was bound to be upset. You must see that for yourself."

"I think it's monstrous," Myrtle proceeded. "Simply monstrous! Does he imagine I haven't thought about it all hundreds and thousands of times. But what's the use? What can I do? What can any of us girls do? . . . 'Educated,' am I? He has a nerve to tell me I'm educated. How am I educated? I can speak French and German, in a way. But what's that? But what can I do? I've been brought up to be idle and spend money, and enjoy myself. Only I don't enjoy myself. I hate it all. I only live as I do because I was taught to live like that, and because all the other girls do it. It isn't my fault. It's your fault—I mean father's. And you always agree with him."

"I should just like him to show me what I ought to do. He couldn't. And then he rounds on me. Supposing he lost all his money and I had to go out and earn my living. How should I do it? I don't know anything about anything that's real. Why, when I see a housemaid cleaning a room I'm ashamed—yes, ashamed! Because I couldn't clean a room. Don't know how to. I often feel the maids scorn me, because at any rate they can do something and I can't. They do earn their living. They're in demand, maids are. And they'd leave as soon as look at you. They know if they leave one place they can get forty other places. Of course, they scorn me."

"And don't I guess how they talk about me in the staff hall! And what will they be saying tonight when Plaistow gets back and Price comes in for orders! A nice juicy story! And I'm forced to stay here and stand it all; I'm in a prison here, because I've been brought up to be idle and helpless!

"Supposing I walked out, and I've a good mind to; but I know I shan't, because I've got no character. My character's never been developed. Nobody ever cared two-pence about it. O, yes, I know I'm considered pretty good at small talk and keeping things going and all that. And I can play the guitar. Negro spirituals! Good God! But supposing I did walk out—I should starve. Well, I might be a mannequin—I was forgetting that—and you know what mannequins are, and what they jolly well have to do!

"It isn't as if I hadn't given you hints now and then that I wasn't satisfied. I have! But what's the result always been? You've smiled. And you say it wouldn't be right for me to be taking the bread out of another girl's mouth who really needs money. So I'm to be sacrificed. What I say is that a fair day's work for a fair day's pay won't take the bread out of anybody's mouth. And I shouldn't care if it did, anyhow. I'm the unemployed. I'm on the dole, that's what I am! And what about father taking the bread out of other people's mouths! Why he never does anything else!"

She stopped, resentful and triumphant, sure that she had spoken unanswerably. She was merciless, grantic, in her outraged youth. She would make no allowance for anybody. She was unarmed against parents and the world, but she victoriously held the field.

Mrs. Emmarce had ceased to cry, and ceased to drink tea. She was rubbing a thumb-nail against her teeth. She thought: "I must be careful. The child only needs handling." She pitied Myrtle's naive youth. "The child will get over it." She entirely ignored the problem which Myrtle had so passionately stated.

Then she said aloud, very quietly, very soothingly: "You know, my pet, you'll see later on that you aren't being quite just to your father—or to me. You ought to know that if he thought you really wanted to work he wouldn't stand in your way."

Myrtle broke out again: "It isn't a question of standing in my way. I don't 'want' to work—why should I, seeing how I've been brought up?—I only feel I ought to work. What I need is to be encouraged to work, forced to work, whipped into it. I need to have work knocked into me. I could stand it, all right. I should come through. But I can't come through by myself. I need—"

"I'll tell you what you need, my pet," said Mrs. Emmarce, with a strange, confidential smile. "Let's be frank. You're grown up now. You're a woman. What you need is to get married. You're spoiling for it. You know you are. There's nothing else the matter with you. And you know as well as I do you can get married whenever you choose."

Myrtle was startled, dashed, for an instant. How clever her mother was, with that new flattering tone of hers! But the young girl recovered savagely.

"Well, I just won't do it. I'm not going to get married for my father's money. One waster's enough—we don't want two. And I won't be married on my face. And what else have I got to give to a man in exchange for what he'd give me? I can't run a house, haven't the least idea how to! I can't manage servants. I don't know the price of anything—except clothes and scent. What sort of a fool should I look in a butcher's shop or a fishmonger's? I couldn't tell beef from mutton until I tasted it. I can't even be punctual. I couldn't make a husband comfortable. Do you think I don't know what sort of a rotter I am? I won't marry a rotter, and I won't cheat a man who isn't a rotter."

"But listen, darling—"
"O, shut up, mother! You make me sick."
Myrtle bent her head suddenly, sobbed, and ran out of the room, banging the heavy door.

Mrs. Emmarce sighed gently.

"Are you at home, miss?" Plythe, the fat butler—tall too, but a head shorter than any of the three terrific footmen, his solemn legionaries—had ceremonially entered the small drawing room which lay hidden behind a disguised door in the highly decorated wall of the palatial main reception room.

Myrtle was alone, lounging meditative in a cushioned corner. She had been alone and meditative all day.

"Who is it?"

"Mr. Cuthbert Mallins."

Her first impulse was to answer "no." Fourteen hours earlier that day she had been dancing with him, Cuthbert Mallins. Thirteen hours earlier she had been eating bacon and eggs by his side.

"Yes, show him in," said a voice: hers. After all, why should she refuse herself? She was not a coward, and she had had perhaps more than enough of her own society.

Plythe bowed and departed. A very tall young man—as tall as any of the legionaries—appeared; broad shouldered, blonde, fashionably dressed, smiling.

"Hello, Bertie. What's the meaning of this?"

"Well, you said I might call."

"I'm glad to see you. But you do take a girl at her word, don't you?"

"I do." He had a deep, reverberating voice.

"What do you say to it all?" she asked. "O," said he, "I'm not at liberty to talk freely. I don't know you well enough."

"Wasn't expecting you for at least a week."

"Well, there it is."

"Tea?"

"No thanks. Nothing."

"You've come into a house of mourning. Bertie," she began lightly, when they were both seated, he about six feet away from her. She was noted for her conversational ease. "Smoke if you want." An ambiguous smile prevented him from accepting her announcement literally.

"Some Pekingese dead?" he suggested. "Much worse," said Myrtle. "I've been officially informed that I'm a rotter."

She found pleasure in bursting out with the news and thus startling the young man. They had known one another for a year past, and in recent weeks their intimacy had grown rapidly. During the previous night they had had two separate intimate talks. She liked his mind. She knew that he liked her mind. And he was a man of parts who now and then hinted a polite but effective disdain of the military and the dual clans. Partner in an enormous firm of stockbrokers. A realist who could smile benignly in his realism. And well made, athletic—though with no mad passion for games—personable, discreetly ingenious in the matter of neckties.

Anyhow, she would see how he behaved in the situation. Not that she cared how he behaved, she thought! She just had to have the relief of opening her soul. She had written about the rotter business to her sister and great friend, Helen, who was "finishing" an elaborate education in Paris. But the relief of writing had not endured.

Her mother had become an invalid for the day—prudently awaiting her husband's return before deciding on a policy. Her mother had not sought her, and she had not sought her mother. Like her mother, she awaited her father, but she awaited him as one angry tiger awaits another. She had canceled a lunch engagement and a tea engagement, and declined every siren call on the telephone.

"How a rotter?"

She related the six a. m. incident to Mr. Mallins as fully and as brutally as she had related it to Mrs. Emmarce. Rather fun, this audacity; bitter fun, but fun!

"What do you say to it all?" she ended. "O," said he, "I'm not at liberty to talk freely. I don't know you well enough."

"Bertie, my boy, if you say one more word in that strain, I shall ring for help."

"Then I agree with your parent. You are a rotter." He slid down in the easy chair, and his legs were all across the room. He smiled and frowned at her simultaneously.

"Thank you!"

"Well, you asked for it."

ily you could always lay hands on a few hundreds."

"But that wouldn't be keeping myself. I can't earn anything."

"I know that. You haven't got anything to offer in the labor market. But if you had a few hundreds you could learn to earn."

"Learn what, for instance?"

"There are two things you ought to do. You ought to go to a business college and discipline your mind. And you ought to go to a school for household training. These two things are obvious. But it doesn't matter what you do, so long as you cure your awful disease."

"What awful disease?"

"Idleness, naturally. Yes, and mind wandering."

She was deeply impressed by the revelation that his mind marched equally with hers. But she hid her feeling.

"You've evidently been thinking quite a lot about the modern girl," she said sarcastically.

"Yes, I have."

"And you think you're very wise," she added, with a sarcasm still fiercer.

"Perhaps," Cuthbert agreed negligently, pleasantly.

"But why should I take any notice of what you say? You're talking through your hat. Aren't you a rotter, too? Why, three times in the last fortnight I've seen you myself up till four in the morning. This morning it was nearly six. How can you do an honest day's work after such nights?"

"Ah!" said Cuthbert. "There is an explanation of that."

"What is it?"

"I won't tell you."

"Why not?"

"Because it's too soon. I won't be hurried."

"You'll tell me this very moment," Myrtle stood up. Then Cuthbert stood up.

"Very well then. I'm getting to be a rotter because you're making me a rotter. I'm burning the candle at both ends because that's the only way I can see you. I stay late at these damned parties because you stay late. You're my evil star, and so now you know."

"And I suppose this is what you call love making. Latest fashion, I suppose!" Myrtle's nostrils were expanding and contracting.

"Call it what you please," said Cuthbert.

But in spite of the tenor of these last remarks, and of their tone, Myrtle, even more than Cuthbert, felt that a solemnizing, a thrilling influence had descended upon the room. Both were frightened, as well as happily expectant.

Then Mr. Emmarce, himself, came in.

Myrtle, exercising by instinct her renowned social tact, assumed imperturbability. After all, she was not in Cuthbert's arms, nor were they seated close side by side. They were standing at two arms' length.

"Well, dad, so you're back. This is Cuthbert Mallins. His first visit here. You're just in time to make his acquaintance."

"O! But I know Mr. Mallins quite well, don't I?"

"Yes, sir," said the young man, shaking hands.

Mr. Emmarce was blandness itself, very different from the taut Mr. Emmarce of 6 a. m.

"You were quite right this morning, dad," Myrtle proceeded. "I am a rotter. Cuthbert agrees with you. So do I. I thought it was your fault, though—me being a rotter. But Cuthbert disagrees with me there. He says it's my own."

"But my dear girl!" Mr. Emmarce protested, less imperturbable under shock than his daughter. "What—"

Myrtle had sat down, leaving the two astounded men on their feet.

"It's perfectly all right," said Myrtle. "No secrets from Cuthbert. I've told him every word you said. He's in love with me. He didn't mean to tell me so; but I dragged it out of him."

The outraged males glanced at one another, forming in an instant a secret but perfectly futile society for the protection of

How Europe Handles Crime and Criminals

BY HENRIETTA W. BINGHAM.

LONDON.—Probably the most interesting development in the English penal code the last fifty years is the Borstal system. There are now five Borstal institutions, one for girls, where offenders sixteen to twenty-one are sent for a period up to three years, instead of to ordinary prisons for a short time.

The advantages are manifold. First the young offender avoids the disgrace of a prison sentence, and all that entails. Moreover, during the three years, which can be shortened considerably, the boy or girl may learn a skilled trade and change the whole outlook on life.

The atmosphere at Borstal is more like that of a school. Each lad has his own room in the same house throughout his sentence. Each house is a unit, with its own dining and recreation hall, its football teams, etc., and it is supervised by a master and matron. The lads are encouraged to be industrious and obedient, not only for their promotion but for the privileges enjoyed by the whole house if the general standard is high.

The lads are classed as first, second and third year boys, with privileges increasing each year. The third year boys are the trustees and may go out of the grounds alone, while the other lads are allowed to go out only in parties.

Each lad has considerable freedom in choosing his trade and electing advanced classes. Carpentering, engineering, blacksmithing, farm work, cooking, etc., are taught. Stone-breaking is reserved for punishment.

The lads do all manual and domestic labor, even cooking, but time is set aside for reading, study and sports. The influence of the officers and teachers, the spirit of comradeship and the industrious life are a strikingly successful cure for criminal tendencies.

The lads are first released on license. The Borstal Association finds work for them and maintains contact with each lad. If he reverts to bad habits his license may be revoked and he may be required to complete his sentence. However, the efforts of the Borstal Association combined with the Borstal treatment have reclaimed a large percentage of these potential criminals.

In conclusion, too much praise cannot be given the Voluntary Prison Visitors Society attached to each local and convict prison. The men and women on these committees are allowed to visit the prisons and talk with the prisoners individually.

In addition, a visiting committee is appointed for every prison by the justices whose benches commit to the prison, and this committee deals with the more serious offenses. It is an impartial body with right of inspection of the prison, and it can report directly to the home secretary.

The voluntary nature of the work done by the visitors of the Voluntary Prison Visitors Society so impresses some of the more hardened criminals that they become tractable and eager for improvement. Moreover, the friendly interest taken by the visitors in the life and hopes of the prisoner reduces to a minimum the possibility that he will leave prison more vindictive and dangerous than when he entered.

The following figures indicate the success of the British system:

For the year ending April, 1913, the total number of prisoners in local prisons, England and Wales, including Borstal institutions, was 15,508, and the total number of convicts in England and Wales, 2,752; while the figures for the year ending April, 1929, were 8,769 and 1,522.

Since the war twenty-five prisons have been closed in England and Wales.

PRISON AND CRIMES IN FRANCE.

Paris.—If France were judged by her attitude toward criminals she would be con-

With widespread crime persistent in the United States, it is of interest to see how Europe deals with crime and criminals. Accordingly an investigation of foreign prisons and penology systems has been made by Atlanta Constitution and The North American Newspaper Alliance. The results are given in a series of dispatches, of which this is the second.

sidered the most inhuman nation of the civilized world.

No attempt is made to reform the habitual criminal. If the rigors of prison have not taught him to avoid a criminal life he will learn a dreadful lesson at Devil's Island.

There is no criminal class in France. Habitual criminals are in the penal colonies. France is the only country which has kept up the practice of sending its worst criminals to hard labor in the colonies.

Devil's Island and the whole series of criminal camps long established in French Guinea are the certain fate of those who commit second or third crimes. Few return from the penal colonies, and fewer still are those who, having served there, have broken the law again.

Crime is common in France. Murder in a most revolting form, that of old men and women, constantly occurs. The French habit of hiding money in mattresses "in a woolen sock," as the saying is in France, is a temptation to young farm workers or young relatives of elderly, usually miserly people. But caught, these criminals pay dearly.

French juries are often sentimental. The jealous woman who kills husband or lover has an excellent chance of escaping. The juries are also susceptible to political considerations, and the crime with the mark of revolt against society is often excused. But once there is a conviction the moment the prisoner has passed into the administration of punishment he is swallowed in a vast unfeeling machine whence there is no escape.

He loses all contact with the world. He passes through a purgatory, inhuman in its unbending regulations. He is not treated cruelly, rarely brutally, but with an indifference which is the most terrible suffering of all.

This is deliberate. It takes the dramatic out of crime. There are no heroes in French prisons. There is no coddling. Prisoners with money buy privileges, as they do everywhere, but they are few.

In most French penitentiaries there are few extra privileges to be had, except an occasional cup of what is called coffee, paid for by prisoners with money sent by family or friends. There is no entertainment, no effort to ease the brutalizing process of the prison term.

There has never been a campaign in France to ameliorate prison conditions, except by communists working on behalf of their fellows who are in prison, mostly for insubordination to military orders. Their campaign has made no impression.

The general public has never interested itself in criminals. Its attitude is that the man who commits a crime must pay, and the machinery of punishment having long since become an established part of the state, it is as difficult to change in the smallest detail as any other administrative function in France.

Everything connected with French prisons is hard and uncomfortable, deliberately. Convicts are taken to state penitentiaries in special railroad cars designed to make them realize immediately that they are out of the world as completely as if the guillotine had cut off their heads. The prisoner is placed in irons in a tiny cell with a grill into an inner corridor, guarded by a warden who has been at it all his life, who takes no chances on his prisoner escaping, and who is perfectly indifferent to his captive.

As these prison cars are sent by short stages on slow trains, by day only, the prisoner may have a day or two cramped in irons as his first taste of the loss of freedom. The French temperament being spontaneous and apt to revolt, the mental sufferings during the first few hours in the prison sometimes leave an impression stronger than hard, monotonous years in the penitentiary.

Life in penitentiaries in France is comparable in most cases to penitentiary life elsewhere—twelve hours of work or obligatory lock-step in a narrow court, twelve hours of confinement in a narrow cell. The food is tasteless, but nourishes. Some penitentiaries have vermin, others are clean.

The regulations for all are the same. The difference lies in the wardens. In one respect the wardens are all alike; their prisoners are to them no longer men but creatures who have lost right to any consideration beyond being fed, examined periodically by a doctor and being allowed to write letters once a month.

The effect upon the prisoners is exactly what the regulations intend. Their spirit is broken. The communist, Marty, who led the revolt in the French fleet at Odessa in 1919, and wrote as propaganda for his party a booklet on his impressions of French penitentiaries, was struck by the incapacity of his fellow prisoners to feel revolt.

There is nothing to prevent the prisoner, once he has paid for his crime, rehabilitating himself in France. If he has learned his lesson he goes straight. If he has developed a taste for criminal life the state has an inexorable answer—the penal colony. There is no disposition to analyze or give any consideration whatever to the criminal instinct. The possessor is simply put where he cannot do anything about it.

The criminal before the court a second time has virtually no chance. He is lucky if he is ordered to serve his second sentence in France. A third in inevitably in the penal colony with banishment for ever.

That is why there are no habitual criminals and no crime waves in France.

PRISONS IN PRUSSIA.

Berlin.—Though the principle of educating rather than degrading criminals is finding widespread support in Prussia, even today a convict may lose his civil rights.

An increasing number of "conditional pardons" is being granted to save the early offender the stigma of prison.

Recidivism is only twenty per cent and prison population dropped from a daily average of 70,000 in 1923 to 32,000 in 1928.

In Prussia, as in all Germany, penitentiary and prison are distinct institutions. A darker stigma, often accompanied by loss of civil rights, attaches to the penitentiary.

There are minor differences in the treatment of the two classes of prisoners. Prison dress is blue or grey; that of the penitentiary is brown. Prison convicts may smoke; those of the penitentiary must not, save in exceptional circumstances.

Eight to nine hours daily work is required of prison inmates, nine to ten hours in the penitentiary. Those in prison don't have to do agricultural work; penitentiary convicts have no choice. But in respect to individual treatment no distinction is made.

In 1914, there was a daily average of 47,000 convicts in the penitentiaries and prisons. In 1923, the number had increased to 70,000. This was largely due to abnormal conditions in Germany then.

In days when it took millions of marks to buy a stamp and housewives lined up before shops by the thousand hoping through an all-day vigil to obtain a quarter-pound of something to stave off hunger, no wonder prisons were crowded with wretches who took what came their way without regard to the legal aspect.

As soon as the mark was stabilized the number of prisoners lessened. Nineteen hundred twenty-four shows a daily average of 54,000, and in 1928 there were only 32,000.

Various causes contributed to this sharp drop—15,000 below 1914. The conditional pardon granted an ever-increasing number of smaller offenders doubtless plays an important role. Probation of three to five years, according to the crime, is allowed. If within this time the culprit's conduct is exemplary he is not compelled to serve his term. But if he transgresses in any way during this period he must serve the entire time of the first sentence, in addition to the second.

The Prussian ministry of justice regards this innovation as productive of very good results, and hopes for further decrease in crime through persistent, intelligent application of modern theories.

Imprisonment must be utilized in every way to convert the criminal into a law-abiding citizen. He must be taught to work, but this must not be regarded as punishment. He must be brought to see that work is essential to success in life. Hence, all work required of him must have a constructive, positive value.

An important, recent advance in Prussian penal administration was the introduction of the gradation system. The basic idea is gradually to moderate the rules of prison life and to increase the freedom of the prisoner according to diligence and good behavior. Every prisoner starts in Grade I. Those in the penitentiary remain in this grade at least nine months, those in prison at least six months, juveniles at least three months.

No privileges are granted during this time. At the end, if general behavior admits, the prisoners are promoted to Grade II. In this grade various privileges are granted. The prisoners may have visitors, write letters more frequently, receive packages on their birthdays as well as at Christmas, have mirrors on their cell walls and photographs of family and friends; also they may have a plant to cultivate. Sunday afternoons they are allowed an hour's chat in a common sitting room without supervision.

The third grade gives very considerable liberty. Receiving visitors, the prisoners may wear their own clothes instead of prison dress. They may spend three marks a month on additional food. During the entertainment hour they may listen to the radio or play games. They may have light in their cells till 10 o'clock. Also a certain amount of self-government is allowed, whereby they appoint their own officers, held responsible for order.

These facts I obtained from the Prussian ministry of justice. A permit was given me to visit a women's prison, formidable, window-barred building in the heart of Berlin.

I was escorted into the office of the superintendent, a refined, intellectual-looking woman belonging to one of the oldest aristocratic families in Germany. She conducted me through the huge prison. Scrupulously clean it was, with an abundance of light and air. I saw women at work in the kitchen, in the laundry, washing windows, painting walls. I saw their individual cells, the bathrooms, school, hospital, chapel, exercise grounds. I took a bit of their dinner—it tasted good. Certainly, it was wholesome. Beef stew with potatoes and sauerkraut, well-cooked, well-seasoned. For the sick there was boiled rice with sugar and milk.

I had no opportunity to speak more than a passing word with the prisoners, but my inspection and my conversation with the superintendent convinced me that the Prussian ministry of justice is making a serious, sustained effort toward the re-socialization of anti-social elements.

It is too early yet to obtain reliable statistics on the success or failure of present-day prison administration in Prussia. It is safe, however, to predict that the country at large will not suffer from its endeavor to educate rather than punish, for the standard of conduct as a whole will be raised.

The attitude of a nation toward its law-breakers is a gauge of the ethical earnestness of the nation itself.

INSTALLMENT VI.

 "I'M GOING to tell the planet Mars that this mate of ours is a baby. He's brought us everything but a Christmas turkey. Look, here are cans of dried milk, powdered eggs, pemmican, and ship biscuit."

"Let me see one of those cans of milk," requested Steve.

Collier looked at him sharply. "Not on your life. You get your ration, while you're with us, the same as anybody else."

"I said I would like to see one of the cans," retorted Steve, swiftly, "not to eat one. I had a reason for my request."

"Well, whatever your reason is, forget it."

Steve was silent for a moment while the other men came along with more supplies. Finally he turned to the judge. "I merely wish to call your attention to the fact that any dried milk cached by Commodore Peary in 1909 would have deteriorated to such an extent during the last twenty years that it would be absolutely useless."

The mate, coming it, heard that remark. "Not in the arctic," he said. "If you had lived in the cold country as long as I have, you would know everything is different up here."

"I admit," conceded Steve, "that I have not lived in the arctic at all. It has seemed to me like a rather uninteresting life work, but I do happen to have read books on almost every subject. That's a very useful way of passing your spare time, Mr. Dayne, and I would recommend it to you highly if I thought you could read."

"What?" retorted the mate. "I can read."

"I meant anything besides headlines," explained Steve, pleasantly.

"Stow that," growled the mate, "or I'll put you into the brig for-ard. That will cool you down a bit."

"Please don't argue with him," whispered Eve.

The judge spoke. "Why did you want to see the cans?"

"They looked to me like practically new tins," Steve explained. "The labels on anything which had been stored away for twenty years would have been rotted off. Those tins looked as if they had been scratched, the way they would if the labels had been scraped off."

By mutual consent rules were abandoned for the first meal and every one ate as much as he or she needed. After several days of practically nothing it seemed advisable to restore the balance a little before adopting a strenuous regimen. As Collier had stated, there was a considerable variety of food and it was all good. Even the milk, which Steve had expressed doubts about, was quite as palatable as dried milk ever is.

After the meal the mate turned on the radio. It was evening in New York, and one of the great chain hookups was broadcasting a late program of dance music and night club entertainment—songs, merriment, wisecracks, warmth, the atmosphere of mild naughtiness radiating through the chill winter air to be intercepted on its way to the pole by their puny arresting wires and brought into that stuffy, shadow haunted cabin to amuse slightly a group of widely diversified individuals within the blue circle of the icy scythe of death.

You're the cream in my coffee.

You're the salt in my stew.

Gang the radio.

"I wonder where Dayne really got those supplies," thought Steve.

Each man tells love tales

"What made Stephen Hard so bitter?" asked Eve, also of herself. The music played a discordant countermelody to her thoughts. "Underneath he is gentle. You can tell that. Could he have killed my father?"

We are the musketeers.

Bold, dashing musketeers.

The orchestra at Richman's Supper Club was doing that.

In the Rangefinder cabin Mate Dayne tapped out the tempo as he thought, "That dopey newspaper man thinks I'm a liar. To hell with him. Give him a swift trial and start him walking to find somebody that will believe him." He grinned at the idea. A tenor was singing:

"The bear has him trod on a hammock about a hundred yards from the ship."

Ma belle, ma belle,
You are so charming I'm enchanted with you.

Ma belle, belle,
Your eyes are daring me and thrilling me, too.

Every smile invites me all the while
With every look surprising, tantalizing,
Whispering, "Awake me,
Come and take me."

And LeRoy was looking at Eve and thinking, "You're like that, you cold, little devil, but I'll awake you, all right, now that you're mine. I never saw the woman yet who wouldn't fall when I cracked the whip, and I guess you're no exception even if your devilish aloofness does drive me wild. Well, that's about over now. Whatever else you might do, you'll never go back on your bargain."

Herbert Beverleigh wiped his eye furtively when he thought no one was looking. He wanted to see his wife, and wondered if he ever would. Hereafter he would dance with her and stay out as late as she wanted to and do it willingly.

Dr. Waters played solitaire. Maussler sat stolidly a little apart, doing nothing. John Gael was already asleep.

Christophe Brinker wrote voluminously on his account of the expedition which would probably never be published, and Judge Cavendish surveyed the group with the wise eye of a man who has seen much of humanity pass in review before him and is not to be confused or distracted by the surface appearance of things.

"There is much here that does not meet the eye," he ruminated, while the radio delivered from thousands of miles away the information that "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulder." "This, I should think, would be an excellent place to come at the real truth of things. Will it come out before we die, I wonder? If it doesn't, I suppose it does not matter, but man seeks the truth even on the brink of the grave and asks a question with his last breath. I, for one, regard it as a most interesting experiment and I shall be pleased to take a hand in it, knowing for once that, no matter what I do, it will not make much difference one way or the other."

Actually the advent of Mate Dayne with his small sled load of supplies had not changed the aspect of the situation much except to make it possible for them to hang on for a number of days more. The routine of life was resumed and on the next day or, rather, after everyone had slept as long as they could, the question of continuing the trial of Stephen Hard came up. Those who were in favor of abandoning it found themselves in the minority and even a majority would have availed as Dayne, now rating a captaincy in the absence of Anderson, was unequivocally determined upon it.

"There's no use beating about the bush," he declared, "and, while I've got to keep my opinion to myself, we might just as well prove that Hard killed Dahlstrom and get it over with."

He assumed the presidency of the court, which was automatically his by law even if not by training or temperament. Evidently he relished the trappings of authority and it was noticeable that he had even attempted a shave in honor of the occasion.

"He looks just as evil without his beard as he did with it on," whispered Judge Cavendish to his chained client. "I feel as if I had seen him somewhere before, but I think it is just that I am familiar with his type."

"From constant association with criminals?" questioned Steve, also in a low voice.

The judge laughed and nodded. "Right."

Judge Cavendish, even in a fur shirt and reindeer pants, gave the impression of the careful grooming and the perfect savoir faire of an accustomed authority on the law of his land. He had on at least a phantom white shirt and a correct high collar.

Christophe Brinker had made no objection to the addition of the judge to the counsel for the defense. Please generously offered him the opportunity to abjure any partisanship whatever if he wished.

"No," decided Brinker, "I'll carry on with the shock troops. Not that it will make any decided difference, but I think everybody else is against you and it seems like the sporting thing to do."

Steve thanked him.

"I'll just assist the jolly old barrister in working up the case. I don't know any law, but I've heard a few good semi-parlor stories that he could tell at the trial, and that helps no end. I'll let him do all the talking while I'll come in strong on the thinking."

When the trial reopened this time, in spite of the fact that it was rendered grotesque by the ignorance of formalities and the undignified demeanor of the presiding officer, the whole affair seemed to take on a more sinister aspect. Steve felt the menace and so did Judge Cavendish, although the latter did not mention it—rather cried it down, in fact, but his actual instinctive reaction was the same as Steve's.

The fact that Bill Dayne knew little of the law made the proceedings a more barbaric affair and, therefore, more dangerous to the victim. Steve felt that the farce of the trial was more a preliminary to a sacrifice to a cruel God than a judicial weighing of evidence. With Dayne in the chair he had little chance, and he knew it.

"The court is opened," Dayne declared. "We will now hear the facts about how the prisoner, Stephen Hard, murdered the deceased, Professor Eric Dahlstrom."

"I object, Mr. Dayne."

Dayne paused, nonplussed by the interruption to what was apparently a carefully prepared opening speech. He glared at the offender, Judge Cavendish.

"What are you objecting to?"

The judge replied gently, "I think it is scarcely fair to describe Mr. Hard as a murderer. That presupposes the conclusion which our opponents are attempting to gain."

Your Signature or Your Life

That's the Cry of the Autograph Fiend, Who—According to This Eminent Actor and Victim of the Signature Collector's Depredations—May Be Responsible for the Crime Wave, the Late War and Almost Every Catastrophe That Has Visited the World

By E. H. SOTHERN.

REJOICE in an acquaintance who in the guise of motley reaches most profound conclusions—the latest of which is that the increase in crime is due in no small degree to the prevalence of autograph-hunters.

It is his contention that this passion undermines the character of its addicts, who shortly, in pursuit of their prey, lose all sense of propriety and good manners and stoop to every sort of flattery, cajolery and even misrepresentation to gain their end. Failing to obtain what they covet by fair means, they will, says my commentator, condescend to abuse and impertinence, forgetting that they have requested a favor, and demanding as a right that which should be left to the amiable concession of their victim.

Just now, contempt for all law is declared to have been brought about by the conviction of effervescent persons that citizens should be at liberty to quench their thirst after their own fashion. So, proclaims this philosopher, all the protections with which custom and kindness have surrounded the individual are swept away by the obsession of the autograph-fiend, who without hesitation will intrude on any privacy and resent all denial.

This begets an habitual impudent assurance, a disregard for any wish or opinion opposed to that of the collector, which so deteriorates the moral standards that it is a short step to the defiance of all laws and order in the acquisition of any desired end.

In my friend's estimation, a child who is permitted to collect autographs has taken his first step toward the gallows.

He very seriously attributes the late war to the fact that most European monarchs are autograph collectors. And he looks you steadily in the eye when he avers that the head-hunters of Borneo and the early scalp collectors of our own country are merely instances of the same fundamental urge—that Jack-the-Ripper was impelled to the collection of unfortunate ladies through an identical hunger—and that the spider which finds ecstasy in the cannibalistic orgy with which she celebrates her nuptials, is inflamed by a similar fury.

Though this seems to be an extreme view, it might prove illuminating to inquire whether those condemned to be hanged have been addicted to so pernicious an occupation, whether bandits and gangsters, bootleggers and burglars, bigamists and machine-gun toters and kidnapers first acquire a contempt for the rights of their fellow citizens through the slow growth of that rebellious resentment which the hunter for autographs conceives when his demand is neglected or declined.

It must at once be admitted that there are varieties of this disease, and that not all infections are malignant. Volumes of autographs of people distinguished and notorious, of course, have been compiled with very excellent propriety, and they have their value, historical and personal. If there be danger to the character of the collector, it is in the meaningless and promiscuous demand for signatures which in a day will cease to have interest.

I once knew a man who had grown to be a prey to nervous disorder. His physician examined him and said: "I find nothing organically wrong, but you need a hobby. Collect stamps," said the patient in relating his experience: "Damn it, he told me to collect stamps, and charged me $5."

Could one believe that all those who request autographs would be relieved from their twitchings, mental and physical, or that ill-spent and misdirected energies might be restored to their normal and more fruitful channels through a roundup of signatures, one could contribute to such happy results with some satisfaction. There are those undoubtedly who, never knowing how to think straight for two minutes consecutively, need some thread upon which to string their purpose—and, as one drops pennies into the hat of a beggar, so one could save one's conscience happily by these pen strokes.

But most of those who are thus aggressive in their demands are able bodied and determined, and they by no means assume the attitude of mendicants. With them it is, after slight hesitation, "Stand and deliver!"

I must confess that I have come in contact with quite a number of such nuisances.

I once lay in bed in a hotel at Kansas City, sipping my coffee and reading the morning paper, when without a preparatory knock the door flew open. Two men entered. The customary taking off of hats when accosting a stranger in his own chamber was dispensed with. One man placed a camera on a tripod in the center of the room, and prepared to photograph me. The other, notebook in hand, said: "Are you Sothern?"

A wearisome experience assured me that these were newspaper men though of a more maniac breed than usual. I jumped out of bed and told them to leave the room.

"But I want to interview you," said the man with the notebook.

Now, no man of my calling is more grateful for the amiable publicity accorded to us by the press, nor is any more eager to take advantage of the inclination of the public to hear what we are up to—for in no small degree, through such advertisement, do we sell our goods over the counter.

But there are some limits to the liberties which we permit even our nearest and dearest, and I felt that the proprieties had been damaged.

"Go down to the office and send up your name," cried I, "and find out if I'm in."

"In?" said the astonished interviewer.

"Why, there you are."

"Possibly," I parried, for the fact was not easy to deny, "but you have no right to intrude on me like this! Get out, both of you, and send up a card. If I want to see you, I'll say so. Get out!"

And, unarmed as I was, with either boots or garments, I shoved both of them into the passage.

I saw them no more, but the clerk downstairs, when I attacked him for permitting them to come to my room, said they had merely asked for my number, and he thought they had an appointment. He also volunteered the information that the notebook man had related to him the incident with much indignation and had said: "He told me to send up a card and see if he's in. The man's a bloody Beau Brummel."

Since he doubtless was of the opinion that he was doing me a favor by providing me with publicity, the sensibilities of this marauder were in a degree comprehensible. He had, in his own estimation, come to confer a benefit and had met with rebuff.

This is not quite the case with the autograph hunter. He, without knowing the person he visits, asks an individual favor which concerns nobody but himself. The granting of this favor has no public significance whatever. There can be no question of its being any particular gratification to the one of whom it is demanded. Yet the gift, for that's what it is, is called for, and any refusal is received with surprise and indignation.

Not so long ago I gave a recital on one of my recent tours. The work is rather active, and it is necessary for me to make a complete change of clothing, for I am frequently wet through after two hours of very strenuous endeavor. A man opened the door of my dressing room while I was disrobing.

"What is it?" I asked, with my shirt over my head.

"I want your autograph," he answered, holding a book in one hand and a fountain pen in the other.

"What do you mean by intruding on me in my dressing room?" said I. "Why don't you knock at the door and find out if it is convenient for me to see you? Get out!"

The man was ushered out. When I was dressed I went into the auditorium to meet some people. Shortly the man appeared, and again demanded an autograph.

"Was it you who pushed your way into my room just now?" I asked.

"Yes," he answered.

"How can you take such a liberty as to intrude on a man you don't know the very instant he has finished an exacting labor of two hours, without even the civility of a knock at the door? It is too inconsiderate and ungentle. Could you not wait to find out if it was agreeable to me to give you what you want? You have no right to take such a liberty."

"Is that so?" said he, and he went away.

At my hotel I found a letter under my door, written on the letter paper of a big firm in the city, although it was about 11 o'clock at night. In this letter the autograph hunter denounced me in a rambling statement, hoping I had recovered my temper, declaring that my behavior had enlightened him concerning my character that he considered me now to be a very "little" man, and that had I been aware that a lady was at his heels when he entered my room I perhaps would have behaved with more decency.

Speaking as an authority, he proclaimed I was no gentleman. He then went on to say that his new opinion of me was confirmed by the fact that he recently had purchased a volume of poems which had been presented to me by a San Francisco bard who had inscribed the work to me, and that the book actually contained my book plate and that no one but the vilest sort of fellow would thus part with so tender and sentimental a gift for money, as I evidently had done; that he was through with me forever and hoped that the most evil of fortunes would follow me hereafter with that contempt which he himself now felt so deeply and which I so thoroughly deserved.

Here was an amusing instance of that fact familiar to psychologists, that those deficiencies which affection has long glorified as actual beauties, either of person or character, immediately upon a change of feeling become equally exaggerated and resented as disgusting and monstrous. That twist in Maria's nose, so adorable while she behaved herself, becomes suddenly a very detestable blemish when she stamps her foot in dismissal of our suit, or more probably when we ourselves have become unworthy of her regard.

It is hard to perceive what this discarded gift of the poet had to do with the matter and it seems as much of a nonsequitur as the conduct of the letter carrier who changed his name from McCorquodale to MacKintosh because the screeching of slate pencils set his teeth on edge, or of an actor whom I once rebuked for not being perfect in his lines, and who retorted hotly, "I know I'm not perfect. I was a sailor."

Here we have a characteristic sample of the way these people reason. They have no sense whatever of any breach of manners or of any imposition on the privacy of a perfect stranger—nothing but anger and hatred and malice and uncharitableness. This would appear to justify the reflections of my philosopher. And, if one had time, it would be interesting to observe the subsequent career of such a specimen.

There is actually no more reason why a stranger should thus break his way into your dressing room in a theater than that he should intrude without ceremony into your bedroom in a hotel or private house. This also is the habit of such people, however.

A few days later I was in Philadelphia when a man opened the door of my room—again without knocking—and he, too, demanded an autograph. I dismissed him abruptly. An hour afterward I started to go out. There he was in the hall and he presented his request again. I refused. I went for a walk. He accosted me on the street. I repulsed him again. In a little while I returned to my room. He was waiting at the door. I told him I would hand him over to the house detective. He ran down the stairs. I complained at the office. They knew nothing about him. He had not arrived on the elevator, declared the floor clerk, and each time must have climbed twelve flights of stairs.

The old-fashioned brief and civil request for an autograph has given way to a much more elaborate and complicated attack which takes the form of a long letter of adulation, mentioning in my own case characters I have appeared in, very often characters I have not appeared in, and recalling the delight occasioned by these impersonation, but ending up with the request for a signed photograph, which one is supposed to carry about in eager anticipation of such a desire.

The abusive letter of violently adverse criticism is another variety of this approach, the hope being that the wretch to whom the vituperation is directed will lose his temper, seize pen and paper and so supply an indignant answer, which will serve the purpose admirably.

This, probably, was the expectation of the fellow who broke into my dressing room and left the letter of invective under my door.

I can tell an autograph fiend's letter by the address on the envelope; the sort of notepaper he uses is also an evidence of his approach. The writing seldom has much character, the paper is eccentric as a rule and the ink is likely to be purple or green or red. And when the letter starts with some appreciation or detraction of one's work the words are mostly ill chosen and evidently insincere.

Letters also come written in a mature hand and signed "a little boy or a little girl of eight."

Miss Marlowe at one time thought she had conceived a happy idea by having some cards printed which declared she would send her autograph upon payment of 50 cents, which should be donated to the actors' fund. The plan worked well for a while and she was able to contribute quite a large sum to that charity.

I tried it myself, but I found that my autograph had no financial value whatever, so my cards were wasted.

Many years ago, when I was young and charming and was spending a holiday at the Highlands of New Jersey, I went for a swim about half a mile from the shore. I fancied that I had no companions but an occasional fish-hawk, when I heard a voice at my elbow say, "Will you give me your autograph?" A rather stout and buoyant young lady had intruded on my solitude. "Certainly," replied I, "if you'll get a pen and ink."

One could hardly dampen ardor already so moist, and once on land a very gracious consent was inevitable.

Most autograph hunters lack the comic vein, however. There is small gayety in this pursuit. It may be that the pallid, fretful, disgusted and weary countenances of their victims haunt the slumbers and even the day-dreams of autograph fiends, as the drug addict is forever a prey to monstrous delusions which nibble at his peace and belabor him to further excesses.

"A Child Permitted to Collect Autographs Has Taken the First Step Toward the Gallows"

I once had a friend who found my performance of Hamlet more or less unendurable. He was indiscreet enough to send me his autograph album one evening with a request for my name. He had found his own rendering of this role rather to his satisfaction, and had written in this book in large, firm letters, "This is I, Hamlet the Dane." The very next line in the play is spoken by Laertes and seemed to me to be the appropriate one for the moment, so I wrote underneath this quotation, "The devil take thy soul." I am sorry to say he was offended, which goes to show, as I contend, that these fiends have no sense of humor.

Edmund Yates, the celebrated editor of "The World," a London weekly, had by some vicious remarks aroused the ire of Watts Phillips. Yates wrote in the album of a mutual friend a line from Shakespeare's Coriolanus. "There is a world elsewhere." Phillips wrote under this: "Yes, and with a better editor."

I protest, that while I personally find myself lacking in actual affection or enthusiasm for autograph fiends, I harbor little resentment—for while in some instances I appreciate the sincerity of their regard, I believe that more generally they suffer from some acquired disorder or from some inborn deficiencies.

But I must plead that my melancholy friend has my sympathy and I feel that in the interest of good government the societies for the prevention of crime might, to advantage, occupy some spare hours, should they ever have any, in trying to discover if there is indeed any relation whatever between this weakness and those more dangerous proclivities which threaten our peace and which disturb the slumbers of those who are placed in authority over us.

Truly the matter may be worthy of the consideration of the League of Nations.

It has been suspected that Nero was a lunatic with a pretty taste in fiddles. Is it not true that Napoleon collected snuff boxes? A hunger for other people's territory may very possibly blossom from such inclinations—and the museums and picture galleries and tombs and mummies and Pyramids and Sphinxes, to say nothing of gold mines and the dwelling places of the diamond, may inflame collectors of the future toward that armageddon which shall destroy the world and pave the way to the dominion of insects which naturalists declare will succeed the extermination of man.

Hakodate, The "Gibraltar of Japan"

HAKODATE, the "Gibraltar of Japan," lies about twenty-five miles south of Mt. Komagatake volcano, yet it was enveloped in volcanic smoke during the recent eruption.

"Hokkaido, the island on which Hakodate is located, lies north of the Japanese mainland," Hondo, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Like the rest of Japan it is a region of seismic disturbance. This last eruption of Komagatake was its worst since 1905."

"Hakodate won its nickname of the 'Japanese Gibraltar' because it is built at the base of a rocky promontory which is crowned with a fort. It has a splendid harbor filled with shipping and frequent boats connect it with Yokohama and other Japanese ports."

The city's cheery, clean, electrically-lighted streets are always busy. Throngs of coolies carry bundles of dried seaweed or cured fish or rice. Japanese women, wearing colorful kimonos with their obis (sashes) arranged in precise folds, mince along the thoroughfares. Many of the houses of wood and paper look frail and airy enough for a strong wind to blow them away, but their sturdiness belies their appearance.

The pride of Hakodate is its large public park which commands a panoramic view of the city. In its shaded environs are a library and a museum of marine products.

"Great Britain and the United States both have consulates in the city which for many years functioned as the capital of the island. Sapporo, a smaller city, is now the official capital of Hokkaido. According to the 1925 census Hakodate, with its population of more than 165,000, was the largest city on the island."

"Trade between Hakodate and the United States has been carried on since 1854. It was one of the original treaty ports."

"Hakodate experienced thrilling times during the Japanese Civil War of 1868. In its harbor was waged a battle between the imperial forces and the rebels. The rebel forces were defeated and the two leaders offered to commit hara-kiri (suicide by disembowelment) that their followers might surrender themselves and be saved. As this was not permitted, they surrendered themselves and thus obtained the immunity of their troops."

What Has Happened to Justice?

THE RECENT death of the aged Mary Copley Thaw in Pittsburgh again momentarily focused the attention of newspaper readers upon one of the most sensational of American murders, the killing of Stanford White. Mrs. Thaw's passing occasioned considerable notice, for it was her son who killed White and it was her millions that financed Thaw's successful fight against the law.

That fight was a very costly one—costly not only to the Thaws and the state, but costly also in the sense that the case did a great deal to weaken public respect for our judicial system. The average American, more or less conversant with the general details of the Thaw case, believes that this was a shining example of how great wealth may debauch and enslave justice in the courts. We cannot blame Thaw for this, and certainly we cannot blame his mother, since it is but human nature to use every possible weapon to defend oneself and one's young in such situations.

Few dramas of murder have boasted such characters as the three principals of this case—Stanford White, distinguished architect, whose hobby, apart from his work, was entertaining women; Evelyn Nesbit, beautiful young model and chorus girl; and Harry Kendall Thaw, eccentric wastrel son of a rich family.

Few murders, furthermore, have had such a locale and such an aftermath of sensations.

Stanford White was born in 1852 and after completing his college education went abroad to study architecture. Upon his return to New York he became a member of the firm of McKim, Mead & White. He advanced rapidly; became, indeed, one of the greatest architects in the world. Among many other splendid edifices, he designed the old Madison Square Garden, in the tower of which he had a sumptuously furnished suite of rooms.

White had a wife residing in Cambridge, Mass., and a grown son who was attending Harvard, but marriage seemed to interfere very little with his voluptuous enjoyment of life. His studio, as he called his apartment in the tower, was the scene of frequent entertainments, described in the language of the day as "spicy." He particularly liked to entertain girls of tender years.

White's parties were sometimes a bit spectacular. One of his famous affairs was a stag dinner that aroused the ire of the late Anthony Comstock, the country's leading champion of chastity. When the time for dessert arrived an immense pie was brought into the dining room. The guests were staring at the pie in amazement when suddenly a beautiful girl of 15, scantily attired, burst through the crust. It was claimed this child afterward became one of White's victims.

Evelyn Nesbit was born near Pittsburgh on Christmas day, 1884. Her father, a lawyer, died when she was 12 years old. Her mother, frequently described as a frivolous, extravagant and designing woman, capitalizing the child's great beauty by renting her out to artists as a model. Evelyn posed in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New York.

In New York she branched out into theatrical work, becoming the most famous chorus girl of her time. It was not long before various Broadway playboys were bidding for her.

As early as the spring of 1901 16-year-old Evelyn met a wealthy married man named James Garland. Shortly afterward she and her clever mother were Garland's guests on a yachting trip. Garland's wife later sued him for divorce and young Evelyn Nesbit was said to have been mentioned as co-respondent.

According to Evelyn's own statement on the witness stand during the murder trial, she first met White in August, 1901. Her version of it was as follows:

She said a young woman friend invited her to dinner one night and without having the slightest idea as to where she was going to dine, Evelyn was inveigled by this girl into Stanford White's apartment. About a month after this first meeting, he invited her to the tower at the conclusion of a Florodora performance in which she was appearing as one of the famous Florodora sextet.

White had told her, she said, that three other girls would be in the party, but when she arrived he informed her that the other girls had disappointed him; that is, they hadn't appeared. He suavely invited her however, to take off her hat and have a glass of champagne. Miss Nesbit "reluctantly" accepted the invitation; that is, she took off her hat and accepted the glass of champagne.

Evelyn "immediately lost consciousness." When her mind cleared she found herself in the bedroom of the suite, the walls and ceiling of which were covered with mirrors. She realized that an assault had been committed upon her. She became hysterical, she said, but her seducer finally succeeded in pacifying her and exacted a promise that she would never tell her mother what had happened this momentous night.

In the subsequent weeks and months their intimate relationship continued. White met Mrs. Nesbit and quickly won his way into her confidence. According to Evelyn, he posed as the protector of the family and as such rendered financial assistance to the girl with the mother's knowledge and consent.

In the meanwhile, what of the other principal in our drama?

Harry K. Thaw, born in 1870, was the son of the late William Thaw and the grandson of the late John Thaw, a founder of the Bank of Pittsburgh in 1810. His father had been a director of the Pennsylvania and other railroads, had founded steamship lines on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and piled up a huge fortune in coke mines. William Thaw's gifts to charity were greater than any other American of his time and when he died in 1889 he left some $35,000,000.

Harry, one of five children, was a queer acting youth with such extravagant habits that his father provided in his will that the boy should receive only a monthly allowance, but as the years passed the indulgent mother seldom was able to deny him whatever he wanted. He became a typical wastrel, quite a different sort of person from his father and grandfather and his mother's people, who had been pioneers in western Pennsylvania. Before the mother died she was to spend literally millions on her son.

He quickly developed a passion for chorus girls, making a splash on Broadway. One of those he paid particular attention to, before he met Evelyn, was Frances Belmont, now Lady Ashburton, another extremely comely member of the Florodora sextet.

He frequently got into the papers as a result of his lavish entertainments both here and abroad, but from all accounts he never was able to break into the circle where Stanford White and his associates held sway. And that, it is important to note, riled him.

Thaw met young Evelyn some months after her first experience with White in the tower. They became very friendly and Thaw showered her with tokens of his affection. He began to regard her more or less as his own personal property, resenting the attentions of other men, particularly the tokens and attentions of Stanford White. Indeed, the mere sight of White was enough to make Harry boil.

About this time, it is recorded, White gave a dinner to which several guests were invited, including John Barrymore and Miss Nesbit. According to Evelyn's statement, Barrymore afterward proposed marriage to her and as White was apparently jealous of the handsome young matinee idol, he suggested to Evelyn's mother that the girl be sent to a private school in Jersey.

Mrs. Nesbit readily agreed; she had other ambitions for her daughter than marrying her off to an impecunious actor.

While Evelyn was at this school Thaw and White were frequent visitors. There was considerable gossip among the pupils regarding their relations with her, but then presently she underwent an operation for appendicitis and returned to New York, where she resumed her improper relations with White, who was contributing liberally to her support and the support of her mother.

In the early part of 1902 she discontinued the affair with White and a few months later she and her mother went to Europe as the guests of Harry Thaw.

According to Evelyn, they had been traveling around together for a few months when mother and daughter had a violent quarrel and the mother returned alone to America. After that Thaw and Evelyn traveled under assumed names as man and wife. During their sojourn Thaw discovered that Evelyn had taken abroad with her a letter of credit from White. Some of the money had gone to Mrs. Nesbit. Harry indignantly tore it up.

To continue the woman's story, the pair were in Paris in June, 1903, when Thaw—rather belatedly, one must remark—proposed marriage to her.

She claimed that she hesitated and then finally answered in the negative. The explanation she gave Thaw was that she couldn't, because of Stanford White. According to her, she told the whole story of her ruin by White, how he had lured her into his den of iniquity, drugged her, and attacked her while she was under the influence of the drug.

So there was no marriage.

Miss Nesbit returned to New York in October, 1903, and was followed by Thaw in November. On October 27, she met White by appointment and went with him to the office of Abe Hummel, one of the wildest lawyers of the age.

In this office, according to her, Hummel prepared a lengthy affidavit in which it was charged that while on the trip abroad Thaw frequently beat her and that his reason for so doing was because she had refused to make an affidavit to the effect that White had drugged and outraged her, she stating, according to the affidavit, that such a statement would be false.

The paper further averred that Thaw was a cocaine fiend.

Evelyn signed this affidavit but afterward claimed that she had been wilfully misquoted. It was stated subsequently that she had read the paper carefully before signing it.

When Thaw returned from Europe Evelyn told him of the incident and at Harry's request the affidavit was burned in Hummel's office—after Hummel had taken the precaution to have it photographed. The photograph copy of the affidavit afterward became one of the principal exhibits in the trial.

Evelyn ceased to associate with White, according to her story, and devoted most of her time to Thaw. They registered at several hotels in New York, but were requested to leave. Harry repeatedly pleaded with his mother to permit the marriage, but Mrs. Thaw, austere society leader and one of the country's foremost philanthropists, withheld her consent.

It was not until the spring of 1905 that the mother finally relented. Thaw and Miss Nesbit were married in Pittsburgh on April 5, 1905.

Evelyn claimed that after the marriage she saw White several times and that he attempted to annoy her by his attentions. She related these incidents to her husband, she said, and also told him that a Miss Mabel MacKenzie had informed her that White had openly boasted that he would get Evelyn back from Thaw.

Harry, apparently in retaliation, visited Comstock and reported that Stanford White was using his studio as a trap for young girls. The reformer investigated this but obtained no tangible evidence. Thaw did not mention his own wife's supposed experience in the tower.

We come at last to another momentous evening. It was June 25, 1906. Thaw, Evelyn, Truxtun Beale and Thomas McCaleb had dinner at the Cafe Martin and while they were dining Thaw, as he later reported, saw Evelyn shiver suddenly as though in fear. He asked her if she were ill. She shook her head, then asked for a piece of paper, on which she wrote:

"The B. was here a minute ago but went out again."

She meant White. Harry was "wild that he'd missed White," but presently he calmed down and they all went to the Madison Square roof garden to attend the premiere of "Mademoiselle Champagne." While they were watching the show Thaw was again thrown into a high state of excitement when his arch-enemy entered alone and took a seat at a table within view of the party. Thaw became restless, began walking around the place.

Finally, Evelyn suggested that they leave. They all got up and started out. Then—

"Excuse me," Thaw said to McCaleb. He dropped behind, then suddenly faced the architect and fired three shots. One of them

BACK HOME again, Roscoe, and glad of it. Hollywood's a great spot and we're trotting back there again some day for a visit. The climate is swell, the people are nice if a trifle dizzy. Life is freer and easier.

You can drive a car at fifty miles an hour and still be within the law, and the women are decidedly attractive. But they haven't any Broadway, Roscoe, and, without a Broadway, the rest is all bolony.

One thing, however, makes it a great town for a mug such as we. The place is full of drama. In the search for the dramatic, there is no more fruitful spot in this world than Hollywood. If you can't find drama there, you might as well stop looking.

Drama is everywhere. The waiter who serves you your coffee was once an actor in a Russian art troupe. The derelict who inspects your pass when you enter a film studio played many leading roles in old English dramas. The milkman who comes to your door every morning was a former football star who came to Hollywood to go into the movies.

When you step into a studio and see a mob of extras herded into action stories fairly rain around you. These extras are generally treated like so many cattle and almost as badly as the subway riders in New York.

On one occasion we saw an elderly man being barked at in an amazing fashion by a young squirt of a third assistant director. The old man just couldn't seem to get things straight. It was a pitiful sight, but those who were watching seemed to be mightily amused.

"Why do you laugh at the poor old duck?" we inquired. "He only gets $7.50 a day and that young director seems to be taking it out of his hide."

"We enjoy it," was the astounding response. "That old guy was once the general manager of this entire studio. He's a little cracked now—and we enjoy seeing him getting a dose of the same medicine he handed out so often."

Drama? Say, Roscoe, you have no idea . . . . .

All this, however, is neither here nor there. We started out today to unfold a specific story. Let's get to it.

It concerns a boy named Jack Pickford . . . . .

It was Mary Pickford, of course, who first made the Pickford name a great one in theatrical circles. When Mary first embarked on her movie career, more years ago than seem possible when you look at her today, there were two other members of her family who nursed notions of motion picture fame. One was Lottie, her sister. The other was Jack, her brother.

Lottie was foredoomed to an early failure. She made several pictures and was starred because of the Pickford name. But she did not have the ability to survive.

Jack was another story. He turned into a decidedly clever screen player and was soon very much in the public eye. The youngest member of the Pickford family, he looked extremely boyish. A flawless dresser and a good film actor, the girls went daffy about him and often voted for him in fan magazine contests as the most popular male player of the day.

Pickford had his first taste of tragedy some years ago when he married Olive Thomas, the most beautiful Ziegfeld girl of her day. Olive was a glorious creature and Jack was a popular film favorite. Their marriage was hailed by every one with the exception of Florenz Ziegfeld. Ziegfeld never liked young Pickford and doesn't to this day. Exactly why, he can tell you far better than we.

Pickford and Ollie Thomas went to Paris on their honeymoon. They were there but a short time when Ollie was found on the floor—dead. They said it was an overdose of veronal that the young beauty had taken as a sleeping potion. That is the story that was told and that is the story that was accepted. Perhaps it is just as well that we accept it too.

Jack returned to this country and lived down the tragedy. He settled down to the business of again becoming one of the screen favorites of the nation. Not more than a year or so had passed when he forgot the wife that had been in the light of a new love.

Pampered and petted and adored by countless women, Jack Pickford cast them all aside and fell madly in love with Marilyn Miller. Their engagement was announced—and this time Ziegfeld went slightly bug.

"He took my most beautiful girl away from me," he wailed at the time, "and now he's taking away a girl that I can turn into the greatest musical comedy star the world has ever known. I won't stand for it, I tell you. I won't."

But Flo stood for it, even as you and your uncle Charlie would have been compelled to stand for it. As Ziegfeld made dire threats, Marilyn and Jack became man and wife. And what good are threats at a time like that? Not much, as we can personally assure you.

At any rate, it seems to be the popular impression that Jack Pickford and Marilyn Miller were quite happy for a time. Six months or so, and perhaps longer. Isn't that quite a time for a girl who is adored by men and a man who is adored by girls?

Marilyn returned east to continue her musical comedy work while Jack remained in Hollywood to follow his film career. He was, at that time, a great success. Not as great as his sister Mary, of course, but not so far away from her as you might think.

Completing a new picture, Jack came east for Marilyn and they sailed for Europe together. It was in Paris that he had lost his first wife. Now he was bringing his second wife to the same place. And it was here, once again, that Pickford saw unhappiness bearing down on him.

He and Marilyn had a scrap in Paris that presaged the beginning of the end. They denied everything about a divorce for at least a year. But in the end it happened. Jack and Marilyn became single once again.

Shortly after this divorce Jack Pickford began to hit the chutes. How he hit them and exactly why, we don't think anyone knows. Perhaps it was because of a great love for Marilyn Miller and the fact that he lost her. But we doubt it.

Before we had any idea of going to Hollywood, we met Jack Pickford in New York about a year or so ago. He hadn't made a picture for some time. But he had an excuse. They said he had been very ill.

And he looked very ill. The man walked with heavy feet. He talked thickly. They said he was still mad about Miss Miller. But he sat with other women—and they petted him. After all, he was still a Pickford.

Then Jack Pickford went back to Hollywood again. And we did not see him until we arrived in that town some five weeks ago . . . . .

Pickford has never made another picture. He complains bitterly about it and swears there is a conspiracy against him. One night, when his conversation was fairly clear, he told us about it.

"My makeup box is ready," he said, "and so am I. I can act with the best of them, and I have always been a star. But they won't hire me. They say they have no work. But I know they're lying. They won't hire me because they don't like me. They won't give me a chance."

This fancied conspiracy, of course, is nothing—nothing but Jack's imagination. His health has improved since his visit to New York, but he is still a very sick man. He talks through the side of his mouth and has difficulty in making his words come forth clearly. His step is hesitant as though each time the foot goes down the floor would prove brittle and fall through. And there are many times when he can neither walk nor talk.

Accordingly, there can be no motion picture work for Jack Pickford. If the man ever acts again it will be nothing short of a miracle. Once they get this far down the road none of them can ever turn back.

Thus, it is that Mary Pickford is still the outstanding figure in the Pickford clan. When Lottie Pickford was getting into jam after jam in a fast Hollywood set, Mary still kept her head high.

When Jack Pickford stepped into the unfortunate Olive Thomas scandal in Paris, Mary had nothing to say. With stories and scandal about the Pickfords hitting the papers month after month, the breath of suspicion never touched Mary. And how does she feel about Jack today? Well, let's see.

At a big lawn party the latter part of last week, a number of film luminaries had gathered. There were Doug and Mary and Chaplin and Joe Schenck and a number of others, including Jack Pickford.

The host was one of those men who takes personal motion pictures—and keeps them for his own amusement. He has been doing it for years.

At this particular party, the host stepped out with his inevitable camera.

"Line up folks," he cried "time for you all to pose for my film."

The cinema stars nodded amiably. They all liked this host. They had posed for him before and they were glad to do it again. They all stood up and got into line.

Jack Pickford failed to rise. He was finding it hard to get up. The host looked over at the pitiful figure.

"Come on, Jack," he said. "Get up with the rest."

Jack made it. He arose and stood with the others. Mary was on one end of the line, while Jack was on the other.

The host raised his camera. Mary looked over at Jack and bit her lip. The camera began to click. Mary ran from her spot in the line to where Jack stood. She threw an arm around his shoulders and forced his face to meet hers. Then she spoke.

"Kiss me, Jack," she whispered. "Let the camera show that Jack will always love Mary and Mary will always love Jack."

Their lips met. The camera kept clicking. And the completed film does not show a film star and a boy who hit the chutes too hard.

It merely shows a plain woman who will always love her little brother no matter what he does.

FOR a score of years or more I have tramped through the jungle land of Africa on the trail of danger. And each of those years has been packed with enough thrills to last any ordinary human being a lifetime. But always I go back.

Every spring I come to America with wild animals for the zoos and circuses. Every fall finds me on my way back again.

It isn't altogether my love for animals that sends me back, year after year. It is also that moment of supreme danger when I unexpectedly meet one of the dreaded monarchs of the wild animal country face to face.

That's the greatest thrill there is. Each of those sudden, startling meetings brings as fresh and poignant a sensation as the last. You can't look across a few yards of underbrush at a furious, wild adversary, knowing that your life hangs in the balance, and grow blasé about it.

Every year I meet them face to face like that—and each time my pulses hammer just as hard as they did that first time years ago when I had the unexpected and very much undesired pleasure of looking up into the flaming eyes of a hyena that had broken out of its cage at my headquarters near Cape Town, South Africa.

Over twenty years ago that happened. And this hyena was the first animal I ever captured in Africa. I had caged him in a room on the first floor of my headquarters. One night I was awakened by strange sounds from the animal room. Taking a kerosene lamp, I went to investigate. I had hardly entered when the lamp chimney was knocked off as the door banged to, locking me in with the hyena, which was loose in the room. Yet, buoyed up by the training I had had in cowing escaped animals during my circus days, I brandished the flaming lamp and gradually backed the skulking beast into its cage. All through the terrific encounter I could watch the blood red orbs of its eyes as they pierced the comparative blackness of the room.

Then there was that face to face meeting with a leopard some years later in interior western Africa, six days' travel from Konikry. We had built four leopard traps which would capture the animals alive and uninjured, and were waiting until Mr. Leopard condescended to visit them. Each morning Hector went out to see if a leopard had succumbed to our deftly planted bait. But one morning I found Hector far too sick to send out. So I decided to take a few of the more trusted boys of the village and do this "dishwashing" of the leopard trapping myself. And it was one of these inexperienced boys that brought about the face to face meeting, with all its danger.

He had been strictly ordered to follow in the rear. But there is a zest these natives feel in capturing their enemy which makes them forget orders. This chap had sneaked off to the side, followed a detour, and come out far ahead of us, in the hope of reaching the last trap first and being able to announce the capture, in case he found a leopard there. He did find a leopard, but not in a trap. I had topped a little rise, where the ground was clear for a few yards, when, looking down, I gazed upon a sight to muster a man's forces.

Many yards ahead the truant boy went strolling along, quite at peace with his forest. But only one tree ahead of him a great, glossy black leopard crouched, ready to spring! The leopard was on a tree branch. I could almost see the tensing of his supple muscles, the glow from his eyes, as he waited until the boy came directly under his branch. I shouted:

"Turn back, me boy! Back—back—look up tree!" Words hardly shouted, when the great cat sprang. Boy and leopard went rolling over upon the soft carpet of the forest. I grabbed the rifle from my gun carrier and jumped to level ground, where there was better chance of a good shot. Then something happened that impressed me strongly. The leopard was up in a moment, leaving the boy limp and still as he turned and raced toward me with one purpose animating his terrific, graceful lurchings.

I had the rifle at my shoulder. But it seemed a forlorn chance. In the trembling seconds while I waited for the flash and report, I could anticipate the hot breath of the leopard as his jaws opened. I could hear the thumping of his heart. I could smell the blood which I knew was clotted upon his shaggy fur.

And seconds later I felt the sting of a sudden fall, the bite of hard ground under my head as that relaxing bundle of fur and claw rolled limply away. For the leopard had received a bullet through eye and brain a few paces from where I stood. He had still pushed on vengefully to reach his enemy, only to die as he toppled me off my feet. Save for some very blue bruises, I was unharmed. Save for a hysteria which amounted to frenzy, the boy upon whom the leopard had leaped was comparatively unharmed. And each escape was a miracle of the wild.

All of that happened several seasons ago. But no trip goes by without at least one encounter.

In fact, on my last trip I had several of those "face to face" meetings, one of them the closest call of any. This one was with a rhinoceros.

"Some day some old rhino will get you, if you don't learn more respect for them." So they told me at Konikry early in March when I toiled in from hard weeks in the Cameroons to my headquarters on the West Coast of Africa. I had brought in an assortment of animals and the story of the most intimate encounter I have ever had with a rhinoceros.

I had met him in the Cameroons and that chap was the bully, the bad man, the maniac of the jungle. I probably would never have made his acquaintance had not the afternoon's exploring trip proved so fasci-ing that I wandered on long after the hour when should have made camp. We trudged on over s, pushing through sharp grasses, skirting thorn es, here and there cutting through tangled vines now this, now that, sound or movement through foliage pricked my curiosity. I ended up chasing are butterfly with a handkerchief spread out for et, since I had a commission for these from a tern college. In a twinkling I reached it. But its rosy wings never lodged in my rovised net, for suddenly a ong odor brought me up uptly. There, gazing toward m from a thorn bush not many ds away, stood an old rhino. I anced around quickly for the s who had been following me. By they had melted away. The al throbbed with danger. The suden shock helped me to mar-sh all my mental and physical re-ources.

erhaps this great, black rhino-eros, seemingly just ready to ch-erge, did not really see me, for I ad learned years before that th eyesight of the rhino is very po-r. If I remained absolutely st- there was a chance he m-ht not distinguish me from th thorn bush. But any marked m-ion, I knew, would betray me at-once. So I decided to "wait ou- my adversary. The rhino de-ects its enemy largely by sc-nt. The wind was blow- from him to me. So far as odor we-t, I was safe. I must keep a cool head and wait—so I th-ught.

anguidly, telling myself how ca- I was, I turned my head to he left, ever so gingerly. And th- my senses reeled. There, on my left, a second rhinoceros lifted up its dull head toward me. I shot a glance to my right—just in time to see three more rhinos come slowly out of a clump of trees toward the thorn bushes not so far from me. The rhino dotes on thorn bush. Perhaps that is why his flesh is so tough and unpalatable.

In a semi-circle in front of me the five great, stupid beasts stood, their odors acrid on the breeze. Then I realized that they would finally come my way, for the thorn bushes grew thickly in front of me, and I strove for steady nerves as I decided that it would be mad to wait in hopes that they would pass the other way.

I would have to get away from there, somehow. Ever so slowly I backed away, never taking my eyes from the beasts. Then, after fifteen minutes of such tactics, I turned about to see how far I was from the first likely tree, and my eyes met a sight which made my cup of trouble overflow. Far to the right, in back of me, three other rhinos were "discussing" another thorn growth, while on my left three more were apparently dozing on their feet. I was standing in the center of eleven rhinos—five in front of me, and six behind. And, at any moment, one of them might spy me and spread the alarm to all the others. The only way out was by a retreat directly between the two groups behind me.

I got down on my hands and knees and crawled like a worm. Two hundred yards away stood a cottonwood tree. Would I be able to reach that before I was discovered? I pushed on cautiously. After what seemed like hours of endless crawling the cottonwood loomed just ahead. Safety, at last! I stood up and looked again at the rhinos. They had all shifted about, and had moved some distance farther away. So I decided to be bold and struggle on to where the boys must be awaiting me in ambush. As I stepped farther into the tree clump I came upon my favorite pillow, which my personal carrier must have dropped in his retreat. I rescued it. A little farther on I spied my mattress. "The rascal," I thought.

Then I pushed out of the clump of tress—and halted abruptly.

Not more than twenty yards directly ahead of me stood a full grown rhino, who must have strayed away from one of the two groups that had been behind me. He was looking straight at me. And he saw me! There wasn't any question about it this time! He lowered his ugly head, and I knew he meant business. Any African veteran knows there is one desperate recipe when a rhino comes charging down upon you. If you can't get a shot at him, stand perfectly still until the beast is nearly on you. Then, when he is little more than a foot away, step quickly to one side. His slow brain doesn't function quickly enough, and he charges straight on by.

He was charging now! Now was the time to try that old recipe!

But my tingling nerves would not let me stand waiting for such a charmed second. I stood there as long as I could. And then, just as he thundered up, I jumped aside and threw my pillow in his face. Then I raced for the nearest cottonwood. He caught the pillow on his horns and, as I climbed to safety in the branches of the cottonwood, I saw the old fellow tear that pillow up and toss it about until the kapok snowed out through the undergrowth. Then he turned back and "bucked" the mattress. He worried that until it was gutted all over his path. After that, it seemed, he had satisfied his spleen, and so he trotted off, with kapok sticking to hide and horns. As I made my way back to my boys I wondered if the old fellow told the other rhinos about the strange creature with a white face that curiously split into a kapok stream when he started to use his horns.

In that same Cameroon country I once had a brush with another rhino when I could afford to laugh at him. We had come to a group of trees where we intended to rest for luncheon. The porters had just set down their burdens and I was stretching out when a shrill whoop cut the air. I sat upright. Through some thorn bushes thirty yards away a little rhino calf showed its ludicrous head. Then a great cow rhino looked through the thorns at us for a second before withdrawing with what seemed like a very disapproving glance, and then guided her calf over the slope.

While we were watching her interestedly a large male rhino crashed through the thorn bushes and headed straight for us. Once more my boys melted away. I wasn't far behind, shinnying up a cottonwood with an agility that did proud to a man of my years. As I reached haven my tree started swaying. Old man rhino below was butting his impregnable head against the base of my refuge.

I decided to try another tree. It wasn't a particularly dangerous moment, nor was I greatly alarmed. Still, I preferred a shelter that did not sway in such seaisick fashion. I swung from the branch of one tree to its neighbor, then shinnied to a safe place in a crotch where branch and trunk met. Safe at last, I looked down. The old chap was still bucking my first tree. Bark, green ferns and rich black earth mixed in an angry melee. He butted and he roared; he roared and he butted. But at last his feelings were satisfied, and he trotted off over the hill.

Whenever I think of rhinos I recall that time when we had stopped to rest at noon-day on high ground under a pleasant grove of sandalwood. Struggling to keep awake for my luncheon tea, I suddenly caught sight of two dim, black objects in the distance. I reached for my glasses. A small animal was fleeing madly from a larger one. Five minutes passed as the two raced toward me. As they came nearer I could see that the animal in front was a buck, which was running for its life from an infuriated rhinoceros. The buck's soft flanks were smoky blue with perspiration as it raced gamely on.

Far away, at length, it fell—never to rise again. The rhino came lumbering up and stopped. Lowering its head, it prodded the flanks of the buck with its tusks, and then, wheeling about, it trotted off.

Why the old rhino pursued the buck to its death has always puzzled me. Food could not have been the reason, for the rhino never eats animal flesh. Perhaps he was seized with some such insanity as comes to his first cousin, the elephant, when he has, as we say, "gone must." Or perhaps the buck had inadvertently interrupted the rhino at his napping and the beast had taken vengeance.

Not so many weeks later we saw the most genuine expression of animal grief that I ever hope to witness. It was blazing noon-day. We had just discovered a village recently deserted. Only a day or so before people must have been living there, for chickens still scratched about the doors of the grass huts along the one "street" of the village, and within we discovered coarsely ground meal, bright beads, cheap "trade mirrors" and blankets—all evidences of a hasty retreat. But no inhabitants could we discover.

We stopped for luncheon in the guest house, a structure open on four sides, shaded by a roof. While Hector was getting lunch an almost human sound in the woods impelled me to grasp my pistol and creep out. I came upon a pathetically human sight. An adult female chimpanzee lay dead. Crouching near her body, beating its small breasts with its small hands and actually shedding tears was a baby chimpanzee. The little creature embraced its dead mother, touched eyes, placed its face against her breast. I stole back for Hector and we captured the baby in ten minutes. But, unhappily, it did not live.

I have often wondered why that village was deserted. Perhaps the dead chimpanzee had something to do with it. Or perhaps the sudden exit of the natives may be explained by the sight we met shortly after taking up our march again. Ten minutes distant, we came upon a native killed in the horrible way in which the great apes dispatch their enemies, after the first rib-cracking embrace. Perhaps the villagers had fled after a desperate battle with a daring band of chimpanzees.

In that high Cameroon country we discovered many chimpanzees, rarer gorillas and, I am sure, a curious type of great ape, product of the intermingling of these two.

The most careful preparation must precede a chimpanzee raid, to insure success. We cut liana, dried it, split it and wove it into great nets.

With these we fenced off trees where the apes rested at night, working with great stealth and silence. When my boys had been, judiciously placed in the trees and on the ground I gave the signal. There was a fierce flurry and wild noise of crying chimpanzees as the boys shook the great apes to the ground. Then came a wild, hot scrimmage and tussle as the boys below threw the nets about the quarry. Thus tangled, they were dragged to transporting cages.

We caught a number of them, but an intriguing, half-grown ape which I had seen dimly during the patient days when we were preparing for the finale eluded us. He clung to a high branch and shivered, but he would not budge. I decided to get this chap, if I could.

There is no space to describe the delays and enticements of that campaign. But necessity, the mother of invention, helped me to devise a snare which at last did the work. I stretched this snare, which was a liana net, just under the branch where the ape often slept and set a bunch of bananas nicely in its center.

The first three nights the ape was shy. On the fourth he came back, resting for a time in the tree crotch above the bananas. Soon, however, he fell for the lure of the bait. The beast was bagged in a twinkling and after that it was easy to let him down gently and move him into a transporting cage.

I have here recounted some of the other thrills that come to the men who go to Africa each year in search of wild animals—but none of them can compare with that moment of supreme danger when you suddenly come face to face with one of the dreaded monarchs of the jungle. That is the greatest thrill of them all.

What Has Happened to Justice?

struck White in the eye and killed him instantly.

Mrs. Thaw screamed. "My God, Harry, what have you done?"

"It's all right, dearie," he said, embracing her. "I've probably saved your life."

An officer appeared and Thaw turned the gun over to him, saying, "He ruined my wife. He had this coming to him."

Three days later he was indicted, but nineteen months passed before he went to trial before Justice Fitzgerald. Even in this country that is regarded as rather a long while to delay matters. District Attorney William T. Jerome headed the prosecution, and D. M. Delmas, celebrated San Francisco attorney, headed the array of defense counsel. Tremendous interest attended the proceedings.

Thaw's lawyers contended that their client had been insane at the time of the killing, but that he afterward became rational.

The sensations of the trial reached a climax when Evelyn took the stand and related the story of her seduction. The defendant's mother attended every session. The trial was halted to permit a sanity commission to examine Harry; they pronounced him sane at the time of their examinations.

Delmas, in his argument to the jury, charged Evelyn's mother with receiving the wages of her child's downfall, that she betecked herself with diamonds bought with the profits of Evelyn's shame. He also charged that the mother had even assisted the prosecution.

Jerome called the tragedy a mere sordid Tenderloin homicide, and referred to Evelyn's testimony as a tissue of lies invented to keep a deliberate, cold blooded murderer out of the death house.

The case went to the jury on April 10. They deliberated forty-seven hours, reported that they could not agree, and were discharged. Seven jurors believed Thaw guilty as charged, while five had voted for an acquittal on the ground of insanity.

The second trial began on January 6,

1908, almost a year after the first, before Justice Dowling. Martin W. Littleton headed the defense this time and produced evidence to show that Thaw had inherited insanity. On February 1 the defendant was found not guilty on the ground of insanity and he was immediately transferred to the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane.

That might be the end of the story but it isn't.

Thaw attempted to procure his release within a few weeks. Justice Morschauser dismissed his writ of habeas corpus, maintaining that he was still insane. The following year a similar petition came up before Justice Isaac Mills in White Plains.

Several alienists testified that Harry was a degenerate paranoiac and would never recover, while a Mrs. Susan Merrill testified that she had for years rented rooms to Thaw and that he had brought more than 100 girls to the rooms, chiefly for the purpose of lashing them with a whip.

Mrs. Merrill said Thaw had given her considerable money to purchase the girls' silence. A former defense attorney also testified that he had paid hush money, amounting to $30,000, to feminine acquaintances of the eccentric Harry.

Justice Mills dismissed the writ, ruling that the release of the petitioner would be dangerous to public peace and safety and that he was afflicted with chronic delusion insanity.

Thaw went back to Matteawan.

In the ensuing years there were other attempts to gain him his freedom. His mother's money poured forth in a never ending stream. Probably no murder defendant has proved such an expense as this man, not only to his family but to the state.

Finally, on August 17, 1913, the Thaw forces found a way out. On that day Harry escaped from Matteawan.

He was caught in Canada and locked up in New Hampshire, but he never went back to Matteawan. In March, 1915, some nineteen months after his escape, he was found not guilty of conspiracy in connection with his delivery from the asylum, and three months later Justice Peter A. Hendrick, of the supreme court of New York, decided that the killer of Stanford White was sane.

Thaw went free.

That same year he was also released from his marriage to Evelyn Nesbit. In 1922, while Harry was in Matteawan, his wife returned from a trip to Europe with a child, Russell, born in 1910. She said that Russell was Harry's son but Thaw denied this. She has never been able to have the child recognized as an heir to the Thaw millions.

Two years later another sensation. Thaw was arrested in January, 1917, on a charge of having attacked Frederick Gump, Jr., 19, in a New York hotel. The Thaw forces again went into action. They had Harry adjudged insane and hurried him to Kirkbridge's sanitarium, in West Philadelphia. It was not until January, 1924, that the Gump case was settled out of court for $100,000.

Again there was the same old rigmarole. With the Gump case safely out of the way, the Thaw lawyers went into a huddle, and the outcome was a court decision that Harry was now sane.

Tired of Toast?

Toast Almost Every One Likes—Likes to Such an Extreme That Every So Often He Is Tired of It. At Such Times—or to Avoid Such Times—Vary the Breakfast Routine With Some of These Alternatives—Honey or Maple Toast, or a Savory Cheese Spread

By Elizabeth Emmons

IMAGINATION is one of the ingredients which a good cook cannot well do without. Scallions may pinch-hit for chives or milk and a bit of extra butter serve for the cream demanded in a sauce, but there is no adequate substitute for imagination. Toast, especially at breakfast time, is an unfortunate food which the housekeeper is likely to regard as just a background for butter and possibly marmalade—and nothing more. Not but that plain toast, just the right shade of even, golden brown, of crispness or of softness, is an excellent ally for starting the day right, but to omit all the multiple variations of the toast theme is a real deprivation.

Almost any kind of fancy bread makes good toast. Whole wheat has become too much of a standby to be in the fancy bread category, for although it takes a bit longer to toast, it has a place as a morning regular. Brown bread—Boston brown, that is—is less often found in the toaster, but this is an excellent way to dispose of left-over slices. This bread takes quite a long time to toast and is always moist, but it has a delightful flavor and absorbs butter in much the same way as when it was just steamed! There are rarely any of the loaves of date bread, nut bread or peanut bread left, but they also make unusual toast which is much appreciated.

Rolls, reheated once, are difficult to dispose of without weakly resorting to bread puddings and brown betties, but toasted rolls are excellent and easy to prepare. Slice the rolls so that they will fit into the toaster and serve toasted rolls in place of the usual toasted bread. One family of our acquaintance is so attached to home-made rolls toasted that joyed than when the cinnamon and sugar are sprinkled on the buttered toast. It is "gooey-ier," and yet there is less danger of sprinkling yourself with the top dressing during the eating process.

$\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter
6 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon

Mix the sugar and cinnamon, crushing all lumps carefully. Add butter, creamed to smoothness, and stir until thoroughly mixed. Toast bread on one side and spread the untoasted side with the mixture. Place the bread on a broiler and put under the flame for two or three minutes. This mixture may also be spread on toast which has been toasted on both sides and will still be superior to the buttered toast sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon. This spread may be made in advance, for it will keep for several days if put in a covered jar in the ice box. Two tablespoons of ground nuts make a welcome variation. English muffins toasted, are well

Cinnamon toast is much richer when the cinnamon and butter are creamed together, and the bread, toasted on one side, spread with this mixture and placed under the broiler for a few minutes

Milk toast is far more than invalid's fare when it is daintily served, with the toast crisp and buttered in the soup plate and a pitcher of steaming milk beside it, ready to pour

For maple toast spread the shaved maple sugar on the toast as it comes from the toaster, so the sugar will melt in lusciously they demand an extra supply be made so that there will surely be some to toast! Cold muffins, too, improve with toasting. Coffee cake is another left-over which becomes unpopular with repeated servings. Sliced and toasted, it is a delightful afternoon tea dainty!

Cinnamon Toast

Cinnamon toast that associate of boarding school and college days, never seems to lose its popularity. If made by the following recipe it is even more en-known, but English muffins, split, toasted, well buttered and spread with anchovy paste are another exciting discovery. Perhaps the best go-with for a vegetable plate which we have met yet is toasted English muffins, lightly buttered, heaped with cheese and set under the broiler flame to melt the cheese.

Honey Cinnamon Toast

A delicious tea toast is made by mixing hot honey and butter together in the proportion of two parts honey to one part butter; add a generous sprinkling of cinnamon and spread very thinly on toasted white bread.

At the other end of the scale from these rich—and for some of us, at least—all too enticing toasts, is melba toast, which has become an integral part of most reducing diets. This toast is very hard and of wafer thinness so that one gets as few calories as possible yet has a sense of eating something substantial!

To make melba toast, slice the bread as thin as possible and allow it to dry for one hour. Then bake it in a hot oven for about five minutes. It should be brown all the way through.

Milk toast can be, perhaps, the most delightful of toasts when properly made, but too many people remember sad, soggy specimens served to them when either extreme youth or illness made it impossible for them to run away.

For milk toast which is really deserving of the name, the toast should be freshly made, the milk should be piping hot and the two combined just before one starts eating. For seasoning, add salt, pepper, if you like it, and a generous spoon of butter to the milk while it is heating. The toast may be buttered or not as one prefers.

Invalid's Milk Toast

1 cup rich milk or thin cream
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
2 slices toast
Quince jelly

Make a cream sauce of the butter, flour and milk—if the cream is used, mix the flour with a little cold milk and stir into the cream, omitting the butter. Pour the sauce over the toast and serve with quince jelly.

Milk toast may be the basis of many Sunday night suppers either as the simple dish given above, or served with more elaborate sauces so that the toast becomes almost secondary in importance.

Savory Milk Toast

2 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Salt to taste
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup diced or grated cheese
6 slices toast.

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Salt to taste and add the cheese, stirring until it is melted. Pour the sauce over the toast. Serve with cole slaw and a dessert of fresh or canned fruit and gingerbread or cookies.

Milk Toast Piquant

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 cup celery puree
Salt, pepper and cayenne
6 slices toast.

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Add a cup of celery puree made by stewing the leaves and tough stalks, minced, of celery in just enough water to cover, until tender. Season lightly with salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne and pour over the toast, which should be buttered and very hot. Tomato jelly salad may accompany this, with apple pie for dessert.

Harlequin Milk Toast

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup butter
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup flour
2 cups milk
2 hard cooked eggs
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup cooked green peas
Salt, pepper, paprika
6 slices toast.

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Add the coarsely chopped whites of the eggs and the green peas; season to taste with the salt and pepper; pour over slices of hot buttered toast and over all rice the yolks of the eggs. Dash with paprika, garnish with parsley and serve at once. This is a very ornamental, hearty and nutritious main dish. Lettuce with Russian dressing may be served with it and chocolate cottage pudding for dessert.

Things New and Old About the Bible

BY REV. W. P. KING.

HERE is a variety of experiences among the saints of God in the Scriptures as truly as in the history of the Christian church. But with all the difference in temperament, there is perfect agreement as to the soul's need of forgiveness, and the fact of the forgiving mercy of God.

A consciousness of antagonism to Christianity is succeeded by a consciousness of harmony with it. "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature."

Men differ in the faculties of spiritual discernment. Some will have a more religious temperament, and faith comes easier.

There are some three distinct types of religious experience. First, there are those who have an intense conviction of sin and are urged to the Christian life primarily through fear of punishment. Second, there are those who are urged forward in search of an unattained ideal. Third, there are those who seek to bring to unity the inward disharmony, when for example the will and affections are in conflict.

A difference in religious experience results from the fact that there are different types of sinners.

First, there is the disreputable sinner, who has fallen victim to the sins of the flesh. His transition to the Christian life is demonstrative. Second, there is the respectable sinner, whose sins are sins of disposition, for example, pride, envy and avarice. There is the mystical sinner, whose sin is a selfish isolation from the duties and relationships of society.

As to the matter of suddenness of conversion or a definite crisis which is distinctly marked as to time, this is not of essential importance. The sufficient evidence of one's conversion and regeneration is the present possession of spiritual life. In the realm of human affection, you know that you love your mother, though you do not remember when you began to love her. There is another love, which many of you have experienced, the beginning of which you distinctly remember. The glance of her eyes pierced your heart one day. In her presence after the shadows of evening fall, time passed so fast that you could almost see the hands of the clock move. We enter in different ways into the religious life, and we should avoid the narrowness that would make all conform to one type. "The city of God has twelve gates and every one is a gate of pearl."

We find that extremes meet in that both the behaviorism of the new psychology and the traditionalism of the old orthodoxy are distrustful of the testimony of the spiritual consciousness of the individual.

Behaviorism resolves this consciousness into physical reflexes, and traditionalism seeks for a visible foundation of religious faith in the formulated statements of ecclesiastical creeds. The materialistic theory does not concern us here, as we are considering only the theological theories involved.

The placing of authority in the historic creeds is an effort to play safe and to find a sure anchor on a stormy sea. These creeds merely represent the effort of the churchmen of past generations to give an interpretation of their spiritual consciousness. By no genuine process of reasoning can these thought-forms be made binding for our own intellect or conscience. These thought-forms may serve us as mile-stones, but should not be allowed to become mill-stones.

Brierly writes: "When, for instance, we are asked to believe on the authority of a dogma, the question immediately arises: 'Whence does the dogma derive its authority?' If it be answered that its authority found itself on that of the church, we ask again: 'Wherein lies the authority of the church?' Or, if we are pointed to the Bible the same query again emerges. And as we listen to the cry of another party, 'Neither church nor Bible is the ultimate authority; the final voice is that of Christ'; the insistent question once more offers itself: 'Whence the authority of Christ?' We are at last, it seems, thrust back finally on a question of origins. We pass up through nineteen centuries of historical Christianity to its beginnings. But the moment we begin to reflect on the beginnings we discover that all the contents of Christianity; its dogma, its church, its Bible, its Christ resolve themselves inevitably into one question, that of experience."

The authority of Jesus is the authority of a direct intuitive knowledge. Christ's doctrine of God and life and the world sprang out of his experience. The experience of His followers was a result of their fellowship with Him. The heart and life of the New Testament is its record of spiritual experience, and the same is true of the Old Testament.

There is a human proneness to seek external props and supports. A teacher in India replied to the questions of a student that the earth rested on a huge elephant and the elephant stood on a huge tortoise, and the tortoise was supported by a rock. He became irritated at further questioning and replied, "It's rock all the way down."

We vainly imagine that we would feel more secure if our evidence for God could be supported by physical and tangible realities.

Years ago Dr. Lyman Abbott wrote: "A people who cry out for certainty of a physical kind forget that in the very nature of things it is impossible for the infinite to make his presence indisputably manifest at any time among any people; to evidence his being with the same physical certainty and to make his presence as definite; palatable, and tangible. If God were to reveal himself as a human personality reveals itself, not only by spiritual and intellectual influences, of all kinds, but by a tangible presence, freedom would vanish from the world and then would be an instant annihilation of the human will. One of the most marvelous things about the stage of education, through which we pass in this life, is the respect which the infinite pays to our personality, the scrupulous care with which we are protected from what might be called the invasion of the divine. Otherwise every man would be struck dumb, every will would be subjugated, freedom would vanish like a flash of lightning; the whole race would be hypnotized, so to speak. The world of moral activity, with freedom of choice, the chief function of which is to produce character, would be annihilated; and in its place would be substituted a world of necessity in which men would be puppets. The world is full of the evidences of God's presence; but nowhere does He force Himself on men. Pascal wisely said: 'God wishes to render himself perfectly recognizable to those who seek Him with their whole heart, and hidden from those who shun Him with all their heart.' It is because we are his children and not mere puppets of the divine ingenuity and miraculous mechanism that he leaves us free to accept or reject Him."

It may be observed, however, in this connection that modern science has resulted in a transformation of our ideas of physical certainty.

Matter which has seemed so real and solid is dissolved into protons and whirling electrons, and our senses do not give the true conception. We are compelled to use faith or scientific imagination. The arm of the desk on which I write is not the compact solid substance which it appears to be. My physical senses easily lead me into error concerning the quality of the substance of this material thing. I am convinced and confident that I am not mistaken that my hand is resting on something that is objective; while our physical senses are sometimes mistaken, always imperfect, and need to be corrected, we accept with absolute certainty their testimony to an outside reality. Our consciousness testifies to objective spiritual realities with a directness and immediateness that is not true of the testimony of the senses to the outer material realities.

Sunday Health Talks —By— William Brady, M. D.

PERTINACIOUS correspondents will not forget that in a reckless moment I promised to report how far I might get in my attempt to run around the park meadow drive. I even explained that a guy of my age ought to run a straight mile at his own gait without getting unduly puffed, and that I was resuming training with the Brady Symphony in preparation for the test, having discovered that my wind was good for no more than a half-mile run, thanks to the accursed gasoline buggy.

The gas wagon tells against health in two ways: first, because it is such a temptation when a fellow really should be afoot; and second, because it makes the hoofing almost everywhere too perilous for one who wishes for long life. If I ever do finish that mile I imagine it will be in a roll, propelled by the successive impacts of divers bumpers. When I vowed to report results here I cherished an optimistic notion that one might eventually duck across the meadow drive and do a mile in comparative safety on the greensward of the meadow itself. I know better now. In the remote chance that one should get into the meadow unscathed, it is quite likely that the reward for the accomplishment would be a crack on the occiput from some old party's niblick or a sting in the ribs from a fair archer's deadly weapon.

On the whole the safest kind of exercise these days is the right-about-face. I need not assure old readers that I shall never grow dizzy doing this stunt. But I do try it occasionally, and not without some grace. When I think I'm right I'm pretty mulish about it, but when I find I have made a mistake, that is a horse of another color.

Wednesday, June 19, I answered here a reader's query about the use of chemical obliteration treatment (of varicose veins in the legs) for hemorrhoids, by saying this method is not applicable to hemorrhoids, which are varicose veins, all right, but unlike the dilated or enlarged veins in the legs they cannot be shut off above and below while the chemical is being injected.

A few days later came a private communication from a prominent leader of the clergy, describing the cure of his own hemorrhoids by injection treatments administered by a reputable specialist. The minister says "I received several treatments, each about three minutes long and painless, and I was able to walk to and from the doctor's office for each treatment. The effect was perfect and permanent. The only time I may have had a reaction was one day following an injection my temperature rose several degrees, but this may have been simply coincidence and due to some other cause; at any rate it subsided without further trouble."

The reversed gentleman adds a comment that I think fairly reflects our stiff-necked professional attitude:

"I was afterward told by the oldest and best-informed physician in our city that the method was exceedingly dangerous. My family physician also told me that I was a lucky man to escape bad results." I think it is entirely probable that both of the medical brethren spoke from hearsay and prejudice, not from experience. Precisely the same attitude has been assumed by too many of the rank and file of the medical profession toward the chemical obliteration of varicose veins. What we need in medicine today is a housecleaning, particularly of the political side, and the scrapping of a lot of our "authorities" whose theories and teachings will not hold water.

In his excellent book, "Troubles We Don't Talk About," (Lippincott Co., Philadelphia and Chicago) Dr. J. F. Montague says, "In my opinion the method which permits a cure of hemorrhoids without operation is one of the most beneficial features in the modern treatment of rectal diseases.

The treatment I refer to is known as the injection treatment, and consists of injecting with a fine needle . . . must not be confused with enema or irrigation treatment . . ."

When I gave the thoughtless and incorrect answer to the correspondent June 19, I was thinking so intently on the technic of the chemical obliteration of varicose veins in the legs that I failed to regard hemorrhoids (piles) as varicose veins, which is just what they are. That is my apology for the mistake; that and a reasonable amount of good ethical medical prejudice against anything exploited largely by quacks. I confess I share this prejudice to a reasonable extent and I am not apologizing for it.

Properly given, the chemical injection treatment is as successful and as painless in a great many selected cases of piles or hemorrhoids as our clerical friend found it. Of course, the ordinary surgical treatment is best in some cases; but even surgical removal of hemorrhoids is done in a majority of cases without the necessity of general anesthesia nowadays; the skillful surgeon completely and painlessly operates on most cases of piles under local anesthetics. In any case there is no good reason, it seems to me, why a victim of piles should place himself in the hands of a quack or a shady institution where he will be bled shamefully even if his piles are cured without operation. There are plenty of good reputable rectal specialists in practice in every city; why pay for all the expensive advertising the charlatans have to do in order to bring the fish to their net?

The man who cured the minister's hemorrhoids is a member of his local county and state medical societies. That means, to me, that he is in good standing—though it doesn't prove it. I consider it presumptive evidence of a doctor's professional standing. A disreputable practitioner, an unlicensed man, a doctor whose conduct is questionable, cannot long hold membership or fellowship in the county, state or national medical societies. If a member turns to quackery or unquestionable practices he is likely to be expelled. How much this means to a physician or specialist you may judge by the commotion raised whenever a bad egg is thrown out of the medical organization. Of course, the medical society is not infallible in passing on such cases, and possibly some doctors are unfairly or unjustly excluded from fellowship, but neither is the United States supreme court infallible—yet what are you going to do about it if the final decision is unfavorable to your views?

Now that I have executed the right-about, I beg to acknowledge popular applause and by way of encorse to recall an item printed in this column May 21, 1928, in which I assured a querist that operation was the only permanent cure for piles. A doctor who had employed the injection treatment with success wrote me politely enough that he felt I had misinformed the correspondent, and offered to treat any pile sufferers I might refer to him, without charge, and then let me judge whether the injection treatment was satisfactory. I declined the offer on the ground that the doctor was without evident professional standing. That is, I found he was without membership in his county or state medical society. As I have already explained, this does not condemn a doctor as disreputable, but to my mind it is presumptive evidence that there's something off color about him. Of course, it may be that he is just a queer gink and refuses to comply with the terms on which an outsider may acquire membership in the representative medical faculty or organization. But I desire to make this belated acknowledgment that I did misinform the correspondent when I said that operation was the only permanent cure for piles. It was the only permanent cure I knew about then. I know better now. Ain't science progressing fast.

Mussolini As Prince Charming

The Interviewer Never Knows Which of the Many Moods of Il Duce He Will Confront When An Audience With Italy's Dictator Is Granted.

BY MARY HOWELL.

ROME, September 21.—Everyone said, "Why don't you interview Mussolini?" But, I asked, "What right had I unless for special reasons, to disturb a busy man running the biggest game in Europe."

To which my friend, Duke Filippo Caffarelli, whose wife is an American, said, "but Mussolini asks to see you, he wants to see you, you must see him!"

Alas, these Roman princes are great flatterers. I sighed, and packed up my suitcase and motored me down to Ostia to catch the next plane back to Genoa. But due to a windy day and a cautious Italian pilot, planes were not flying, and I motored back to old Rome to find a large envelope, a little smaller than my suitcase with a blue-lettered inscription on the fly-leaf, "Ministero degli Affari Esteri, Il Capo dell' Ufficio Stampa," which in plain English read, "Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Head of the Press Bureau," communicating that his excellency, the head of Italy's government would receive me at Chigi Palace at 7:45 o'clock that very afternoon and expressing "his excellency's pleasure to hold a conversation," signed Capasso Torre, Count Carpasso, who is chief of Mussolini's press bureau.

The letter went to my head like wine, yet if timid as a trout and humblest of scribes, after all I was a very important person, representing the American press. I danced a tarantella, as any gypsy bitten by a spider, and told my friends, who immediately ordered a tea party at Concordia, beloved rendezvous in Rome of authors and artists, today of Pirandello and Shaw, as formerly of Roosevelt and Morgan. "It's an enormous room where the chief receives," said the sculptor, "and he is very glum—but can laugh."

"At what hour shall we call for you in the motor?" asked a friend.

"At no hour. For I shall walk there, as if making a call on any friend. If I were to motor over I would have too much time to think."

At 7:40 I arrived by foot at the great entrance of the old Palace Chigi in the heart of Rome, and walked in. The tallest liveried doorman stood at the door, and one of three fascists at the telephone exchange rose.

"I've an appointment with his excellency, the head of government," I said, presenting my visiting card. The youth read it—the government is run by youths—pressed a button, a green light responded, and "upstairs," he said, waving me on.

At the foot of the great palace stairs a plainclothes man raised his hand in the Roman salute, and I slowly mounted the silent grand stairway to the top where a handsome gentleman saluted Romanly, asked my business, passed me through a palace room where senators and press men seated in cathedral chairs waited for press news. They all stared as I was ushered into a small adjoining room; centered by a marble bust of the great Condottiero Colonna on its pedestal.

An usher took my card and disappeared. I waited, twenty minutes, thirty, forty minutes passed. I heard a motor car enter the courtyard below and approached the window. Was this Mussolini returning from the senate? But only two gentlemen with long beards got out.

Finally, in despair, I sought Don Filippo. "What!" he exclaimed, "why, your appointment was at 5:45. His excellency is waiting for you," and muttering "imbecile ushers," he disappeared to reappear and vanish again. But now, two ushers leading, I followed a broad and dimly lit corridor at the end of which was a closed door, where a group of men were gathered.

These five men dropped away, the door opened as if at some magic sesame, and closed behind me silently.

I stood within an immense room, so large it runs the length of the entire block. I paused. The light was blinding. In the blaze of electric light at the far far end was a table, a dark figure, that distance made diminutive and distinct as when looks down a telescope.

Suddenly the distant figure rose, agile as a tiger advancing, took both my hands in his, and guided me to the far distant table. It was Mussolini, the head of Italy's government, the man who is pounding out history with a capital in Europe today. He led me by both hands as one leads a child, seated me in a chair beside the wide table. How bored the busy man must be at some of these audiences! Not another soul was in the vast palace room.

"You are X. X.," he said in English. His face contorted. He leaned close to me and scrutinized me as Peter doubtless does at the gate!

"And you are Mussolini!" I said, as the Indian to Columbus. So we were discovered!

Then swiftly as a hound he was around the other side of the table. He seemed to dance on the balls of his feet as a ballet girl, or like a cowboy used to moving freely, accustomed to riding daring mounts, he, who led a hundred thousand men on Rome out of forty millions, who might all have been shot as revolutionists. I noted his English was stilted, so decided I better use my stilted Italian, so as not to miss a shade of meaning.

The big black eyes fastened upon me, never left my face. Mussolini leaned over the table—so wide no assassin's hand could reach him. I, who had never met him before, felt as if I were talking to my brother, such is his human quality.

His face is lined and seamed with nerves like a raised clay map of Italy itself, furrows and corded nerves, a face of profound thought as Dante's, the face of a brooding tragic actor, the black protruding eyes brilliant, eyes which give his face the remarkable expression. The eyebrows are penciled and the brow high and very white. Cheek dimples occasionally deepen above the iron jaw.

At times, with the contortions, the face is that of a madman were it not saved by the vivid magnificent eyes. His very body seems to vibrate with energy from an inner powerful dynamo, and the vibrations beat beyond his body in great waves, like a machine which would shake itself to pieces, this man who heads six portfolios, with his passion for details. He was the most alive creature I've ever seen, a superman, as all men should be. And he was groomed as a prince of the blood, Italy's great obscure adventurer, who only a brief time ago knew not whether riding boots or hard shirt was correct.

His rapid machine volley of questions were beyond me.

"Stop!" I cried, "my brain can't go so fast!"

He laughed like a boy.

"What do you think of the international marriages, there are so many, Italian and American?"

"Two great strong nations." He raised his two hands before my eyes, intertwined his fingers, "A powerful union."

"And these children of Italo-American marriages?"

"Children of youth, of the two greatest youngest nations."

"The song of fascism is youth—spring!"

"Not Balillas, but little Columbuses—"

"Magnificent!" said Mussolini.

The tables were turned. I wasn't interviewing Mussolini, but Mussolini was interviewing me. His questions followed so rapidly I could not get in one of mine. "What and what and what?" he demanded.

He wanted to know everything. He thanked me with such alacrity that it stunned me, keyed up as I was for a stern reception, a "glum man." The gallant Italian was a Prince Charming, when I had prepared myself for an iron ruler. The same Prince Charming, who waked the enchanted princess, which is Italy, with his world-resounding smask. I retired, bewildered by it all, grasping in my hand his photograph a foot square, with its dedication.

Mussolini, the most talked-of man on the globe today now in only the second act of fascism, rose.

And like one of the strange characters on a Pirandellian stage, I made my exit breathlessly, leaving the center of the stage to Italy's leading man.

their sex against the unconscionable and unpredictable sex. Still, all three had a strange sense of relief and well being, mingled with their apprehensions.

"He says I'm suffering from a disease, a moral disease. And he's prescribed the cure, and I shall take it. It starts with an ultimatum—to you, dad."

"That all?" murmured Mr. Emmarce, diplomatically.

"Either you've had a very successful day, dad, or you've been talking to mother and she's warned you to mind your p's and q's with me."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Emmarce, dropping into a chair, as if to say: "Well, I'm out without my umbrella. Let it rain, and be hanged to it!"

"The ultimatum is," Myrtle explained, "either you let me—I should say either you encourage me, positively force me, to attend a business college and a school of household training, and work day and night seriously, and you keep me at it, with a whip if necessary, whether I want or not—or—"

"Or?"

"Or I walk straight out of the house, sell my jewels—the emeralds alone ought to be ample—and go into lodgings and live on the proceeds until I've learned something useful and got my mind into order.

and got all this midnight frolic foolishness out of my system. That's what Cuthbert advises."

"I didn't quite—" Cuthbert began.

"Yes, you did, and you know you did," Myrtle interrupted him violently.

"I accept," said Mr. Emmarce.

"If I succeeded, perhaps Cuthbert will graciously condescend to marry me, though he's very angry with me because it seems I've been making him into a rotter too."

"Look here, I say, Myrtle," Cuthbert exploded. "You're going a bit too far. Mr. Emmarce, believe me—"

"Don't get ideas into your head," she remarked threateningly. "There's a tremendous lot to be done, and I dare say I shan't manage to do it, being a rotter. But you may take it from me I won't marry anybody—I mean I won't go into the labor market, because that's what it amounts to, until I've got something to offer."

Cuthbert seized her left hand, and with brutal force, inexcusably wreaking his physical superiority of a male upon a weak defenseless girl, pulled Myrtle almost viciously towards him. Degrading sight! They were hushed, awed, motionless in the presence and grip of a power which they had yet scarcely begun to understand. The room had ceased to be a drawing room. It had ceased to exist. They were alone together in space.

rive at and which are just as earnestly endeavoring to confute."

"Don't use words like that," admonished Dayne, "and don't call me Mr. Dayne. Say 'Captain Dayne' when you speak to me."

However, he changed the wording of his opening speech when he resumed. "We're here to try to find out whether this man, Stephen Hard, now under arrest, is guilty of killing Professor Eric Dahlstrom, commander of this expedition. Are you ready to commence?"

"The prosecution is ready," Roy Collier left his seat, and remained standing.

"The defense is ready," said Judge Cavendish, without getting up.

"All right, let's hear what you got to say."

"Captain Dayne," began Collier with due formality, "we intend to prove two things. First, that Professor Dahlstrom was killed; and, second, that the person who killed him is the prisoner, Mr. Stephen Hard. By saying that we intend to prove Professor Dahlstrom was killed, we mean simply that we intend to establish the fact that he died a violent death at the hands of some outside agency and that he did not expire naturally or as the result of self-inflicted wounds. It is, perhaps, especially favorable to the cause of justice that you, Captain Dayne, presiding officer of this court, were not present at the time our party arrived and discovered the evidence of this crime, because the facts in the case can now be set before you in logical order and you will be able to get a less biased point of view than any of the rest of us who are probably confused by our emotional reactions to the brutality of this murder."

"Dr. Waters," continued Collier, "will you please take the stand?"

The boyish looking young medical man moved up to a seat next to Dayne.

"It is understood," proceeded Collier evenly, "that you and all other witnesses are subject to the customary obligation to speak the truth and nothing but the truth. If this is agreeable to the defense, we will waive the customary swearing of witnesses."

Judge Cavendish nodded. "It is agreeable to the defense."

"A good, sensible idea," echoed Brinker. "What's the use of swearing to tell the truth when you don't intend to, anyway, I say? It makes everybody feel uncomfortable."

Collier flushed at the implication, turned toward Brinker to reply, but thought better of it. "Dr. Waters, what, in your opinion, was the cause of the death of the late Professor Dahlstrom?" he inquired.

Dr. Waters answered with professional briskness. "The deceased met his death from a concussion of the brain and from freezing."

"Concussion of the brain and freezing," repeated Collier. "Which came first?"

"The concussion," Dr. Waters replied hesitatingly.

"Is that merely a matter of opinion or have you a reason for answering in those exact words?"

"My examination of the body is quite conclusive in that respect," the doctor replied. "A considerable wound accompanied the fracture of the skull, a wound from which blood flowed freely. At the time I examined the body blood was still flowing slightly from the wound, although it was freezing as fast as it came out."

Eve caught her breath in a sigh that was half a groan. Judge Cavendish reached across the table and patted her hand.

"Is it necessary, Collier, to go into the rather harrowing details of the finding of Professor Dahlstrom?"

"I think it is," retorted Collier.

"The girl might just as well get used to it," supplemented Dayne. "She ain't got no business being here, anyway."

Judge Cavendish started up in protest, but Eve caught his eye and motioned to him to let the matter rest.

"Then," continued Collier, "granting that concussion of the brain preceded freezing, the deceased actually met his death from concussion and not from freezing. Is that so, Dr. Waters?"

"Yes," admitted the doctor, "I suppose that is so."

"That's all I wish to establish, Captain Dayne. Now, Dr. Waters, describe the location of the wound and tell the court how it might have been inflicted."

The doctor looked at Eve to see how she was taking it, and then said, "In my judgment, without having made an absolutely strict surgical examination, the wound which caused Professor Dahlstrom's death, or at least hastened it, was a fracture of the cerebral cavity in the left hemisphere."

"He means on top of the head over the left eye," said Collier, for the benefit of the presiding officer. Turning to Dr. Waters again. "Could such a wound have been self-inflicted?"

"No."

"Then, how it have been caused?"

"Either by a fall against some solid object, such as the corner of a table, or being struck by some sort of weapon."

"Such as a crutch?" suggested Collier.

"I object."

"Yes," answered the doctor, in spite of the objection.

"I must insist, Captain Dayne," continued Judge Cavendish, "that that answer be stricken from the records."

"For cripes sake, don't interrupt all the time," said Dayne, sharply. "How can we find out about this murder if nobody can't answer any question? And how can we strike the answers off the records when we ain't got no records?"

The judge laughed. Most of the others were smiling, too.

"That will be all for the present, Dr. Waters."

"Just a moment, Dr. Waters," Judge Cavendish detained him.

"I shall want to call you again later, but right now I should like to cross-examine you on your reply to one question. You say that the wound which caused Professor Dahlstrom's death might have been inflicted by falling against some solid object?"

"I said it might have been, yes," admitted the doctor, "but the probabilities are against it."

"Why?"

"Because Professor Dahlstrom was seated in a chair and was not near a corner of the table."

"He might have been picked up from the floor and placed in the chair by some one, might he not?"

"Perhaps, but there was blood on the table and none on the floor where he might have lain."

"Did you look on the floor?"

"Yes, I looked on the floor."

"Thank you. I have finished with the witness."

The doctor left the improvised stand.

Collier addressed the court: "My next witness is Miss Eve Dahlstrom. Will you please sit over there dear?"

Eve stiffened a little at his term of address, but moved to the seat vacated by the doctor.

"I'm sorry," said Collier, "that I have to ask you any questions at all, but I will try to be as brief about it as possible. You were actually the first person to enter this room. Will you please describe to the court just what you saw?"

Eve began. "When I entered the room I noticed that my father was lying face downward across the table. He was wounded," she attested, and then went on hurriedly. "He was wounded as Dr. Waters described. Naturally, I was so shocked and concerned that I did not see much of anything else. I recall vaguely that Judge Cavendish was on the other side of the table and that some one else also was in the room."

"With a crutch held upside down in his hand?"

"I don't know," Eve attested, and then added, "Mr. Brinker called our attention to the crutch, but I did not see it at the time."

"And that's all, darling, unless the defense wishes to cross-examine."

"No," decided Judge Cavendish swiftly. "I think we can establish the innocence of our client without forcing Miss Dahlstrom to review any further what must be a harrowing chapter in her life."

"That's all, Eve."

If Collier got the rebuke hidden in Judge Cavendish's refusal to cross-examine, it did not affect him any.

"It seems to me, Captain Dayne," he continued, "that we have established beyond any reasonable doubt that the late Professor Dahlstrom did not die a natural death and that he did not commit suicide or meet with an accident; that he was, in fact, killed by some assailant and that the weapon used was a crutch."

"Captain Dayne," interrupted Judge Cavendish, "the prosecution has not proven that the weapon used was a crutch."

Dayne debated this interruption.

"They may not have proved it, but I think that's what it was," he decided. "The doctor says so."

"But I object to his testimony," the judge reminded him.

"So you did," admitted Dayne, "but it didn't do no good. I heard him anyway. Go on," he nodded to Collier.

"We have proven beyond reasonable doubt that Professor Dahlstrom was killed by having been beaten over the head by a crutch, and I intend to prove likewise that his assailant was the prisoner, Mr. Stephen Hard. I would like to call Mr. Christophe Brinker."

"I am one of the legal representatives of the defendant," Brinker replied.

"That doesn't make any difference. Miss Dahlstrom, who has just testified, is also the sole member of the jury. Truthful answers to the questions that I shall ask you is all that I shall expect. Please take the stand."

Christophe Brinker moved over to the official chair.

"Mr. Brinker," began Collier, "you heard Miss Dahlstrom's description of all she saw upon entering this cabin. You also heard her statement that her father required all of her attention, which obscured her observation of the other characters of the scene. Will you please tell the court any details that you noticed which escaped Miss Dahlstrom's eye?"

Brinker cleared his throat. "I should say that Miss Dahlstrom noticed practically everything."

"She did not mention who the third unconscious man was at the table. You must have seen him. Who was it?"

Brinker nodded in the direction of Stephen Hard. "The prisoner," he said.

"How was he sitting, lying, or standing?"

"He was lying partly on the floor but with one arm over a revolving chair. You remember that."

"It isn't a case of what I remember. You are to talk about what you saw. How was he lying?"

"Face down."

"Near to the deceased?"

"Yes," he attested, "quite near."

"Did you notice anything else peculiar about the prisoner, anything to which you could call attention?"

"Yes, he had a crutch in his hand."

"Which hand?"

"The right."

"Anything noticeable about the way he was holding it?"

"I object," from Cavendish.

"Keep still," admonished Dayne, "this is the part I want to hear."

"Was there anything peculiar about the way he held the crutch?" repeated Collier.

"Yes," replied Brinker. "It was upside down."

"As if it might have been used as a weapon?"

"I don't know. I have never seen a crutch used as a weapon."

"I will put the question another way. If you were going to use a crutch to beat a carpet or to hit anything with, would you hold it by the heavy end or by the light end?"

"By the light end," Brinker admitted uncomfortably.

"That's all."

"The defense waives cross-examination," said Judge Cavendish, and Brinker returned to his seat somewhat flushed and flustered.

Collier called to the stand practically all the other members of the party to verify Brinker's testimony as to the position of the men and the presence of the crutch. From Judge Cavendish he secured the admission by an informal question that Professor Dahlstrom had used the crutch in question which he had made himself because he had sprained his ankle.

"Now, gentlemen," Collier continued his case, "I wish to call your attention to the fact that a considerable quantity of radium carried on this expedition for scientific purposes and entrusted specially to Professor Dahlstrom has disappeared. It will be scarcely necessary to call witnesses to establish this disappearance. We are all cognizant of the facts, and unless someone wishes to establish a doubt we will assume they are true. I mention it at this time, because it is the intention of the prosecution to prove that robbery was one of the motives for this appalling crime. I am quite aware that later the defense will attempt to establish the fact that the prisoner is not an habitual criminal—not a robber at all, in fact—in other words, that this crime is contrary to the customary conduct of the prisoner and a direct contradiction of his characteristic actions. We propose to anticipate that defense and to prove that the prisoner is of a vindictive, revengeful type, that he has been in difficulties with the federal authorities of the United States previous to this time and that he has been known as a trouble maker, an adventurer, and a vagabond for the major part of his life."

Judge Cavendish put his hand on the arm of his client who was growing slightly restive under the taunts of LeRoy Collier and was making little chattering noises with his chains.

"Don't pay any attention to this trick. It is only intended to ruin our morale. This chap, Collier, has listened to a couple of criminal trials back in the states, and thinks he knows just as many legal pretzels and didoes as a regular admitted to the bar juggler. But all he's got is just the words. And the funny thing is that this sort of attack is pretty apt to prove a boomerang. Just sit still, if you can, and let me handle it."

And yet the judge actually did very little to "handle it." Instead he sat placidly by, and permitted Collier to attack Steve right and left, smiling sometimes and taking a few notes on an old envelope, but for the most part not appearing to be paying close attention.

"Miss Dahlstrom!" snapped Collier. "Excuse me, dear, but will you take the stand again?"

She looked appealingly at him, but he insisted. "Only for a few moments," he assured her.

Eve moved to the stand.

"I want you to tell the court when you first met the accused."

Eve frowned in concentration. "It was in October sometime, but I can't remember the exact date."

Quick Relief For Fretful Babies

"My baby was so cross and fretful I couldn't do my housework," writes Mrs. J. H. Warbington, 513 Sunset Ave., Atlanta, Ga. "He was constantly crying and fretting. I gave him Teethina and now he is so different you would hardly know him."

Most babies fretting is due to gas and indigestion, especially at teething time when their food so frequently disagrees with them. Mother, to correct this condition, simply administer a dose or two of Teethina. It is especially prepared to regulate little bowels by gently, yet safely and thoroughly expelling all sour bile from the system.

Teethina soothes a fretful child, inducing rest and refreshing sleep by removing the cause of pain. It contains no opiates or harmful drugs and takes the place of paregoric and dangerous soothing syrups. Physicians and nurses recommend Teethina and all druggists sell it. Price 30c.

Meeting Place of the Puzzle Makers

By Bruce J. Davidson

The easiest way to get around this puzzle (literally and figuratively) would be to cut out the pattern and turn it as you proceed. Rather clever interlocking, don't you think?

Note the necessary variation of the Across and Down headings.

Diagramless, 19x19, by George W. Dorland

Quite large, this one, but interesting all the way through. It's symmetrical and has no unkeyed letters.

The pattern will probably provide almost as many surprises as an unsymmetrical one until you get about half of it done; then of course the rest is easy. Well, not too easy.

Solutions of Last Week's Puzzles

Comedians

By W. E. Hill

(Copyright 1929 By The Chicago Tribune Syndicate.)

Madville: Even such high class musical artists as the brothers MacDoyle, "the college troubadours," are above comic relief now and again. "What's that box I see your sweetie carrying 'round with her 'prin?" asks Eddie after the second chorus. "Oh," she answers, "that isn't no box of pills, that's her costume for the ice man's ball. She's going dressed to present Scotch Hospitality!"

Amateur Stuff. The Agony Centre drama group are giving "Putting Pep in Grandma" in the church parlors and the comedy relief is handled by Mr. Milt Luby who works at the teller's window of the Agony Centre First National bank. Milt plays the part of "Seth Punkinseed in Love with Mandy Perkins, the Hired Gal." Tomorrow the Agony Centre Courier Journal will give Milt a swell write up and say that "his sense of comical situations was both mirth compelling and unctious."

The Band Leader. Meet Heinie Heeney, the leading spirit of "Heinie Heeney's Louisiana Leathernecks." Heinie is very comic and his great sex appeal and his droll way of kidding the boys in the band after each selection make him an ace among band leaders.

The High Brown Revue. Mose, the comic relief of "The Dixie Babies" revue, is about to lapse into a sad song all about a faithless seal brown beauty.

Back Stage. "Hey, what the hell do those dumb bozos think this is, a funeral parlor? I didn't get a laugh today even with the Scotch jokes! This is a terrible town to play to!"

The Nut Comedians. Roscoe Flit and Bates Roach have been drafted from the burlesque circuit and are nut comedians. (A nut comedian is a comedian who can make believe take a flea out of a chorus girl's ear without its having anything to do with the plot lines or lyrics.) This is the first act of the new musical "Hazel" and shows Mrs. Preston Van Sneezers Spanish fete on her estate at Westberry, Long Island. Two gentlemen burglars (played by Messrs Flit and Roach) arrive in the midst of the chorus girls and boys and are mistaken for the Duke of Dishwater and his valet. "I've got a pain in my neck," says the Duke to Mrs. Van Sneezers. "Why don't you have violet ray on it, Duke?" inquires the lady. "Oh lady," says the duke, pushing her in the face. "I never seen the girl even!" and so it goes.

The Movie Comedian. Jumping thirty odd stories into a pot of glue or being carried a mile or more through the air after a dynamite explosion is all the same to Johnnie Jelloid, the comedy star. He'll do anything for his art.

Circus. Jerry, the old clown, is the comic relief of the sawdust arena. When you get tired looking at the bounding Pinellas or the prancing O'Dares it's a great relief to watch Jerry and his tame duck. Jerry has been in the business 40 years.

Our Weekly Meeting

Here we have a contest in which every boy and girl in America can join. It's about the greatest discovery in history, one that gives a thrill every time we read about it. I wonder if Columbus, when he first glimpsed the New World, had any vision of what it would be like five hundred years later. If he could come back to repeat that famous voyage, what wonderment would be in his eyes as he beheld the monuments of progress that would unfold before him as he neared our shores!

Well, members, Columbus Day will soon be here, and that is going to be the subject of our contest for this week. There is plenty of material in this subject for every boy and girl to get an even chance of winning one of the prizes offered. And no matter whether you have tried and failed, don't think that you never will win. Remember the old advice—"Try, try again." You're just bound to win, if you keep at it, but if you stop, of course your chances stop also. Remember that every boy and girl who reads this page is entitled to join our club and take part in these contests. If anyone happens to be reading this for the first time, we suggest that you fill out the membership blank at once and send it in, so that we may send you your membership certificate and a club button, and then you are eligible to participate in these contests. Don't wait. Do it now.

We will now present the lucky letters for this week, which win for their writers an autographed book of our earlier adventures down on the river bank. The first one is from a boy in Old Kentucky:

Dear Seck:
I have been a member of your club for exactly five weeks now, and every Saturday I listen to your interesting stories over the radio. I enjoy them very much.
When I sent my membership coupon in, I also sent in a composition entitled "My Lucky Day." It was my lucky day sure enough when two weeks later, I saw that I had won third prize! And now I try again, this time to win a book.
That prize letter brought me a letter from a member in Cincinnati. That gave me an inspiration, and now I have four "Pen Pals"—thanks to your club. I would be glad to correspond with any other members of my age.
Hoping Bill will get over his fever, and you and the boys down on the old river bank will solve the mystery of the old mill, I am,
Yours, fair and square,
BILLY HUBBELL, (13)
330 Lafayette Ave., Lexington, Ky.

PASSWORD TO THE NEW WORLD

Last week our password was easy, the birthday of the United States—"July Fourth."

Now, this week we are going to give you another easy one—it was the password to the new world. Our country is a wonderful place, and we know that many people in other countries come to America to see its wonders and its grandeur.

Two foreigners were on a ship bound from Spain to America. They were talking about the old days, and the time when it was much dangerous to cross the ocean in old-time ships, and took much longer to cross than it does today. One of the men said he had crossed many times and it was nothing new to him. He said:

"NOT NEW, YET FINE TOUR"

There's the password, hidden in those five words. Change all the letters around to three words, and you will have the year in which a great discovery was made. In fact, it was the password to the new world. If that isn't easy, I don't know what is. Now take a pencil and paper and try it.

Next we have a communication from a little girl member in the Empire State of the South:

Dear Seck:
I would like to be a member of your club very much. I am sending a membership blank so I can join. Our little rat-terriers are so playful and cute. We have given all of them away except one, that one is mine. I wish I could keep him, but Daddy has promised to give him to a man in town.
We have two clubs, one of them is for school, the other one meets on Sunday. I am the Seckatary of both Clubs. I keep our adventures down in a book, too. I have a book and a half full of adventures. We have a fine time, but we never could have as good a time as you and the fellows do on the dear old river bank.
I am so glad you found Daddy Joe, and I'm glad, too, that he went back to England with little Gil. I know old Daddy Joe would have missed little Gil and little Gil would have missed old Daddy Joe too.

I will close now, because my letter is already long. I close, hoping to have a lucky day soon.

Yours, fair and square,
HARRIETTE BALDWIN WILSON,
R. F. D. No. 2, Madison, Ga.

And here we have an interesting letter from a little member in Alabama:

Dear Seck:
I am a little boy six years old. I went to school last year and made my grade. I surely did like my teacher. I tried to be "fair and square" in everything; and Seck, that's hard to do when you are as small as I am. Lots of times I'd want all the toys, but I'd think of your motto and then I could give them up cheerfully.
I have lots of pets. Among them are: two Persian kittens, two bantam chickens and a dog. I love all of them very much.
I am enclosing a two-cent stamp to get my badge, for I want to belong to your club. I have often wanted to get my sister to write to you, but this is the first time I ever had courage enough to get her to. My sister, Seck, you'd just love her; she's a mighty fine old sister to have.
I'd like to win one of your books, but even if I don't win one with this letter, I'm going to try again.

Yours, fair and square,
DEWEY MCKINNON,
Talladega Springs, Ala.

From one of our West Virginia boys comes this interesting and neatly written sketch:

Dear Seck:
I am writing you this story to see if I can win a book of your adventures. I listen in on your program each Saturday and also read your adventures in the paper. My story follows:

This is Station WLW. We will now give you the adventures of Seck, Hawkins and his club.
Over the air comes: "The gang is having a fine time down on the river bank."
"Spot! Spot! Smash!" And then the voice stops. Something is wrong!
I run to the phone, pick up the receiver—"Central! Central! Give me the radio shop right quick!"
Finally I was connected with the shop and over the wire came: "This is the Radio Shop."

"This is Kenneth Cooper on Camden Terrace talking, please send a man out to fix our radio as I can't miss a program that is on."
"I'm sorry," the voice said. "But the radio man is out."
"Thank you," I said, and then I hung up. I then sat down and wrote you the letter telling of my experience that day. So please write and send me a book.
Yours, fair and square,
KENNETH COOPER,
Camden Terrace, Parkersburg, W. Va.

HOW TO JOIN THE CLUB.

Every boy and girl who reads Seckatary Hawkins is invited to become a member of his famous club. It is a very big club and already has members in every state in the Union, as well as Canada, and many foreign countries.

Fill out the membership blank at the bottom of this page. Write plainly. If you want a club badge be sure to enclose a two-cent stamp with your membership blank, and it will be mailed to you within a few days. No matter where you live, you can be a member of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. No matter how old you are—just fill out the membership blank and join.

You may enclose your letter for the contest in the same envelope if you wish. Be sure to fill out every line in the membership blank; and write plainly.

And so we come again to the time of adjournment, but we will be with you again on this page next Sunday. The books awarded to the members whose letters appear this week will go out at once. Radio meeting from Station WLW Saturday evening at 5 o'clock, eastern time, so tune in and attend it. Don't forget that every member has a chance, and letter writing is good training. So sit down and try for the contest, and send in your contribution with a letter telling all about yourself. That will be all for this time.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

Read the Rules Carefully

In this week's contest the title must contain the word "COLUMBUS Day." You may write a letter or story or verse. Write on one side of paper only. Your composition must be written without any assistance from older persons. All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. The contest will close Thursday. Prize winners will be announced October 6.

PRIZE: A SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOK

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

IN THE SECKATARY'S MAIL BOX

Dear Seck:

I have just got back from a visit to the country. I sure did have a nice time. I have written you before, but none of my letters received a look of your adventures, which I want so much. "Daddy" said he would buy me a bookcase if I win a Seckatary Hawkins book to go in it and I could make a library of my room.

Seck, please print my letter so as some little girl will write me. Tell the club I said "Hello."

Yours, fair and square,
ADDIE BLEDSOE,
Iron City, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Will you please take me in. I wish to be a member of your club. I am a girl of eleven, am promoted to the seventh grade. I have a pet kitty name Lincoln. I am sending a two-cent stamp for my club badge. Tell all the members to write me. I will try to ans. all letters.

Yours, fair and square,
DORIS ELYTHE,
Buena Vista, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am in the third grade at school. I have never written before. I like your motto, "Fair and Square." I like your colors, white and blue. I am 8 years old. I would like to be here from all of the little girls in this club.

Yours, fair and square,
INEZ MCGILVERAY,
22 Kendrick St., Sumter, S. C.

SECK'S BIRTHDAY.

I've been reading "Stoner's Rev." And Seckatary, wasn't he cool? To slip and get away from you! An awfully funny boy!

I was thinking last night how he got away when suddenly I dropped off to sleep. And Seck, I dreamed it was your birthday! And Stoner was around to peep. At the wonderful things you had to eat. The cream, the cake and the tarts. And an idea formed in his mind so bad. He grabs up the tarts and into the bushes quickly darts.

"After him!" I heard your captain yell! And after him you went, better shell! But he got away from you, of course, And I heard his laugh, so taunting and hoarse.

Then you all went in and took a seat. While the thief in the woods began to eat. These beautiful tarts that he had stole. So very craftily and so very bold.

Then his stomach began aching. And he felt like he shouldn't have taken These tarts from your party so grand. And then he found he could hardly stand. He looked at the clubhouse and, knowing you were fair and square.

He got up quickly and ran over there. He knocked at the door, and you let him in. He laid on your cot and peered out his sin.

Those awful tarts that I ate. Gave me a dreadful tummy ache! You got him well, and then with a snuff. Turned him over to the big sheriff.

THE BIRTHDAY OF A NATION.

BY W. MARION PAGE—Age 12
1414 Forest Ave., Columbus, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I hope you'll except a letter from a little girl 10 years old and in the High Fifth grade. My birthday is Sept. 8th.

I love to read your adventures. I wish I could have as many exciting things happen to me as you have.

My school starts tomorrow. I don't mind going when I get started, but the trouble is getting started.

I guess I'll say Bye-Bye until another time.

Yours, fair and square,
ANNIE RUTH JORDAN,
1118 Mansfield Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have just joined your club a few weeks ago and I want to tell you that I like it very much. Our school starts the twenty-third of Sept. I'm glad. I think the best part of school is the opening and the closing. I live in Charleston, S. C., the most historic city in United States. There are many interesting buildings and places here. I wish you could come to visit sometimes.

Yours, fair and square,
NORMA MAZO,
211 King St., Charleston, S. C.

Hello Seck:

I've just finished reading your club and adventures. I sure do wish I was there with you at the river bank. I bet you having a fine time. School is start Wednesday. If you can, send me a picture of you and Link if you will. I will send you a framed picture of myself. Now I will tell you about my pets. I have a pretty white dog, (bird dog) with one black eye. A pretty white and black spotted cat.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY ELIZABETH,
13 Baire, Chicago, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have just finished reading one of your stories. It sure was great. I have tried since before to win a book but never succeeded. My motto is try again. I've been a club member for three months. I never miss you in the Sunday paper. I am thirteen, and in the seventh grade. I love your club colors and motto. I wish I was on the river bank with you. I am sure we would have a nice time.

Yours, fair and square,
LENA MAE HULSEY,
Stone Mountain, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Well, my vacation is over and I am going home to go back to school. I certainly will be glad, cause I love to go to school. I certainly have had a nice time up here. I've been to all the places of interest and I certainly did enjoy them.

Go, but it sure is hot today. I'm almost about to melt. Oh, dear! I'd better not melt or Seck will be minus one Junior.

Listen, I want all the Juniors to write to me and I promise a quick reply. (I'm as good as my word.)

Seck, please print this as I want some Juniors to write to me.

If you ever take a vacation I hope you come to Norfolk, Va. I'm inviting you and this invitation remains forever.

This is station MEK signing off at dinner time.

A true Junior
MARY EVELYN KELLY,
126 W. Berkeley Ave., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Seck:

I am a little boy 7 years old and in the 2nd grade. I wish to be a member of your club. I am sending a membership blank and a two cent stamp for my club badge. Tell the other club members to write me and I will answer every letter I receive.

Yours, fair and square,
ALTON SPIN,
Fairfax, Ala.

Dear Seck:

I guess you think I have resigned from your club but I haven't. Our school started last Monday. I sure was glad. I'm in Jr. III. I like my Seck Hawkins pin and I wear it all the time. I'm trying very hard to win a book.

Yours, fair and square,
DORIS WALLACE,
Fulton, Ala.

Dear Seck:

This is my first letter. I am ten years old, and in the sixth grade at school. I read your page every Sunday and enjoy it very much. For pets I have 2 goats, 1 duck, 18 chickens.

Yours, fair and square,
ELEANOR CUSTER,
Montrose, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have seen your page often, but I just read it for the first time today. Our school won't open until our new building is ready, that may not be until Oct. I will be in the tenth grade. I play basketball and I am on the team. We sure do have a good time. We aren't so fine, but we have a grand time and play fair and square.

From the letters I have read I see that you all like to read. I do too. I also like the movies and go to see all I can.

I like the little letters written in poetry. Wish I could write like that. I am just an ordinary American girl. But I am a real toady.

Hope all of you enjoyed your vacation as much as I did mine. I read the best book. It was "The Circular Staircase." It had lots of adventure and mystery in it. But every thing turned out fine.

A new member,
MIRIAM SAMUEL,
Thomson, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I've never written one single time. And my very first letter shall be a ryma. I think your stories are very good. I believe I'd write if I could.

I'll answer all letters written to me. The question is who will write, you see. And while other letters you are looking through.

Please take a peep at this one too.

Yours, fair and square,
LILLIAN LAWHORNE,
Shiloh, Ga.

Dear Seck:

School is here at last. It is time to put all play aside and study. I have just finished "Follyanna the Glad Book." It sure is fine. I will try my luck again and I hope it will bring a book. I sure want a book to read. Please print this letter.

Yours, fair and square,
MARION RANCHEY,
Barwick, Ga.

THE ADVENTURES OF SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS CLUB

BARGAIN BUSINESS

Something funny was going on around our old river bank. Jeckerson was known as the famous detective from Watertown. He never fooled around a place unless he had good reason. We boys had known him in a number of mysteries around our old river bank, and we knew that when Jeckerson showed up, there would be something doing very shortly. Yesterday he had asked us to keep our eyes on the red and green mansion. He had offered us half of one thousand dollars if we would do this and find something out about the red and green mansion—

Why? That's what we boys all wanted to know. The red and green mansion was formerly the home of the Englishman, Sir Eustace, who had taken one of our members, Little Gil, and his hobo daddy back to England. Hardly had the house been vacated, when in moves a new tenant. The real estate man said the new tenant was a man who had been wanting the house long before Sir Eustace and his English household had given it up. Again, why? Why did this newcomer want the red and green mansion so anxiously?

"There's a mystery in it!" announced Jerry Moore, today, as we held our meeting after school.

"You're a wise cucumber!" snapped our captain. "Of course, there's a mystery in it—more than one, maybe. Since you've decided there's a mystery in it, perhaps you're smart enough to figure it out for us—"

"Who's doin' the figurin' out stuff?" asked Shadow Loomis, as he looked at our captain with blazing eyes. "And who's gettin' the reward? Seems like everytime anybody's done any figurin' out business, it's been Hawkins. And everytime, he's divided up the reward with the whole club, no matter whether any of the other boys helped or not—"

"That's only fair and square, Shad," I spoke up, nodding to him with a smile. "This is a club, you see. I enjoy your company. Every boy's, in fact. More than that, you boys help me figure out a lot of things. I don't believe I could get very far, for instance, if it were not for your spy work, Shadow. And there's Johnny McFarren, over there. And Perry Stokes. You boys have been very valuable help to me. Even Jerry Moore and Roy Dobel have given me much help. And poor old Bill Darby, who is now lying sick in bed, he has done his share. Every boy in the club has, for that matter. Dick is our captain—I know he's got a tough job, keeping us all in harmony all the time. It's no cinch to be a captain. And so on. Well, taking it by and large, all in all, I think that every boy in this club does his share of the work, no matter what we are doing. We couldn't figure out all these mysteries or make any rewards unless we did stick together, as we have done these years, playing fair and square, doing the right thing or nothing, no matter what. So you see, it's only fair and square to say that no matter what rewards we get, they should be divided up equally among the members of this club."

"Listen, fellows," said our captain, "I think it's about time some of us boys were thanking Hawkins for what he's done for us. Whatever rewards we have won in the last three years, Hawkins has been the boy who has done the figurin' out business that made Detective Jeckerson take a liking to all of us. And we earned a lot of money, and each boy today has a neat bank account to start out on. Only one thing made us that lucky—"

"All right! Let's talk about how we can earn more money!" spoke up Shadow Loomis. "Jeckerson told us to keep our eyes on the red and green mansion. There's five hundred dollars in it for us—not quite as big as a reward as we have earned in the past—but you know the old saying: 'Every little bit added to what you got makes just a little bit more.' And I aim to go to a university when I'm a little older, so I want to earn every nickel that I can before that time."

"Aw, shucks!" exclaimed Jerry Moore. "I don't want to promise myself no more schoolin' when I git done with the one I'm in now. I don't crave schoolin' that bad, Shadow."

"But you could stand a lot of it, Jerry," laughed Shadow, "and maybe even then you wouldn't get enough. No, maybe you won't waste your money on schooling, Jerry, but in that case you'll perhaps need money a lot more than the boys who are lucky enough to go on with their studies. So, you see, you'd better be keeping your eyes on the red and green mansion—"

"Who says I won't?" demanded Jerry, holding out his hands. "I'm goin' to, ain't I? Only, before we go too far with this bargain business—"

"What bargain business?" demanded our captain, as he slammed the table with his wooden hammer. "Who's been doing any bargain business for our club?"

"Well, Hawkins has!" exclaimed Jerry, looking at me. "You fellows were along when we met Jeckerson up at the red and green mansion yesterday. You heard Hawkins tell him that we would do the job for five hundred dollars—"

"That does seem a small amount," spoke up Johnny McFarren, "after all the big rewards we have got, so far."

"Sure!" exclaimed Jerry. "Just what I was sayin'—we boys are worth more than that!"

"Of course," added Johnny, nodding at Jerry, with a wise smile. "Just think of us giving our help in a big job for five hundred dollars. When it's divided up among all of us, what have we got? I ask you, what have we got?"

This made Shadow Loomis angry. I could see the lightning in his eyes as he quickly got to his feet and gazed at Johnny.

"Look here, you, Johnny!" he snapped. "You've got big ideas in your head and I'd give you credit for 'em if you had sense enough to carry 'em out. But you haven't. Neither you nor Jerry. You're both a lot of hot air, if you want my opinion. Fine talk, you give us, about the reward not being big enough. You've been so used to getting something for nothing you're always expecting more, when you ought to be thankful for what you've got, because you've not earned any of it."

"Hold on!" broke in our captain. "I think every boy does his share in this club, Shadow—"

"I do, too," answered Shadow, angrily, "and I think every boy ought to get just as much as his share amounts to. Always we've been dividing up the rewards, fair and square, same amount to every boy in this club. Not that I don't think that's right. I do think so, but I don't think any boy's got a right to kick about how much we're going to get for another job. If we weren't Judge Granbery's junior police, we'd never had a chance to earn any money. And if we didn't have Seckatary Hawkins with us, Judge Granbery'd never let any of us do anything, much less be his junior police. It's been Hawkins all the time who's figured out everything around here—and the whole club's got in on

"Now, wait, Shadow!" I said. "That's not just fair to me. Nor to you, either. Nor to any boy in this club. We've all stuck together, haven't we? True blue, fair and square to one another, haven't we? Well, that's all it amounts to. It isn't the money we've made since we started our club. Every boy has as much money in the bank as the other, and we're all satisfied and happy about it, aren't we? Well, now isn't the time to start a quarrel among ourselves. That's the way all clubs break up. Why do you think our club is so famous all over the world? Why have they heard about us and read about us in the papers, and liked us? Why? I'll tell you, fellows, it's because we know how to stick together, and never quarrel enough to bust up our club. We stick together. I want you boys to be proud of that. And if you will be proud of that, boys, we won't quarrel any more, and then, by Jinks! I'll be proud of you! Proud to say I belong to a club like this. Proud to say I'm the ol' seckatary, proud to write down the minutes of the meetings and the live-long day. And you boys know—surely, you do know, I'm proud of it—and you."

I held out my hands to them, as I slowly turned from one face to another. But they sat silent, speechless, spellbound while the earnest meaning of my words went home. And then they arose in a group, each trying his best to reach me first, to tell me that they knew I was proud of them, that they looked to me to guide them in this new adventure, that they would do their best to put it over, and that they didn't care if we earned one cent for doing it.

Their demonstration made me think. All that night, while I lay restlessly tossing upon my pillow, it was on my mind, and I could not go to sleep as quickly as I usually do. No, sir! Those boys had shown me how loyal they were to me. How they trusted me, and how they were willing to do anything I said, so long as it kept our reputation for being fair and square, sticking together, doing the right thing always or nothing. Now I must be loyal to them, too. I could talk to them as I thought they deserved; but nobody else must be allowed to take advantage of my boys if I could prevent it. And since they had placed their trust in me, I felt it was my duty to go and see Jeckerson about something.

I took the bus right after school next day. Jeckerson was not in his office at Watertown when I arrived. I sat in his office fifteen minutes before he showed up.

"Well," he said, sharply. "Have you something to tell me? About the empty red and green house?"

"No," I said, shaking my head. "Haven't had time for that, yet. Just came to talk things over, like."

Jeckerson chuckled as he turned and sat down in the chair at his desk. "Well," he said, "we've got some problem on our hands, eh Hawkins?"

"Eh is right!" I snapped. "You don't need to say 'eh Hawkins.' Eh anybody. Before we go any further in this empty house business, I've got to know what's in it—"

"Nothing's in it! It's empty!"

"I know it's empty! But what's behind it?"

"The yard, I think, and a garden—"

"No, no! What's the secret? Why do we have to keep our eyes on the empty house, Jeckerson?"

"Well, for the love of Mike! You don't think, if I knew the secret, I'd pay you kids five hundred dollars for keeping your eyes on it, do you?"

"Will you do that?" I asked quickly.

"Of course," answered Jeckerson, looking at me with surprise.

"Fine," I said, "that makes a thousand—the boys won't be kicking any more now about how little the reward is—"

"What do you mean?" demanded Jeckerson, suddenly.

"I mean we get a thousand dollars, if we help you find the secret of the empty house—"

"No, you're wrong, only five hundred—"

"But you said you'd give us five hundred, Jeckerson—"

"I know I did—"

"And that real estate man who rented the house, he said he'd give us five hundred—"

"Hold on," said Jeckerson, suddenly. "He said he'd give a thousand, I said I'd give you half—"

"Yeah, and just a little while ago you said YOU would give us five hundred. That makes a thousand, Jeckerson, for our club—we need the money, too, believe me, and I thank you, not only for myself from the bottom of my heart, but for the other boys. They'll think you're a prince for raising their salary."

Jeckerson looked at me for a long time with a smile upon his rugged face.

"All right," he said, finally, still smiling at me, "you win! Hawkins, those boys down in that clubhouse ought to pay you a commission—"

"Never mind," I said, softly, as I reached up and took his big brown hand. "Perhaps they do, Jeckerson. They pay me many ways—much more than I'm worth, really. Everything is not money, you know. I don't care a rap what I'd get out of this job—I'd split it up with 'em, anyway. But I want them to be satisfied, contented, you see. I want them to work hard and win—to stick together always, and give you everything they've got to put this job over for you."

Jeckerson looked at me for a moment without speaking. But I stared him in the eye. Then he laughed softly, and leaning over his desk, he laid his big hand upon mine.

"Hawkins," he said, softly, "you know it was YOU that I was depending upon. I don't expect anything from those other kids up in your clubhouse. You are the one who can get those kids to do spy duty and imagine they are Judge Granbery's junior police. Spy work is what we will need mostly now, Hawkins. Of course you will do a lot of spy work yourself—you always do, but that kid you call Shadow Loomis—he's valuable to you. He's one I'm depending on, too. I know I couldn't get him to do anything for me. But for you, Hawkins, that kid would go the limit."

"I know," I said, nodding. "He always has. And I would do the same for him, fair and square."

"Well, I have no holes in my head either, if that's what you mean. So, I'm willing to do this. If I can solve a mystery in that old red and green mansion—I mean if there is a mystery in that empty house, and you help me solve it, Hawkins—well, I'm just vain enough to give you an additional five hundred dollars, that's all. If it turns out as I believe it will—"

"What do you mean by that, Jeckerson?"

Jeckerson shrugged his shoulders and gave a quick twist of his tawny head.

"Well," he said, "I have my ideas about things. I have my ways of making money. I'm gay this, Hawkins, if everything turns out as I have suspected, you boys will get more than five hundred dollars—aye, more than a thousand, I promise you."

"That's the stuff!" I exclaimed. "We don't care how much the reward is, Jeckerson, just so it isn't only five hundred. You see, the boys held a meeting—some of them talked about a measly five hundred dollars—"

"You're raising the price of your services, eh?"

"Call it what you like—I've got to look out for the club. What they want, Jeckerson, I've got to get. I'm their seckatary, and I know my work when I see it."

"Good boy!" exclaimed Jeckerson, as he rose to his feet and patted my shoulder. "It's settled then. We understand each other. How're you going back?"

"By bus," I told him, "as I came."

"Not by a jugfull!" he exclaimed. "I like to drive that new car of mine. And I'll just take you home in it."

Together we walked outside and entered the beautiful green car that he had just recently bought. We got in and Jeckerson took hold of the wheel.

"Watch me!" he said, softly. "I'm a real driver now, Seck. Next thing you hear about me, I'll be a race track speeder. And can this bus go! Ask me!"

Before I had time to ask him anything, he had put his foot upon the starter and the next moment we shot forward so suddenly that my head was nearly jerked off my neck.

"Don't get scared, Seck!" he yelled to me as we shot down the road. "I've got the wheel."

"My daddy always tells me to be careful of the nut on the wheel," I said to him, as we sped along at a rapid rate.

"Ha! Nut, eh?"

"Yeah, nut eh?"

"Yeah? Well, he should see me drive once, and he'd keep still forever after. I'm the champion driver of motor cars in this little burg of Watertown, Hawkins. I'm a member of Never-Beaten Class, I am. Ever since I got this car, I made up my mind I'd show up a lot of poor thoughtless drivers in this town. It's gettin' so you can't trust 'em anymore—they're always forgetting this or that—"

"Look out!" I yelled.

Jeckerson put both feet down hard, as he pulled the wheel to the right and swerved close to the curb.

"Nearly hit that old geezer," he remarked to himself, as an elderly man turned to shake a fist at us. "Dug gone it, no wonder so many of 'em get hit. It's their own fault—"

"They're older'n you," I told him. "You ought to be on the look out for those that haven't got sense enough to look out for themselves."

"Sound head on your shoulders—"

"Watch out!" I yelled—"there's a red light!"

"Yeah, I see it—but the brakes won't hold!"

"Well, you might as well go through now. No cops in sight anyway."

"Thank goodness for that!" exclaimed Jeckerson fervently, as he put his foot down on the gas and settled himself for a nice, long, comfortable spin along the highway that stretched ahead of us without a car in sight.

"Hello, what's wrong now?"

"Well, what is?" I asked.

The car slowed up and stopped.

"Jehosaphat! I'm out o' gas."

That settled me. And all his blowing about how good a driver he was, too!

"We've got to walk back to the next gas station and get some," he said with a grin.

Which we did.
